

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

INTRODUCTION.

An Historical Memoir of Billerica, published by John Farmer, in the year 1816, was, perhaps, the earliest history of a Massachusetts town independently printed and published. It is a pamphlet of 36 pages, printed at Amherst, N. H. Its intrinsic excellence and the subsequent fame of its author have given it celebrity as a rare treasure of local history, and it has recently been reprinted.

The need of a fuller history has been felt, and, as early as 1809, the town appointed the Committee under whose auspices this volume has been prepared. This Committee consisted of Gardner Parker, Esq., Dudley Foster, the Hon. Thomas Talbot, and the Rev. Christopher C. Hussey. For some years this Committee failed to secure any arrangement for the prosecution of the work. In 1877, much to his own surprise, a fifth member was added to this Committee. Had he foreseen some of the consequences, he would have hesitated to accept the honor; but, with a hearty interest in the object proposed, he was not unwilling to aid, if he could, in its furtherance. The steps by which the result has been reached are not of consequence to the public; but the result is that he must accept the responsibility of the volume here offered to the town and the public, and, dropping the third person, will add a few explanatory words.

No single volume can so fully and adequately describe the life of a town, that there will not remain ample materials for other volumes, which may have equal reason for their being. This is true of Billerica. The records alone would furnish volumes, which should be printed; and, beyond these sources, are exhaustless stores of memory and tradition, fact and fancy, which would enrich the pages of a recorder who could glean diligently and sift judiciously. Not a native, or long a resident, of the town, I have done my work at some disadvantage in this direction, and many will seek here for details which they will not find. My aim has been to go back to the beginning, to lift the veil from a past which has been almost forgotten, and to trace the foundations on which the modern superstructure is reared. The later history, for the last hundred years, is more accessible and familiar, and I have not intended to traverse it with much detail. The limitations of this volume would not allow similar and adequate fulness in both the earlier and later periods, and it has seemed to me due to the fathers, that our first effort be to recover and record the story of their ploughing and seed-sowing, of which our modern life, since 1760, is only the fruit.

I have drawn the materials for these ^{pages} chiefly from the records, and from other original and hitherto unpublished sources. With more time to explore and digest the very copious material, I could have satisfied my own ideal much more fully; but the opportunity is wanting, and such as it is, I submit the volume to the use and charitable judgment of that large and increasing number who are interested in our local New England history and genealogy.

The separate paging of the Genealogical Register is due to the fact that it was first completed and printed, and the families being arranged alphabetically, the paging is in that part not important. If the question arises why any family, now resident in town, is not recorded in the Register, the answer is, that the record was not furnished. At two town meetings, and on other occasions, citizens were invited to furnish their family record for this use, and none which were furnished are omitted.

For encouragement and aid in the work, thanks are due to friends more numerous than I can mention. Many, not named, are not forgotten, if I refer to a few, whom it were unpardonable to omit. The kindness and co-operation of each member of the Historical Committee have been constant and unstinted, and I record it here most gratefully; while to Mr. Foster and his good wife (whose recent death makes their pleasant home desolate), I am specially indebted for the lists of town officers, and for the useful alphabetical copy, made by them, of the Baptisms found in the records of the First Church. Mr. Franklin Jaquith copied the inscriptions in the South Burying Ground, and those in the Old Corner Burying Ground were as kindly copied by Mrs. Holt. Mr. Jaquith also prepared with great care the list of soldiers from Billerica in the late war. Dr. C. E. Hosmer rendered important aid in preparing the Map of Ancient Billerica. The use of valuable surveys and papers has been generously granted by Mrs. Samuel Sage, Mr. Leander Crosby, Mr. Merton Simonds, of Bedford, Peter E. Vose, Esq., of Dennysville, Me., and the Rev. Henry M. Dexter, D. D., of New Bedford. Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Cutler, of Bedford, have most kindly given me every opportunity to use the invaluable Lane Papers in their possession. The Hon. Samuel A. Green, M. D., Mayor of Boston, has not only given free access to the library of the Massachusetts Historical Society, but, by constant and valuable suggestions, aided me very materially; and Mr. John Ward Dean, of the New England Historic, Genealogical Society, has been not less helpful. The Congregational Library, rich in local history and genealogy, has been always at my service, while to Miss Mary E. Stone, its assistant librarian, especial thanks are due, for invaluable aid, most cheerfully rendered, in reading proof of many of these pages. In my researches among the Massachusetts Archives in the Secretary of State's office, the aid of Dr. Edward Strong has been of great service; and thanks are due to Mr. David Pulsifer, of the same office. Others, who should be named in the same spirit, are, Mrs. Bennett and Mr. W. W. Warren, Dr. Augustus Whiting, of Charlestown, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Faulkner, Mr. C. H. Hill, Mr. E. J. Hill and Dr. F. V. Noyes; and the volume might have an appropriate dedication to the memory of Capt. Charles A. Ranlett, to whose historic interest much was due in the inception of the enterprise.

In closing, I may be permitted to record the satisfaction which I have found in the researches and labors which this work has involved. My experience in such inquiries was limited; if it had been greater I should scarcely have consented to accept the responsibility of the undertaking. But it is only the truth to say, that it has largely been a labor of love, giving its own constant reward. I have learned to honor the founders of this town, and the generations which have builded upon their foundations. If this volume shall aid to any extent in setting their work and memory in clearer light, and securing a more just appreciation of their toils and sacrifices, I shall be content. At the same time I have more faith in the assurance that the former days were not better than these, but that there has been substantial progress. The candid and careful student of the ancient records can reach no other conclusion. The golden age is not in the past.

HISTORY OF BILLERICA.

CHAPTER I.

EARLY GRANTS—SHAWSHIN.

THE Pilgrims came to Plymouth in the year 1620. Dover and Portsmouth were occupied in 1623. Then five years passed, and Endecott, with the first Puritan company, arrived at Naumkeak and laid the foundations of Salem. In 1629 the charter of Massachusetts was granted by King Charles, and other settlers occupied Weymouth, Mishawum (or Charlestown), and Saugust (or Lynn). The arrivals in 1630 were more numerous, fourteen 'sail' and fifteen hundred passengers, with Winthrop and Dudley among them. Some of the Charlestown people moved across the Charles river to Shawmut, or Trimountain, where, for some years, a solitary Episcopal clergyman named Blackstone had been living a hermit life, and thus Boston was born. Mattapan (or Dorchester), Roxbury, Watertown and Medford were occupied the same year. Connecticut was chartered in 1631, and Newtown was occupied with the intention of fortifying and making it the chief town of the colony. Governor Winthrop and Assistant-Governor Dudley began to build there, but Winthrop and some others becoming dissatisfied or convinced that it was an error to leave Boston, returned, and the early rivalry between Cambridge and Boston resulted in favor of the latter town. The year 1633 was memorable for the coming of John Cotton, the eminent divine and friend of Cromwell, who brought the name of his own English Boston, and gave it new fame by supplanting the Indian name Shawmut. Thomas Hooker and his company also arrived that year and settled in Newtown; but after three years, finding that they had not room enough, removed to Hartford. Agawam (or Ipswich) and Hingham were also settled. With 1635, Newbury was occupied, and the first plantations were made inland, at Musketaquid (Concord), and Springfield; and there followed Dedham, in 1636; Sudbury, in 1637; Enon (or Wenham), Gloucester and Rowley, in 1639; Salisbury, Lynn Village (Reading), Woburn and Braintree, in 1640; Pentucket (Haverhill), and Nantasket (Hull), in 1641; Topsfield, in 1642; Bradford and Cochichawick (Andover), in 1643; and Nashaway (Lancaster), and Malden, in 1648. In twenty years the Massachusetts Colony had planted thirty-one towns, not including Dover, Portsmouth, Hampton and Exeter, now in New Hampshire, but then in her jurisdiction. The Plymouth Colony in 1648 numbered seven towns; Connecticut, fifteen; Rhode Island, four; and in Maine there were three: York, Saco and Wells. In all New England there were sixty-four towns at this time.

The desire of the early colonists for ample room in their settlements was natural. They came from a country where landed possessions were largely the basis of wealth and rank. They were laying foundations here and looking to the future with large views and large faith, and the opportunity naturally awakened the purpose to endow their children with acres enough upon which to build a prosperous future. So with Boston on one side, and Watertown on the other, Hooker and his company felt themselves straightened in Newtown, and removed to the inviting meadows of the Connecticut; and Charlestown, Lynn and Ipswich were soon seeking for room to expand. Reading and Woburn grew up the children of these parent towns, and Billerica drew her first life from Cambridge, which Newtown had become with the planting of Harvard College there.

The first pulsation of the life of Billerica may be found in a record of the General Court, 1635-6, 3 March. The Goun^r, Deputy Goun^r, and John Winthrop, Sen^r. Esq^r, or any two of them, are intreated to vewe Shaweshin and soe to informe the next Genall Court whither or noe it may not be a fitt place for a plantacon." Concord had been occupied the previous year, and the vicinity would naturally receive new attention. This governor was Mr. John Haynes who removed in October of the same year with Mr. Hooker's company to Hartford, and became the first governor of Connecticut. Mr. John Winthrop was the eminent first governor of Massachusetts. The removal of Mr. Haynes may have interfered with his exploring Shawshin; and there is no evidence that the next General Court received the information desired. But we may infer that Mr. Winthrop did not personally neglect it, and we soon find him receiving an important grant³ here.

About this time the name of Shawshin is heard in England. Mathew Cradock was the first governor of the Massachusetts company, and invested his wealth very freely for the promotion of the colony. He was the founder of Medford, and Winthrop succeeded him in office when the colony was sufficiently developed to need a resident governor. In a letter to Governor Winthrop, bearing date 1636, Sept. 13, he adds a postscript, afterwards cancelled, as follows:¹

"SIR: I have a purpose to apply myself to tyllidge & increasing my stock of Cattel. & having had recourse to a plase caled Shawe Shynn, where I hear none comes but myselfe, I desire your flauour, when the Court Shalbee moved in my behalfe. that I may have 2000 Acres there allotted to me where I shall find it most convenient for mee. I know the orders made heere i: Courte allowe me maney thousand acres more than I intend to demand or looke after. This my suite I hope will give offence to none, & when I shall putt up a tenement & a dame, as I have herewith given order thereabout. I hope in a short time others will ffollowe. if once a good minister be plased there. and I am persuaded the more English Corne is cherised the better it will be for the whole plantacon. I once more take my leave & Rest."

"Yours. MATHEW CRADOCK."

For some reason Mr. Cradock did not pursue the matter, and the settlement of Shawshin was perhaps delayed by this failure. Possibly Cambridge was already on the outlook for the grant subsequently made to that town. A year passed and the Court moves again in August, 1637. "Cap^t Jeanison & Leif^t Willi: Spencer were appointed to veiwe Shawshin & to consider whether it be fit for a plantation." Still no report; but three months later, 2 November, the Court makes a large grant of land which fell within the bounds and bore important relations to the settlement of Shawshin. "The Deputy. M^r Dudley, hath a thousand acres granted him wheare it may not piudice any plantation granted, nor any plantation to bee granted wthout limiting to time of impv^t." "The Governo^r M^r John Winthrope, Senior, hath graunted him a thousand acres of land upon the same tearms as M^r Dudley hath his." This grant was enlarged and located 1638, May 2d, as follows:—

"It was ordered by this p^rsent Coart that John Winthrope, Esq^r, the p^rsent Governo^r, shall have 1200 acres of land whereof 1000 was formerly granted him, & Thomas Dudley, Esq^r, the Deputy Governo^r, his 1000 acres granted to him by a former Courte, both of them about 6 miles from Concord, northwards; the said Governo^r to have his 1200 acres on the southerly side of two great stones standing neare together, close by the ryver-side that comes fro Concord, & the Deputie Governo^r to have his thousand acres on the northerly side of the said two great stones (w^{ch} stones were lately named the 'Two Brothers'). The Deputie Governo^r is to run a line easterly from the said stones so that hee may take in a meadowe on the other side of a hill, & so to extend his thousand acres as farr northerly as hee will, & as the thousand acres will beare, & the Governo^r to ioyn^e in the said line ruⁿing Easterly, & to extend his lot as farr Southerly as his twelve hundred acres will beare, w^{ch} 2200 acres are by this Court established to the said p^rties, generally, & their severall heires."

Governor Winthrop has left us in his journal¹ an account of the location of these farms, too graphic to be omitted. These two eminent men came up to view the proposed location from Concord, and "going down the river about four miles, they made choice of a place for one thousand acres for each of them. They offered each other the first choice, but because the deputy's was first granted, and himself had store of land already, the governor yielded him the first choice. So, at the place where the deputy's land was to begin there were two great stones which they called the Two Brothers in remembrance that they were brothers by their children's marriage, and did so brotherly agree, and for that a little creek near those stones was to part their lands. At the Court in the 4th month after, two hundred acres were added to the governor's part." This sentence fixes the date of this memorable visit, in January, 1637-8. The Two Brothers were better landmarks than the 'trees' so often used in designating boundaries, and still lie on the East bank of the Concord river, a short distance South of the Bedford line. They must be the earliest landmark in Billerica.² A year later (1639, June 6) the Court "granted to John Winthrope, Esq., the p^rsent Governor, a p^rcell of meadow containing about sixetic acres, more or lesse, by estimation, lying within a mile or two of his farme, beneath Concord, towards the Southeast of the said farme, to have to him & his heirs, p^rvided that it lye not wthin the bounds of any towne formerly granted." Mr. Dudley's farm was also increased to 1500 acres by the addition of his share of a grant to Roxbury. This was 460 acres which were "made" 500 by the Court.

² In the early part of this history, until the period of separation of Bedford, Tewksbury and Carlisle, I use the name as the fathers did, including the ancient bounds of the town.

Soon after, the Court granted lands on the west side of Concord river. "1639, Nov. 5, the Court granted Increase Nowell his 500 acres" [granted in June] "on the north side of the bounds of Concord, beyond the ryver, over against the Governo^r's 1200 acres ioyning to the bounds of Concord. Mr. Thom: Allen is granted his 500 acres "to ioyne to Increase Nowell on the north side of the said Increase Nowell, his grant." Mr. Nowell was a prominent citizen of Charlestown and secretary of the colony; and Mr. Allen was the 'teacher' of the church in Charlestown. Then follows a grant, made at the same time, June, 1639, but not located till October, 1640, which came within the bounds of Billerica. "M^r Thom: Welde, pasto^r of Roxbury, is granted 333 acres next to Mr. Thom: Allen, teacher of Charles Towne, beyond Concord Ryver, w^of 200 was granted by the country, & the other 333 is p^t of the 4000 acres granted to Roxberry." This farm occupied the south['] part of Billerica, west of Concord River, and was afterwards bought by the town.

One other and still larger grant remains to be mentioned. 1640, May 13, "There is 3000 acres of land granted to Mrs. Winthrop, the wife of Mr. John Winthrop, our late Governo^r, to bee at her disposing, for her and her sonns, where they shall desire it, w^out p^rjudice to any former grant." And 1641, Dec. 10, "Mrs. Marg^t Winthrop hath her 3000 acres of land, formerly granted her, to bee assigned about the lower end of Concord Ryver, near Merrimack, to bee layde out by Mr. Flint & Leift. Willard, w^h Mr. Oliver or some other skilful in measuring, so as it may not hinder a plantation, & any p^t thereof they may purchase of any Ipdians that have right to it." This grant was between the Merrimack and the Concord, on the east side of the latter, and was subsequently laid out by Jonathan Danforth, "in a true circle," including a part of Lowell and the adjacent section of Tewksbury.

With 1640, a new force was turned into the current setting towards the settlement of Shawshin. To appreciate its significance we need to recall certain facts in the general condition of the colony. This was a time of hardship and financial embarrassment. The meeting of the Long Parliament, and the increasing power of the Puritans in England, had checked the emigration to New England, and the Pequot war had taxed the new settlements. The financial difficulties of many of the colonists were serious, and Mr. Shepard and the Cambridge people were particularly involved. As a measure of relief they seriously considered the question of following Mr. Hooker and his company, whose houses and lands they had bought in Cambridge, and joining them in Connecticut. Mr. Shepard had married the daughter of Mr. Hooker, who strongly urged the removal of his son-in-law.*

The authorities of Massachusetts naturally deprecated a second disruption of Cambridge. Its influence on the colony and the infant college would be disastrous. And they strengthened their arguments with Mr. Shepard and his church by the proposal to enlarge their bounds nearer home. On the same day, 1640, Oct. 7, when Charlestown received a grant four miles square, which was the germ of Woburn, the Court took the following action:—

“The town of Cambridge is granted a month to consider of Shawshin for a village for them, & if they like it not, the town of Roxberry hath the liberty to consider of it for a village for them till the nexte Gene'all Courte.” The result was, 1641, June 2:—
“Shawshin is granted to Cambridge, p'vided they make it a village, to have 10 families there settled w^{thin} three years; otherwise the Court to dispose of it.”

But the time was not ripe, and Cambridge was not ready to grapple with the difficulties of a new settlement so far in the wilderness. The General Court, however, at last secures a report descriptive of Shawshin; but it was so far unfavorable, that whether intentionally or not, it must have discouraged the hopes of such as contemplated a settlement. This report bears date 1642, June 14, as follows:—

“Wee, whose names are underwritten, being appointed to viewe Shawshin, & to take notice of what fitness it was for a village, & accordingly to o^r apprehensions make returne to the Co^{rt}; wee therefore manifest thus much: that for the quantity it is sufficient, but for the quality in o^r apprehensions no way fit, the upland being very barren & very little meadow there about, nor any good timber almost fit for any use. Wee went after wee came to Shawshin house, by estimation, some 14 or 16 miles at the least, in compass; from Shawshin house wee began to go downe the ryver 4 or 5 miles near East; then wee left that point & went neere upon north, came to Concord Ryver, a little belowe the falls, about one mile or neare; then wee went up the ryver some 5 miles untill wee came to a place called the Two Brethren; and from thence it is about two miles & $\frac{1}{4}$ to Shawshin, & the most p^t of all the good land is given out already; more land there is at the south side of the house, between the side of Concord line & the heade of Cambridge line, but littell meadow, & the upland of little worth; & this is what we can say hearin.”

The signers of this report were prominent citizens of Concord and Woburn, and neighbors are not always best friends. We need not doubt the intention of these gentlemen to do justice to Shawshin, if we do suspect that they were unconsciously influenced by the thought that some advantage and possible enlargement might come to their own towns, if Shawshin were not occupied as a distinct settlement. The "Shawshin house," where their route begins, must have been on the Shawshin river, in Bedford, at the place where Vine brook, "the riveret from Woburne," empties into it. Going down the river about to the present line of the railroad, they may have followed that line to North Billerica. Thence to the Two Brothers, and across Bedford to the starting point, would make about the distance estimated; and if they did not leave this route, they saw little of the better portions of Shawshin. This Shawshin house was the first building in the town. By whom it was built, or for what purpose, or how long it remained, we know not. If Mrs. Winthrop availed herself of the leave granted by the Court the previous October, "to build a house & a hog or goate pen by the lower part of Concord Ryver," this may have been the second civilized structure in Shawshin.

After receiving this report, the General Court at the same session renewed the grant to Cambridge, giving Shawshin for the first time specific bounds. "All the land lying upon Shawshin Ryver, & between that & Concord Ryver, & between that & Merrinack Ryver, not formerly granted by this Co't, are granted to Cambridge, so as they erect a village there wthin 5 yeares & so as it shall not extend to preiudice Charlestowne village or the village of Cochitawit, nor the farms formerly granted to the now Gove'nor of 1260 ac's, to Thom: Dudley, Esq., 1500 ac's, & 3000 ac's to Mrs. Winthrope; & Mr. Flint & Mr. Stephen Winthrope are to set out their heade line towards Concord." Remembering that Cochitawit was Andover, and Charlestown Village, Woburn, the terms of this grant are very clear. Mr. Flint and Mr. Stephen Winthrop were surveyors, and are instructed to make the line of Concord the South-West bound, as it was in fact, of the Winthrop farm. The time within which the settlement must be effected is, by this grant, extended from 1644 to 1647. The difficulty of the undertaking, however, seems to have made it doubtful whether Cambridge could fulfil the conditions, even in the extended time, and inducements to remove to Connecticut continuing to influence her leading citizens, the Court again modified the terms of the grant, in order to hold Cambridge to the Shawshin enterprise.

"1643-4, March 7, Shawshin is granted to Cambridge, wthout any condition of making a village there, & the land between them & Concord is granted them, all save what is formerly granted to the military company or others, p^rvided the church & p^rsent elders continue at Cambridge." The proviso shows distinctly that these grants, with their increasing inducements, were designed to prevent the removal of Mr. Shepard and his friends. And the policy was successful. They remained in Cambridge, and some of them became early inhabitants of Shawshin. It is hardly too much to suppose that this Shawshin grant prevented a second disruption of the mother town.

Cambridge could now proceed at her convenience in the settlement of Shawshin, without fear of losing the grant, and she made haste slowly. The only allusion found for four years to the place comes incidentally from Woburn. 1644, May 9, the Court "ordered that the ryver at Shawshin shalbe called by the name of Shawshin Ryver, not only belowe, but also above the riveret w^{ch} falls into said ryver in Wooburne bounds above halfe a mile from Cambridge line." The interest of the Court in this name of the river was not purely geographical. The western bound of Woburn was contingent upon it. In the original grant of "Charles Towne village," the Court says "they shall not crosse Cambridge line nor come wthin a mile of Shawshin Ryver." Vine brook, as it is now known, runs westerly from Burlington, then a part of Woburn, and crosses the line "above half a mile from Cambridge," now Lexington. If the Shawshin could be held to begin at the point where this riveret comes in, the western bound of Woburn might legally have been extended above, so far even as to meet Concord. But if the river were the Shawshin from its rise in Lincoln, the bound of Woburn was limited accordingly. A petition, therefore, was presented from Woburn, signed by Edward Johnson, Edward Converse and John Mousall. "Humbly Beeseaching this Honored Corte to give direction for sending in a cleere way, About the laying oute the Bounds of the s^d towne next Shawshin River; first, whether it be mente wee shall keepe one mile fro the place called Shawshin, from whence wee conceave the River hath its Denomination, or whether wee must keep one Mile From any of the Riverets; 2nd, Whether wee must wave our bounds out & in as the River doth (Being Straightened Beyond Expectations by Lin Village one the other side). Would not Willingly delude ourselves with vayne Hopes Againe, But if it prove we Are Straightened by Shawshin River, likewise, wee may Indevor the gaineing (if it Be possible) some Handicraftsmen unto us, that the Blessed ordinances of God may Be upheld, the Lord helping in the use of means," etc. But the Court guarded the interests of Cambridge and Shawshin, and answered Woburn in the action given above.

The policy of "gaining some handicraftsmen" was, however, fairly successful in our sister town. They have been able, in spite of this defeat of their hopes, to maintain "the Blessed ordinances of God," and to give portions to three thrifty daughters, even from their contracted bounds.

The earliest action of Cambridge for the settlement of Shawshin, of which the record has been preserved, was taken, 1648, April 9.⁶

"It was agreed at a general meeting, when the whole town had special warning to meet for the disposing of Shawshine, that there should be a farm laid out of a thousand acres. to be for a public stock. and improved for the good of the church, & that part of the church that here shall continue; and every person or persons that shall from time to time remove from the church, do hereby resign up their interest therein to the remaining part of the church of Cambridge. This thousand acres of land, given to the use aforesaid, shall be laid out, either all together or else severally, part in one place & part elsewhere. according to the discretion of the men that are appointed to lay out the land."

"Also. there were granted to several brethren that had no house-right in the town, if they did desire it, farms at Shawshin." "Imprimis: Capt. Googine a farm, if he buy a house in the town; also to Bro. Edward Oaks, Tho. Oakes, and Richard Hildreth, each of them a farm for their encouragement, if they see it may make for their support and desire it. Further, it is granted to Mr. Henry Dunster and Edward Collins. liberty to have their small farms at Shawshine. and to be considered in their quantity more than others in regard of their work and place."

1649, April, one year later, the town "Agreed that Mr. Henry Dunster, President of Harvard College, should have 500 acres whereof four hundred is granted by the town to his own person and heirs, to enjoy freely, forever, and the other 100 acres, for the use of Harvard College. Item, unto Mr. Daniel Googine, 500 acres. Item, unto Mr. Edward Collins, in lieu of his small farm within the town bounds, with some addition in respect of his place in the Deacon's office, it was agreed that he should have 500 acres."

⁶ History of Cambridge, page 57.

The next movement on record preparatory to the occupancy of Shawshin was in 1651. Governor Dudley, whose farm of 1500 acres embraced an attractive part of the town, petitions the Court, Oct. 15, for a definition of his river bound. After statement of the grant, he says: "but is not expressed how far the said 1500 acres should go along by the ryver-side (although the said Thomas Dudley took it for granted, & yet does, that he might goe as farr by the ryver side as he would) yet to make it certain, & that no difference or questions may arise in times to come, the said petitioner does now intreat of this honored Court that it may be recorded that the 1500 acres so granted unto him may be laid out two myles & a halfe -- along by the ryver side, and so that he may make upp for 1500 acres from the ryver side to the land ward, ffor which he shall render due thanks," etc. He received favorable answer, and the way was thus prepared for the sale of his grant. This took place 28 Feb., 1651-2, to three citizens of Woburn, Thomas Chamberline, James Parker, and Isaac Learned. This was the earliest sale and one of the largest which was ever made of land in Billerica, and for these reasons, as well as for illustration of the methods of exchange of that day, I quote its provisions at some length.

"This witnesseth that whereas, by several grants of divers General Courts, there is conveyed to Thomas Dudley, the Deputy Governor, & his heyres, 1500 acres of land, lying & being about 6 miles northerly from Concord. * * Now, the said Thomas Dudley, for & in consideration of one hundred & ten pounds of lawful money, to be payed unto him * * by Thomas Chamberline, Isacke Learned, and James Parker, all of Woburne, in New England, in such goods & at such times as hereafter hereyn appeareth, hath granted * * all the right * * which he, the said Thomas Dudley, or his heyres, hath therein, by virtue of the said grants of the general Courts, or by any purchase from any Indian * * together with all woodes, trees, waters, fishings, & other appurtenances to the same belonging. To have and to hold * * Provided always, that if the said * * shall not well & truly pay * * the summe of fifty & five pounds of lawful money, oxen, steers, cowes, heifers, or calves, sound & good cattle, none of them to be above six years old, at his now dwelling-house in Roxbury, in New England, upon the eight & twentieth day of Aprill which shall be in the year of our Lord 1653; & the like summe of 55 pounds, in like cattalle or in corne at the place aforesaid, in such kind of corne as hereafter followeth: that is to say, Twenty pounds thereof in Wheate, & five & thirty pounds thereof in Rye, pease, or Indian corne, of each a like equal quantity, all good and clean dressed, upon the eight & twentieth day of Aprill, which shall be in * 1654; the said cattle & corne to be valued at the several times of deliverance thereof by one man chosen by said Thomas Dudley, and another man chosen by the [purchasers]; and if these two cannot agree, then by a third man to be chosen by those two. And it is agreed, that if the [purchasers] shall pay any part of the last payment in corne, they shall give 3 months warning in writing • • how much they will so pay in corne, & if they shall pay but part of the last payment in corne, then it shall be proportioned according to the kinds of corne before expressed."

Governor Dudley's signature to this deed is witnessed by Thomas Dudley, Jr., Tobias Davis, and John Remkens, and the agreement is added "that what oxen shall be payed, may be seven years old and no more." The deed was recorded by Thomas Danforth, 19 Sept., 1656

These three men, who purchased so large an interest in Shawshin, all became citizens of Chelmsford, which was receiving its early settlers at the same time. But James Parker resided here three or four years, and John Stearns, whose name is so prominent in our history, was the brother of Isaac Learned's wife, Mary. William Chamberline, who settled in Shawshin, was probably a relative of Thomas; and George Farley, Henry Jests, and the Hills were their neighbors in Woburn, and purchased of them parts of the Dudley farm.

Cambridge also soon began to take more effective measures. There had been, doubtless, debates going on how the settlement might be effected with some profit to those citizens of Cambridge who had no intention of removing to Shawshin. But the problem was not easy of solution. The clearing and occupancy of the wilderness was felt to entitle the pioneers to the full benefit of their toil and sacrifice, and immigrants could not be induced to make their homes here and subject themselves to any considerable tribute to Cambridge.

Some things indicate, also, that the question whether the benefit of the grant of Shawshin was to accrue to the church or the town of Cambridge created embarrassment. Town and church were in those days so nearly identical that it was not always easy to draw the line, and sometimes it was left obscure. While the grant of Shawshin is not specifically to the church, but simply to Cambridge, the language does imply that the General Court had the church in view in making it. And although the action, making grants in 1648 and 1649, had been by the town, it appears from the next quotation that the Shawshin grant was really held by the church. 1652, June 9 (four months after Dudley had sold his farm) "it was agreed by the church that Shawshine should be divided as followeth:—

"To Mr. Michell, five hundred acres. To Edw. Okes, three hundred acres. To Thomas Okes, one hundred and fifty acres.

"It was agreed that these three above named should have their lots laid out by a committee with as little prejudice to any lot as may be, and so not to draw any lot.

"Also, the Church doth agree, that although the land be, by grant of the General Court, peculiar to the Church only, yet the whole town, viz.: such as are owners of house and land in the town, shall come into the division thereof.

"Also, it is agreed, that every man shall have a proportion of land, more or less, according to the proportion now allotted him.

"Also, that every man shall have a part of the meadow in proportion with his upland, to be laid out after the same rule that the upland is, both by lot and quantity.

"Also, it is agreed, that, after the farms formerly granted are laid out, the remainder of the land shall be divided into three breadths, viz.: two of the said breadths to lie between the rivers, and the third on this side Shawshine River. The first lot to begin upon a line continued over Shawshine River, the same that is between Woburn and us, running towards Concord, until it meet with Mr. Wintrop's farm; and so the said first lot to butt South upon that line & on Shawshine River and Mr. Wintrop's farm; and so each lot to proceed one after another, by due parallels, until they come clear of the farms already laid out, and then to extend in two divisions between the Rivers, and a third division on the east side Shawshine River; and so every man's lot to follow one another, taking all the three breadths at once, the nearest land to the first center being still always the next lot in order.

"The number of every man's lot & quantity of acres is as followeth on the other side."

Here follows a list of 113 names regularly numbered, and two others appended, of persons to whom grants varying from 10 to 450 acres were made in Shawshin, amounting to a total of 9800 acres. Add the 2450 acres above mentioned, granted specially to six leading citizens, and the whole number of acres granted by Cambridge to individuals reaches 12,250. Most of these grants were never located, but were sold to Billerica, as will subsequently appear. For convenience of reference and comparison with the later list in the deed of sale, I give these names, recast alphabetically, with memoranda added as to the disposition of the rights.

I also insert, without numbers, the six names of other citizens who had large grants in Shawshin, but were not included in the distribution by lot. The figures at the left of the names give the number of acres. The original list may be found in the History of Cambridge, pp. 58-9. The original spelling is preserved, except that the initial 'ff,' often used, gives place to the capital 'F.'

All the titles which are not marked with a star in this list were conveyed to Billerica in the Great Deed, which will be described hereafter. Some of the rights had been sold to William French, Golden More, and others, but the larger number were deeded by the original grantee to the town. Of those not contained in the Great Deed, Mr. Bowman sold his 20 acres to Billerica for 20 shillings; Thomas Bridge's grant was held by his son-in-law, Daniel Champney; Robert Brodsh's 80 acres (not 30, as in Cambridge list) was located to the heirs of Thomas Danforth in 1708; William Clemance's grant was laid out to Samuel Waters; Stephen Day, Robert Stedman, David Stone, and the Widow Wilkerson sold to Jonathan Danforth, and he sold to the town; the sons of Edmund Frost received each a five-acre right on account of their father's grant; Edward Goffe sold his 450 acres to Billerica, 1673, Jan. 27, for thirteen pounds sterling; William Hamlet occupied his own right; Thomas Prentice's grant was sold to Francis and John Wyman, and located one-half to Francis Wyman in 1695, and the other half to Joseph Walker in 1684; John Russell's grant was laid out to Ebenezer Hill. 1703. May 26; John Stedman sold his 300 acres to Billerica in 1678 for 20 pounds, and Daniel Stone's right was held by his heirs in 1707. The disposition of the following titles has not been traced: Ranold Bush, Vincet Druse, David Fiske, Mr. Jackson, Edward Michelson, Joseph Miller, John Parker, William Wilcock, Daniel Wines, and Richard Woods.

Besides the farms of Collins, Dunster, Gookin, Mitchell, and the brothers Oakes, Cambridge grants above 9800 acres to 115 proprietors. Of this number, 89 titles were conveyed to Billerica by the Great Deed which covered 7480 acres; 16 others were conveyed to Billerica, or located for citizens, and ten, as above, are not accounted for, including 770 acres. The grant of 400 acres to Mr. Jackson, forms the larger part of this number.

In October, 1652, Woburn petitioned the Court for the appointment of a committee to lay out the farms "nere Shawshine, graunted to J^{ro} Winthrop, Esq., deceased, & to Thomas Dudley, Esq., Dep^t Gouv^r." Seven commissioners were appointed. The work to be "donne before the twenty-fowerth day of the fowerth month next." No report of these commissioners appears on the record, but the easterly line of the farms may have been fixed by their action. The other bounds could not have been then in question. As the east bound did not reach Shawshin river, which was a mile west of Woburn limits, the neighborly solicitude of her citizens in the matter is interesting and perhaps suggestive.

This brings us to the settlement of the Shawshin wilderness, unless the Shawshin House, already mentioned, but of which we know so little, constituted an exception. In what year, at what place, or by whom the settlement was begun, is not known. It is probable that Henry Jests was here in 1652, for his infant daughter, Hannah, died in the town "y^e first weeke" of May, 1653; the earliest event noted in the Town Records. A year later, the "last week, 1th Month," (March), 1654, Samuel, the son of George Farley, was born—the first birth in the town. And in October, 1654, a petition to the General Court bears fourteen signatures, and "the most of" the "petitioners are already seated" here.

This petition was the first utterance of Shawshin which has been preserved, and gives information of the earliest enlargement of the bounds of the town. It may be found in the Massachusetts Archives, in the office of the Secretary of State, Vol. 112, p. 70, and is as follows:—

"INHABITANTS OF SHAWSHIN."

EDWARD RAWSON, Secy.

This petition unfortunately has no date, but was presented to the General Court before 23 October, 1654, as on that day the favorable report of a committee upon it was approved by the deputies and sent to the magistrates for concurrence. They, on the 2d November, consent to it, with a proviso that "the President of the College" have five hundred acres "in the nearest and best place." The deputies, for reasons assigned, which were sound and friendly to Shawshin, did not assent to this proviso, and final action on the petition was delayed by this difference of the two Houses until the session in 1655, May, when the magistrates "consented" to the action of the deputies. The precise date of this action, commonly but not very accurately recognized as the incorporation of Billerica, is not clear. The "30th, 3, 1655," as it stands on the petition, may refer either to the final action of the deputies or to the subsequent concurrence of the magistrates. In either case, in the absence of more conclusive testimony, May 30 can best claim recognition as the natal day of Billerica.*

Of the signers of the petition, Daniel Cookin and Richard Champney were leading citizens of Cambridge and large land owners in Shawshin, but never resided here. Probably the remaining twelve had all made their homes in Shawshin before the date of this petition, and all deserve honorable remembrance as pioneers of the town.

This petition records, incidentally, the fact that an earlier petition had met with favor and secured for Shawshin an extension on the west side of Concord River. Its first bound, west and north, was the Concord and Merrimac Rivers. The language implies that this earlier request had been made by settlers here, and it is not probable that the Court would have granted such an extension, except to actual settlers whose prospects of success warranted the favor. And this probability adds weight to the assumption of a number already here in 1653, or even in 1652. It appears too, that for some unexplained reason, this first extension west of the Concord did not lie along the river, but farther west, and omitted the tract described in this second petition, six or seven miles long, and of undetermined width.

* May 20 has been accepted as the day of incorporation, and was celebrated by the town at the Bi-Centennial in 1855. The only authority for this date is the Record of the Magistrates as it stands in Volume IV of the Colonial Records. But the Record of the Deputies (Volume III of Colonial Records) gives May 23 for the same action. May 23 was in fact the first day of the session, and it remains in the margin of the Record, covering all the proceedings of the session, which extended into June. The Secretary of the Magistrates happened to insert "May 20" in the margin, apparently to fix the date of a certain "hearing"; but a comparison of the two Records, as to matters of common action, shows that neither date, "23" or "20," has any authority in fixing the day during the session in which any action was taken. The final date on the original petition is therefore the most definite authority yet discovered in the matter.

This petition is also memorable as containing the first suggestion of the name which was henceforth to supplement the euphonious Shawshin and connect itself with the rising town. It was natural that these English colonists, leaving homes that were dear behind, should cultivate the home feeling by the transfer of familiar names to the wilderness. They could scarcely appreciate the melody, beauty, and flavor of the soil, for which the taste of a later day sighs in the supplanted Indian names. And when Shawshin had secured a company of earnest English families, they began to inquire for the English name it should bear. Their choice fell upon a name unique and peculiar. There is but one Billericay in England, and but one Billerica in the United States. While other names have been repeated in newer States, this remains our own. To unfamiliar ears it is a little awkward and unattractive; but it is quite as true that generations here have learned to love it, and in their loyalty would not subscribe to an expression of regret that the early and admirable Shawshin was not retained as the name of the town. That some of these first inhabitants were from Billericay, in England, we can not doubt, and the tradition is probable that Ralph Hill came from that town.

The favorable answer of the General Court to this petition is put upon its own Record in these words:—

“In ans^r to the petition of severall proprietors & inhabitants of Shawshin, humbly desiring a tract of land lying nere the lyne of the farmes of John and Robert Blood. & so along by the side of Concord River, &c. The Court grants their request in that respect, so as it hinder not former grants, and graunt the name of the plantacion to be called Billirikeyca.”

Error as to spelling the name came in early. It is also worthy of note that in the original petition where the name first appears, it is given as in England, where the name is now spelled with the ‘y’ final. On the other hand it is probable that English usage in the seventeenth century, often, if not commonly, omitted the ‘y’; and there may be truth in the suggestion that we in New England have preserved the earlier form of the name.

This action of the Court has usually been described as the incorporation of the town. But the facts scarcely warrant such interpretation. It was simply an enlargement of a settlement already organized and recognized, and a change of the name by which it had been known.

At the same time the Court ratified the agreement which had been made between Cambridge and Shawshin. The Records of Cambridge under date 1654-5, January 29, say:—

In answer to a letter sent to the town from our neighbors of Shawshine, alias Bilracie, wherein they desire that whole tract of land may be disengaged from this place and be one entire body of itself. The town consented to choose five persons a cominittee to treat and conclude with them concerning their request therein; at which time there was chosen Mr. Henry Dunster, Elder Champney, John Bridge, Edward Goffe, and Edward Winship.

The result of their negotiations with the Shawshin settlers is found in the Records of the General Court of the above date.

“In ans^r to, the desire of our beloved brethren & neighbors, the inhabitants of Shawshin, requesting imunities & freedom from all publicke rates & charges at Cambridg, and that all the land of that place, as well those appertaining to the p^{nt} inhabitants of Cambridge, as those granted them by the Court, might belong entirely to that place, for the better encouragement & carrying on of publicq charges that will necessarily there fall out.

Wee, whose names are underwritten, being impow^d by the inhabitants of Cambridge, at a publicke meeting of the toune, the 29th of January, 1654, to make such propositions & conclusions therein as to us might seem most meete & aequall, doe make theise following propositions wth refference to the compliyanee of the above named, or beloved brethren & neighbors. the inhabitants of Shawshin, and the approbation of the Gennerall Court. for the full conclusion thereof.

1. That all the lands belonging to that place called by the name of Shawshin, with its appurtenances or latter grants made by the Gennerall Court, as well those the proprietye & peculiar right whereof belongeth to any particular person, as those granted by the toune or church of Cambridge to that place for a towneshipp, as also those given by the inhabitants of Cambridge for the furtherance and encouragement of a plantacion there, shall be one entire towneshipp or plantacion, alwayes freed & acquitted from all manner of common charges & rates of what nature or kind soever due or belonging of right to be payd unto Cambridge by virtue of any graunt of that place unto them by the Gennerall Court.

2. That whensoever any of the inhabitants of Cambridge, theire heirs or assigns, whither in that place or elsewhere, shall make any improvement of their lands above premised, more or lesse, by fencing, building or breaking up, or mowing of the meadows, every such person shall pay to the common charges of that place, i.e. Shawshin, suitable to his or their improvement of the aforesayd kind, in due proportion wth the rest of the inhabitants in that place, the whole estate and improvements of the place being layd at an aequall & proportionable rate.

3. That the inhabitants of Shawshin shall at all time & tymes heereafter forever, acquitt & discharge the inhabitants of Cambridge from all common charges, rates, dues, duties, & incumbrances by any manner of wajes or meanes due by them, to be payd, executed, or performed by vertue of their interest in that place given unto them by the graunt of the Gennerall Court.

4. That whensoever any of the inhabitants of Cambridge shall alienate their p^{nt} interest in any of the above named lands from themselves & heirs, then the sayd lands shall in all respects be liable to common charges of that place, as though those particular persons had their graunts thereof, made them from the sayd toun or plantacion of Shawshin.

5. That no person or persons which either have had or hereafter shall have any lott or allotment graunted them in the above named towneshipp of Shawshin, in case they make not improvement thereof by building and fencing, especially the houselott, shall have any power to make any sale or gift thereof to any other person, but such land and alotments shall retourne again to the toun, i.e. Shawshin; and in case after such like improvements, any person shall then remoove to the deserting and leaving their brethren and neighbors, that have adventured by their encouragement to settle there wth them, no such person or persons, for seven yeares next ensuing the confirmation hereof, shall have power to make either sale or gift, or any alienation thereof, to any person or p^{sons} whatsoever, save only unto such as the greater part of the inhabitants then resident in Shawshin, shall consent unto and approve of.

6. That in case any grievance shall hereafter happen to arise, which for the present neither side foresee, nor is heereby clearly determined, that then all such matter of greivance or difference shall be from tyme to tyme heard and determined by meete persons, three or five, indifferently chosen by the prudentiall men of Cambridg & Shawshin.

And these aforementioned propositions to be subscribed by all the pres^{nt} inhabitants of Shawshin, and by all such as heereafter shall have any allotments granted them there, and retourne hereof made to the inhabitants of Cambridg wthin tenn dayes after the end of the first session of the Gennerall Court.

CHAPTER II.

FIRST SETTLERS—LOCATIONS AND RELATIONSHIPS.

THE fathers of New England builded wisely, perhaps more wisely than they knew. They went about separate settlements in the same spirit and on the same principles with which they shaped the colony. Each town was to be a republic in miniature, coherent, and with sufficient vitality to maintain itself and support religious ordinances,—not a random collection of squatter-sovereigns, but, from the start, a compact body, competent to welcome or reject those who sought a place among them. The colonial policy was not narrow but wisely self-defensive, which declined to open the door to all the restless adventurers who might be disposed to come in and make trouble. And when a town was taking shape, time, correspondence, and long consultations, were necessary to secure the concurrence of a sufficient number of suitable families in the enterprise. Former neighborhood and family relationships would be important factors in determining these adjustments, as the early group of Billerica families illustrates.

We may assume that several families came near the same time to occupy Shawshin, and that this first settlement took place in 1652 or early in 1653. Most of the twelve signers of the petition in 1654, October,¹ had, no doubt, their homes here at that time. Jonathan Danforth was married the next month, and John French and Ralph Hill, Jun., some years later. Probably, therefore, there were nine families in Shawshin in 1654, and of these, seven were located on the Dudley Farm, and perhaps eight.

John Parker settled on the farm reserved for the Church in Cambridge. This farm was located on both sides the Shawshin, a mile wide, from the Woburn Road, down the river. His house was near the residence of Mr. Slack, on the East Road, and was an important centre in the early life of the town. Town meetings were held in it, and there Jonathan Danforth came for his bride, who was Mr. Parker's step-daughter. James Parker, one of the three purchasers of the Dudley Farm, had a house-lot on Long Street which was crossed by the Andover Road.

The other settlers were on "the farm," as Mr. Dudley's grant is designated in the early records. This farm, beginning at the Two Brothers, on Concord River, extends down the river two and a half miles to the Middlesex Turnpike, and is bounded north-east by the line of Charnstaffe Lane, extended from the river to a point just east of Ash Swamp and the narrow-gauge railroad; south-east by a line of which Tufts' Lane is a fragment, and which crosses Nutting's Pond near its west end. The south line, four hundred and thirty rods long, crosses the Bedford Road at the point where the road from Hill's Bridge intersects it, and meets the east line very near the railroad.

John Stearns and George Farley occupied the north end of this farm, the Bedford Road, where it turns south from Charnstaffe Lane, forming the dividing line between them. Stearns's house was south of Charnstaffe Lane, probably near the Deacon Whiting place; and Farley's house near the Jaquith place. Next, on the south, was Ralph Hill, Sen., near Mrs. Judkins'; and, east of his farm, Lieut. William French had his home, towards Indian Hill, as the hill north of Nutting's Pond was called. Robert Parker's lot was on the east side of the farm, and his house-lot then, or afterwards, was east of the farm and south-east of Dr. Noyes's present residence. William Chamberline and Henry Jeffs were between Parker and Stearns, but their exact location is undetermined. Jeffs was on or near Indian Hill, and Chamberline probably nearer to the Woburn Road.

The location of the succeeding families, and of the future village, was determined by a grant made "by the Church of Cambridge for a Towneship." This Township and its inhabitants are often mentioned in the early records. It consisted of four hundred acres, bounded south by Charnstaffe Lane, and west by the river. John Trull's farm, known as the Bridge place and now owned by Mrs. Farmer, included its north-east corner; and the lane leading from Long Street to this house is a few rods north of the Township line. House-lots, twenty to thirty acres in size, were granted within this Township to most of the first settlers, and "they upon the township" held, by agreement, a prior claim over "those on Mr. Dudley's farm," in the future distribution of common land. Here Jonathan Danforth built his house on the north side of West Street in 1654, unless his house-building followed his marriage. It was perhaps the first house in the village, and unless it was replaced by a second house before 1675, which is not probable, it stands there today, and after two hundred and twenty-three years we may still gaze upon its venerable and (alas! that we must add) vanishing form.² William Patten, or Thomas, his son, perhaps both, came the same year, and his house stood near Mr. Frank Richardson's. Ralph Hill, Jun., had a house-lot on what is now Mr. Kimball's farm, which he sold soon after to John Poulter, the brother of Danforth's wife. And in May, 1656, Mr. Hill bought of William Baker the farm south of his father's. His house, a garrison of 1675, stood where Mrs. Boyden lives. It had been built and occupied by Edward Chamberline, and Baker's occupancy was brief.

By 1660, the number of families had increased to forty. Without attempting to give the exact order of their coming, or location, the following may be taken as an approximate statement: William Hamlet was on the north-east of Bare Hill, (the hill south of the village,) near the Crosby place; James Kidder was opposite Danforth, where Mr. Gardner Parker lives; John Rogers was near Mr. Charles Parker's; William Tay, near Dr. Noyes's place, just south of the village; John Baldwin, near Mrs. Bennett's, and Jacob Brown, near Mr. Whitman's, (he sold out to John Stearns about 1663). Samuel Champney, son of the notable Elder Richard, of Cambridge, early had purchased, and in 1669 sold again to Richard Daniel, the five hundred acres granted by Cambridge to Edward Collins, and his house was south of the Woburn Road, near the Shawshin River. Simon Crosby was on the north side of Bare Hill; Samuel Kemp, on the East Road, near Miss Sophia Allen's; and Samuel Kinsley, south of Fox Hill and near Mr. Harding's place. John Marshall was "partly on and partly off the towneship," on the east side, beyond Ash Swamp, and south-east of Mr. Kimball's. Golden Moore bought James Parker's place, before mentioned; James Paterson, "on the north side of the township," between the late Dr. Pillsbury's place and Mr. Sanborn's; John Poulter, on

Andover Street, near Mr. Kimball's; and John Sheldon beyond him, near Mr. Johnson's place; John Trull had lived, before 1659, on Captain Gookin's farm, and perhaps in the "Shawshin House"; he then received a grant at the Bridge place, east of Long Street; George Willice sold in 1659 his place south of the Baptist Church to Daniel Shed. Web has left his name on "Web's Brook," and lived beside it, near Mr. Maynard's; Simon Bird was west of Long Street and south of the corner, (his grant included most of the Spalding Farm and Mr. Stackpole's); and beyond were John Bracket, between the two brooks; John Durrant, whose grant extended to Mr. Jones's north line; and William Haile, whose grant was farther on towards the "Great Bridge," or Fordway. Thomas Foster was east of Bare Hill, near Mr. McKay's; Joseph Tompson, at the Tuft's place, south of the north-east corner of the Dudley Farm; Peter Bracket, east of Tompson and south of Marshall; John Kittredge, near Mr. Knowles's, south of Bare Hill; Thomas Hubbard, west of Long Street and north of the Township, or between Dr. Pillsbury's place and Mrs. Wild's; Dr. Roger Toothaker, at the old Rogers' place, near North Billerica; and last, but not least, Rev. Samuel Whiting, whose place was east of Concord Road and north of Charnstaffe Lane. His house stood opposite the old Deacon Whiting place, just where Charnstaffe Lane descends from the west to the brook.

Forty families are here enumerated having homes in Billerica in 1660. It is a matter of interest to note the places from which they came and the various relationships and interests which drew them together and helped to compact the rising community. In examining this subject it will be convenient to anticipate dates a little and group with these names several others who came in the next twenty years.

The larger number came naturally from Cambridge. Fifteen of the fifty-five earliest names belong to the mother town. Champney, Crosby, Danforth, French, Frost, Hamlet, Hide, Hubbard, Kidder, Manning, More, Parker, Patten, Ross, and Willice; and probably John Parker and Poulter should be added to this group, and by his marriage, at least, John Trull. Samuel Champney was a son of Elder Richard Champney, one of the foremost men of Cambridge, and a large proprietor in Shawshin. He married a sister of Thomas Hubbard, who died here in 1662; and his sister married Jacob French. Jonathan Danforth married a sister of John Poulter, whose widowed mother had become the wife of John Parker. James Frost married a daughter of William Hamlet, who had married Mrs. Hubbard, the mother of Samuel Champney's wife. Jonathan Hyde married Dorothy, daughter of James Kidder, but did not long stay in Billerica. Kidder married a niece of Golden More, who had himself married the widow of John Champney. Samuel Manning's wife was Elizabeth, sister of John Stearns, and Isaac Learned, one of three purchasers of the Dudley Farm, married another sister. The connection of the Parkers, John and Robert, can not be affirmed, but is probable. Thomas Willice married Grace, daughter of William Tay, who came from Boston to Billerica, and John Trull married Sarah French, niece of Lieut. William French, of Cambridge, and sister of Joseph French, the son-in-law of Thomas Foster, who lived near him.

The contribution next in number and importance to the Billerica company came as naturally from Woburn. It includes eleven names: Bacon, Baldwin, Brooks, Chamberline, Farley, Hill, Jefts, Richardson, Walker, Wilson, and Wyman.

Michael Bacon and John Baldwin married daughters of Thomas Richardson, of Woburn, and their brother Thomas became the occupant of the Church Farm after the death of John Parker in 1668, and a leading citizen of Billerica. William Chamberline was probably connected with Thomas, one of the Dudley Farm purchasers, who afterwards married Danforth's mother-in-law, the widow of John Parker. George Farley and Henry Jefts married sisters, we need not doubt, as they bore the unusual name of Births. Ralph Hill, Sen., had taken a second wife, Margaret, the mother of Roger Toothaker; and in his will he calls William French, "brother." Ralph Hill, Jun., married Martha Toothaker, his step-sister. Joseph Walker was the son-in-law of John Wyman, of the family which held much land in Billerica as well as Woburn.

Braintree gave to Billerica an important circle of eight families. The mother of Simon Crosby had married, some years before, the Rev. Joseph Tompson, of Braintree, his second wife. In his parish, Capt. Richard Bracket lived, an active and exemplary deacon in his church. Naturally enough, the minister's son Joseph, and step-son Simon Crosby, found wives in the deacon's family, and one Samuel Kinsley was equally fortunate. These sisters had twin brothers, John and Peter, and the five brothers and sisters all came to Billerica and formed as many homes here. John Bracket had another attraction here, as his wife was a daughter of William French. Thomas Foster, Daniel Shed, who married Ruth More, daughter of Golden, and Christopher Web, make up the Braintree families, most of whom were located south and east of the village.

John Rogers came with John Stearns from Watertown, and Job Lane from Malden. He was the purchaser of the entire Winthrop Farm, which he divided by his will between his son, Col. John, and two grand-sons, Samuel Fitch and Mathew Whipple. His wife was the daughter of Rev. John Reyner, pastor of Plymouth and Dover, whose son John became his father's colleague and successor.

A few came from England direct to Billerica. Richard Daniel, "Gentlemen," as he is often called in the records, and mentioned with deference, bought the farm of the Cambridge Church of seven hundred acres and Samuel Champney's farm of five hundred acres, in 1669. His wife was daughter of Sir John Pye; and about 1678 they returned to England. Edward Farmer came from Warwickshire, ancestor of a notable family; and John Kittredge, whose descendants have been many and honorable, came in the service of John Parker, who is called his "master." James Paterson was a Scotchman, of whom Savage says: "He is one of only four or five that prospered here among the great crowd of romantic young followers in Scotland of Charles II, who in the bloody days * * of 1650 and 1651 were captured on the fields of Cromwell's glory at Dunbar and Worcester, and transported to the colonies to be sold." Several hundreds were brought to Boston. Paterson and Richardson married sisters, daughters of Andrew Stevenson, of Cambridge. Some years later another Scotchman, John Levistone, brought also good blood to Billerica. And if we could trace the connections of other names, as Bird, Dunkin, Durrant, Dutton, Fasset, Grimes, Haile, Kemp, Marshall, Sanders, Sheldon, and Trull, they would no doubt furnish points of similar interest.

Facts like these taken separately have little interest; but group them and they show that the men and women who laid the foundations in Billerica were no random collection of adventurers. They formed from the outset a community bound together by a network of ties which assured mutual sympathy and helpfulness. This was an essential condition of their success. Society is not a mere conglomerate of individuals. Throw men and women together of diverse antecedents and inharmonious quality, and they will not be long in falling out and going asunder. Many an ambitious and promising attempt at planting a colony in America, and elsewhere, has made shipwreck for this reason. Plymouth and Massachusetts were more successful, because they sought carefully and held tenaciously such elements as could be moulded together, and repelled those which were foreign and discordant. And what was true of the colony was true of the town. Such a union of harmonious and desirable elements could not be had at short notice; and the delay of a few years, during which neighbors in Cambridge and Woburn were consulting and corresponding with the design of planting a company of settlers in the Shawshin wilderness, was well used in securing the growth and combination of such germs. It was better to make haste so slowly that the town might prove, as it did, homogeneous and successful.

CHAPTER III.

LAND DISTRIBUTION.

THE equitable apportionment of the lands of the town among the settlers was a matter of sufficient importance and difficulty to engage much attention and tax their wisdom. The whole town included, after its enlargement west of the Concord River, about thirty thousand acres. The adjustment of what the first settlers should receive, with wise reservations for later grants as others should join them, and for future distributions, must have been very carefully debated. Their territory embraced the three large grants to Mrs. Winthrop, Governor Winthrop, and Governor Dudley, (5,760 acres in all); one thousand acres reserved by the Church in Cambridge; five grants of five hundred acres each to Captain Gookin, Reverend Mr. Weld, Reverend Mr. Mitchel, President Dunster, and Mr. Collins; and other grants to more than one hundred citizens of Cambridge, amounting to 10,300 acres. About two-fifths of the whole town only was really free and common land, open to the occupancy and disposition of the settlers, when they first came to Shawshin; but the subsequent grant from the General Court of eight thousand acres at Naticott enabled them, by purchase and exchange, to secure most of the small Cambridge titles, and hold about eight thousand acres more for their own benefit and that of future proprietors.

The Dudley Farm exerted a vital influence in giving shape to the settlement. Extending two and a half miles down the river from the Two Brothers, its north-east boundary fixed the position of the four hundred acres "granted by the Church in Cambridge for the Township," or village part of the town, Charnstaffe Lane being the line between them. And the first settlement has the practical aspect of an agreement between the Woburn men who had bought the larger part of the "Farm," and the Cambridge men who had received the Township grant.

The Farm, containing fifteen hundred acres, was divided into twelve lots of one hundred and twenty-five acres each, and this number became the unit of measuring shares throughout the town. Each share was called a 'ten-acre lot,' and consisted of one hundred and thirteen acres of upland and twelve acres of meadow, and carried with it the right to "all town priviledges, after additions and divisions of land and meadow." Only six proprietors held more than a single share. Ralph Hill had a twenty-eight-acre lot; his father and Elder Champney, twenty-five-acre lots; and Farley, French, and Stearns, twenty-acre lots. There were thirteen ten-acre lots, and thirty-six smaller: eight, six, five, and two-and-one-half-acre lots, the larger part being five acres. The twelve shares of the Dudley Farm were held: two and one-half, by Elder Champney; two, by John Stearns; one and one-half, by Ralph Hill, Sen.; and one each, by William Chamberlain, George Farley, Lieut. William French, Ralph Hill, Jun., Henry Jests, and Robert Parker.

It can hardly have been accidental that the rights on the Township were granted by Cambridge in so nearly the same number of shares. Four Farm proprietors, Farley, Stearns, Ralph Hill, Jun., and Robert Parker, had also lots on the Township. Omitting these, the lots on the Township were also twelve in number. Their owners were Jacob Brown, who soon sold to Stearns, John Baldwin, Jonathan Danforth, Captain Gookin, of Cambridge, a non-resident, James Kidder, John Marshall, Golden More, William Patten, John Rogers, John Trull, George Willice, and Reverend Mr. Whiting. Of this number, Baldwin only was a Woburn man; while but a single Cambridge man, French, had his home on the Farm. In the outset, the Township and the Farm thus nearly represented Cambridge and Woburn in the settlement, which proceeded on the basis of the following agreement between them:—¹

The price of the Dudley Farm was one hundred and ten pounds. The balance of the fifty-five pounds, which would make up the half, was probably assessed on later purchasers in the town.

The earliest settlers whose house-lots were on the common land of the town, or off the Township and the Farm, were William Hamlet and William Tay, in 1656. The grant to Hamlet exhibits the common form used, with slight variations, in case of all the early settlers; and I quote:—

“They have granted to him and assignes forever, one tenne-acre lot, or one single share; that is, one hundred and thirtene acres of upland and twelve acres of meadow land, together with all towne priviledges; after additions and divitions of lands and meadows made or to be made, or granted by the towne, according to any their ‘owne orders, covenants, or agreements, to any free denison amongst them, according to y^e proportion of a ten-acre lot, and on this account are the following grants.”

His first grant is of fifty-six acres, more or less, “on the North-East corner of bare hill, and on y^e south of hogrooten meadow.” This meadow of unsavory name lies south-east of the Tompson or Tufts place, and the hill is between the Boston and Lexington Roads, south-east of the village, and east of Dr. Noyes’s house. Hamlet’s house must have stood near the Crosby place. Tay was on the west of the same hill, at Dr. Noyes’s place.

The Braintree company came soon after, and, by 1660, had well occupied the line south and east of the village, along Loes’ Plain as far as Fox Hill. North from the Township ran another line of the earliest farms, Paterson, Hubbard, Bird, Durrant, and Haile, who was near the Great Bridge, or Fordway, with Toothaker at the extreme point, the old Rogers place of a later day, by the canal.

The allotment of the common lands to the settlers began promptly, and it was almost one hundred years before this land fund was exhausted. The earliest assignments were made to several of the Township proprietors in Loes Plain; but the first general distribution was of meadow land, which was specially important and valuable, before clearing and culture had made higher grounds productive of the needed supply of grass for winter use. The Farm settlers did not share in this first meadow distribution, which was intended to equalize the privilege of the Township men with these Farm purchasers.

There were twenty-one shares in the first distribution in 1658, in a total of only thirty-nine acres, and these were located in two places. The first lot began between Chelmsford line and Concord River, on the west side, and, running up the river through Broad meadow, the last of the thirteen lots was just south of the Great Bridge, or Fordway. The other eight lots of this first division of meadow began at the mouth of Long Pond, and, following the Alewife or Content³ Brook, the last lot, John Baldwin's, was near Pattenville, and Danforth's lot at the right hand of the Andover or Depot Road. The agreement for this division and the following stands thus:—⁴

"It is agreed by the joynte consente of the Towne, that for the devition of meddows for the several inhabitants [?] to begin at the Lower end of the medow on the other side Concord [river] Next toward Patuckett at Chelmsford corner, and so upward to the [?] above the Bridge, and so to begin again at the pond below foxes hill, and so down Alewife brooke. and so to take the spanges of medow to the Colage meddow, and so down to Andover Line, and take all the meddow on both sides Shawshin river, to be devided by lott according as shall be adjudged by A com^{itee}, for what is rubish meddowe to be layed out quantitive, y^e every man may be accom^{odated} alike, as nere as the said com^{itee} can judge; the com^{itee} apoynted for the meshuringe and Laying out the said meddow lands and Lots of uplande are

The second division began on the Shawshin below the College Farm, at a place called by the Records the "willow spang"; and including twenty-four lots on both sides the river, extended nearly to Strongwater Brook, or half way through Tewksbury.

The third division of meadow was made also in 1658, and, after assigning four lots farther down the Shawshin to Andover bounds, passed over to the great meadow south-east of Prospect Hill, which is a mile north of Tewksbury Junction, and follows the meadow on Strongwater Brook back to the Shawshin River again. This remote division was as large as the other two, and gave all the settlers an average of ten acres of meadow in the three widely separate fields. The conditions of this pioneer farming were certainly not the most attractive, when the Township farmer must travel three miles north one day, and four miles east the next, by roads which consisted mostly of blazed trees, to bring home the meadow hay, on which his cow and horse were to subsist when winter came. This process of taking possession of the wilderness, in the name and for the benefit of civilization, tested and developed the manhood of these brave men and women.

The next general division consisted of upland; and the Farm proprietors shared with those on the Township. It was made in 1659, November, and included thirty-nine lots and forty persons; Peter Bracket and Joseph Tompson holding in common the right of John Gurney, of Braintree. The Record describes this division as "in the great common field, on the East side of Concord river, below the great Bridge." It began "at the little swamp next below the falls," or a little south of North Billerica village, and extended "down Concord river, towards Pawtucket, so far as the brook called Bacon brook," which is just south of the Salem Railroad crossing of the Concord River; "and the breadth of the said land to ly along as the cart-path that leads down towards Pawtucket," near, if not identical with, the present highway. This division averaged twenty-two acres to each person, or eight hundred and eighty in all. When the line of Mrs. Winthrop's farm was run, it was found to extend south of Bacon Brook, and cut off the north eight lots of this division. For these the owners received other lots near the head of Heath Brook in a plain called, no doubt for this reason, Recompense Plain.

At the same time another important division was made, in which the Farm proprietors did not share. It is often referred to in the Records as the "second division." It was "on the right hand of the way Leading toward gloab hill, by Shawshin River, and so joining to Shawshin River and the College farme on the southward part, and abutting on the ends of those Lots at Loose playne on the Weste; and in case there be not sufficient thare, then to take it between heath brook mouth and the highway before mentioned, and so come homeward again. And for the devition of the said lands, it is agreed it shall be devided into two devitions, until you come so far as ailwife brook, which deviding Line shall be about the middle of the Land between the above mentioned highway and Shawshin river, butting upon Loose playne and Ailwife brook. The 1st Lott shall begin next Samuel Kinsley, his Lott, and so goe on until you come to Ailwife brook; then begin at the west end of the other part of the devition, and so goe on until you come to ailwife brook; then to begin beyond the brook and run from the highway to the river, and so goe on till you come to gloab hill; then returne homeward, between the highway and heath brook, if need be."

Globe Hill is near the Shawshin, in Tewksbury, and is probably the same on which the State Alms-house now stands; and the road named is the present highway through Pattenville. This description includes the territory between Loes Plain and Fox Hill on the west, the Shawshin meadows south-east, and the Church Farm south-west. The Rangeway, which separated the First and Second Parts, as they were called, of this Second Division, began near the Asa Holden place, and passed the present fork in the roads where Mr. James Page lives. The two rows of lots were laid right and left from it, towards the road and the river. The first row of nine lots began with Thomas Hubbard's, south of Fox Hill, which passed very soon by his death to Samuel Manning. Others between the road and the Rangeway were Daniel Shed, William Patten, James Kidder, Thomas Foster, James Paterson, John Baldwin, John Marshall, and John Parker, who also bought Marshall's and owned a lot of eighty acres near Pattenville. The second part of this division began farther south, near the Deacon Edmands place, and ran farther down the river, including seventeen lots. The twenty-six lots of this division included 1.193 acres, more or less.

In 1663, December, another division of meadow land took place, and was to all the inhabitants. It began in the remote south-west part of the town, now Carlisle; four lots had Chelmsford line north, and three were in Fort-wall meadow, which reached Concord line a mile beyond Carlisle village. Coming thence, homeward, three lots were in Fort meadow, as many in Brook meadow, ten in Treble-cove meadow, four on the Concord River, two on the Pond Brook, four in Patch meadow, three in Long-hill meadow, one south-west of Gilson's Hill, and the last three on the river again opposite the Township. These lots averaged two acres each, or eighty in all.

A month later, in January, 1663-4, allotments of upland were made in several places to forty-five proprietors. Fifteen lots were in a field, beginning opposite the lower end of the Township, on the west side of Concord River, and running down the river. Nine lots ran along the Shawshin on the east side, beginning at the College Farm; twelve were in the "pine plain beyond Content" Brook, or near the Tewksbury line; three were north of Fox Hill and Brook, east of Mr. Nason's place; and six on the plain on this side of Strongwater Brook, as near as might be "to their own meadows there."

Grants made at various times and places, in this way, could not always satisfy the men who received them. One would prove less valuable or convenient than another, and in 1665, December, a committee was appointed to make a Gratuity Division, as it was called, or grants to various individuals, and exchanges with them for common land, such as equity called for, or would silence complaints. Thirty persons received such special grants; but Farley and Stearns had no share, as the committee "Judge that their divisions on the Towneship, already laid out to them, is more than in proportion is granted to other men lying as convenient." John Marshall has "two acres by his house instead of six elsewhere." John Sheldon has "3 acres & 33 pole joining to his east line of his home lot, or else 10 acres, at foxes." John Kittredge "one-third part of five acres, adjoining to the South side of his house-lot, & he is content," and so on. James Kidder received two and a half acres taken from the highway north of his house-lot, now West Street.

In the winter of 1665-6, a large meadow lying north-east of Prospect Hill was divided into forty-two lots, and granted to as many persons. In this division it was agreed that there should be no allowance of "quantity for quality," such as had been common. Another distribution was made at the same time, with the privilege to each man of choosing where his lot should lie, the quantity being one and one-quarter acres to each ten-acre lot. Seven chose lots west of Concord River, near the Great Bridge, and fourteen accepted Heath meadow for forty acres, holding it in common, and subject to such future division as they might agree upon.

The last general division of land which was made before 1685 took place in January, 1665-6. It was a meadow division, located "in the great meadow North-East of Prospect Hill," and near Andover. The following condition was attached to this action:—

"It is agreed by y^e Joint consent of the Towne, before the allotments of the northerly meadow at Prospect Hill, that in case Cambridge men shall recover any meadow in our precincts, in reference to their lots in this Towne bounds, granted them by Cambridge, that then they shall have it in this northerly meadow; and then the allotment of this meadow shall be a nullity, vnlesse the towne shall see cause to satisfy such persons (whose allotments shalbe taken away) in some other place, to their content." In other words, they did not intend, if the troublesome Cambridge claims could not be adjusted and were enforced upon them, to permit their location in any of the near and, to them, more desirable parts of the town.

The Record proceeds: "We do agree that y^e northerly meadow at Prospect Hill shalbe allotted according to towne order, to y^e wholl inhabitation concerned therein; and for the order of the lying of y^e said allotments, we do agree that there shalbee first a dividing line, from this end of the meadow to y^e further end, running as convenient as may be about y^e middle of the meadow; and the first lot shall begin at this hither end, on y^e left hand or west side of y^e dividing line, and so take y^m in order going round, coming homeward on the East side of the meadow, so that y^e last and y^e first lot will lye neer east and west of each other.

"Further we do agree that in this division there shalbee noe consideration of allowing quantity for quality to any person. Also, it was agreed that Joseph Tomson and John Bracket should have liberty to draw one lot for both their proportions.

“At the same meeting y^e alotments drawne were as followeth:—

“It was agreed that John Trull's allotment in y^e above named meadow should be put out, Because he had above his just proportion in heeth brook meadow.”

This division included about forty acres. Mr. Danforth was to divide, measure, “make a plott of, and record the whole,” for forty and two shillings; and persons concerned, who did not “seasonably attend” to the laying out of their own lots, were to pay “ninepence a person to those that do y^e work.”

This account of the distribution of lands in Billerica, in the beginning, would be far from complete without notice of the large grants and farms, held under Cambridge titles, in the south-east part of the town. The largest of these was the farm reserved by the Church in Cambridge for its special use, when it permitted the whole town to assume practical possession of the larger part of Shawshin. It consisted of seven hundred acres lying north of the Woburn Road, and extended from Woburn line to the south-east line of Mr. Hart's land on the west. Its north-east line may still be seen west of the river, a distinct ditch and ridge, with a wall in some places, which two hundred and twenty years have not made even obscure. Here

John Parker lived, certainly foremost in many respects among the earliest settlers.

The remainder of the thousand acres constituting the Church Farm was located north of Fox Hill, and took name from that fact as "Fox Farm." Mr. Daniel bought both parts. He subsequently sold the larger part to Richardson and Walker, and the Fox Farm to Joseph Davis, in whose family the place remained for about one hundred and fifty years.

North-east of the Church Farm, down the Shawshin, and mostly on the east side of it, was the College Farm. Our Records do not describe its bounds; but a plan, by Danforth, is preserved in the archives of the Massachusetts Historical Society. Whether it formed a part of the grant to President Dunster, or was an independent grant to Harvard College, does not appear. It was sold about 1750 to William Gleason.

In the other direction, above the Church Farm, and with the same extent east and west, was the farm of five hundred acres, granted to Deacon Edward Collins, and sold by him to Elder Champney. It was occupied till 1669 by his son Samuel, who sold it to Richard Daniel; and it was here that Mr. Daniel lived, south of the Woburn Road, near Shawshin River. Above this farm, President Henry Dunster, of Harvard College, had another five-hundred-acre farm, which he sold, 10 May, 1655, to Francis and John Wyman, of Woburn, for one hundred pounds; and beyond was Daniel Gookin's grant of five hundred acres, near the mouth of Vine Brook, and mostly east of the river. Mr. Mitchel, pastor of the Cambridge Church, had also a five-hundred-acre grant south-east of Gookin. All these grants, except Mr. Mitchel's, bound on Woburn line; and this reached "somewhat above the falls," in Bedford. Beyond was the three-hundred-acre farm of Edward Oakes, sold by him in 1661 to George Farley and the Ralph Hills, father and son. This probably reached the Concord line. Another farm known as the Oakes Farm consisted of one hundred and fifty acres, given to Captain Gookin in exchange for his lot on the Township, and by him sold to Thomas Oakes. It included the Bedford Springs. West of all these was Job Lane, who coming from Malden had purchased, 2 August, 1664, Governor Winthrop's large grant (already described) of his grandson, Fitz John Winthrop, of Connecticut, and lived probably at the Dutton place.

Billerica had also certain land-grants and dealings beyond her own bounds which furnish an important chapter of her early history. The small grants which Cambridge had made in the bounds of Shawshin, numbering more than one hundred and embracing ten thousand acres, were found not easy to dispose of in a way that would not embarrass the settlement. They were not valuable and attractive enough to draw many of these Cambridge families here to occupy them; but the owners would naturally seek to make as good a sale of them as they could. While these rights were thus held in suspense, the chance that they might be enforced in some unwelcome form would embarrass the measures of the settlers, and make the rights in Billerica less attractive to persons who might otherwise purchase and settle here. As a measure of relief from this difficulty, application was made to the General Court for a grant of lands elsewhere, which met with favor, as follows:—⁵

"In ans^r to the petition of the inhabitants of Billirrikey, this Court doth graunt the toune of Billirrikey eight thousand acres of lands, for the ends desired. in any place or places that are free. & not capeable of making a toune, provided that the sajd lands be laid out before the next Court of Election, and that the inhabitants of Cambridg doe accept thereof & disingage the lands desired at Billirrikey, & also that the toune of Billirrikey be seted wth twenty families at least wthin three yeares. y^t the ordinances of God may be settled & encouraged in the sajd place of Billirrikey; & it is ordered. y^t Major Willard, Cap^t. Edw. Johnson, Mr. Edward Jackson, or any two of them, wth Thomas Danforth. or any other surveyor, shall lay y^e same out at the peticoners charge, making retourne to the next Court of Election."

Jonathan Danforth, the younger brother of Thomas, was not then as well known to the General Court as he became in later years, and to him fell the task of locating this eight thousand acres. Beyond Chelmsford he had the whole Merrimack Valley to choose from, or even the Connecticut and Champlain Valleys, if it had suited Billerica's profit to go so far. The survey which he made, and returned through the above Committee, on which the location was finally sanctioned, is fortunately still preserved, in the office of the Secretary of State;⁶ and on this authority some facts long forgotten have recently come to light, and we are able to reclaim our own. As described and approved by the Court,⁷ it was located as follows:

⁵ Colonial Records. Vol. IV, Part I, p. 200.

⁶ Ancient Maps and Plans. Vol. II. Index: "Billerica."

⁷ Colonial Records. Vol. IV, Part I, p. 202.

"Layd out to the vse of the inhabitants of Billirrikey, eight thousand acres of land, lying vpon Merremacke Riuer, on both sides thereof, taking in the trucking bowse now inhabited by J^{no}. Cromwell, the said land being lajd out about sixe thousand three hundred acres, on the East side the riuer, and about seventeene hundred and fivety acres on the west side the said riuer, and is bounded by the wildernes surrounding the same, as is deimonstrated by a plott thereof, taken and made by Jonathan Danforth, surveior, and exhibbited to this Court by Major Symon Willard and Cap^t. Edward Johnson, appointed by this Court, Octob. 14, 1656, to lay out the same.

"SYMON WILLARD.

"EDWARD JOHNSON."

"The Court allowes & approoves of the retourne of these co^missioners in reference to the land herein expressed. — 1657, May 15."

This survey was the earliest ever made, it is safe to say, in the Merrimack Valley beyond Chelmsford, and is the starting point in the history of Dunstable. The location was in a part of the valley commonly called Naticook, but which Danforth spells "Naticott." The name was derived from a little brook which, according to Fox,⁶ comes into the Merrimack on the west, "just above Thornton's ferry." The grant began at the Penichuck Brook, which forms the north bound of Nashua, and extends on the west of the river as far north as the Souhegan River. Then it follows the Merrimack nearly a mile, passing two islands, the larger of which received the surveyor's name "Jonathan," then runs eastward two or three miles and southward five or six, returning to its starting point. This Naticott grant remained for a year in the hands of Billerica, when John Parker received authority to dispose of it. (Grants, page 7.)

"9th. 6m.. 1658. It is jointly agreed by vs, the inhabitance of Billerica, That John Parker hath given to him (by the towne) full power to make sale and give assurance of that eight thousand acres of land granted to us, and for our use, by the Honord Generall Court, which land lyeth at Natticott, upon merimack River. A month later Parker had sold the land, and agrees with the town as follows:—

"2:5:1000. The town did order John Parker to bring in an account to the town concerning" [remainder worn]."

William Brenton, who bought the Naticott land of Billerica, was a Boston merchant and leading business man: often one of the Selectmen. He removed soon after this date to Rhode Island, and was Governor of that Colony in 1666-8, and died in 1674.

* The above original agreement with Parker has been preserved, and was recently discovered, as a loose slip, in the First Volume of Billerica Records.

Litchfield, which was taken from Dunstable and incorporated in 1724, was known as "Brenton's Farms." John Farmer surmised that he had an early grant of land there, and other writers have accepted the theory and repeated it as history. Our Records have fortunately preserved the true account of the matter and demonstrate that the Naticott grant, the earliest in New Hampshire west of Rockingham County, was made to Billerica.

One circumstance connected with the Naticott grant is interesting, and may be noticed here. "The trucking howse now inhabited by John Cromwell" was found by Danforth, when making his survey in the winter of 1656-7, just above Thornton's Ferry, on the west of the river, and is entered there on his plot returned to the Court. These houses for trade with the Indians, pushed on beyond the line of settlements, were a feature of the early life of New England. Probably our mysterious Shawshin House belongs to this class. But the man who lived at Naticott in 1656 must have been much the earliest English inhabitant of all that part of New Hampshire, and as Billerica found him there she owes recognition to his memory. Tradition has been busy with his name, but as some of the reports have been wide of the truth, we may suspect others are fabulous. The tale has been that he had a house first in Tyngsborough and later at Thornton's Ferry; that in his Indian traffic he used his hand and foot for weights, incurring the hate of the red men, until they came, burnt his house, and would have killed him; but, getting a hint of their coming, he just escaped, before his flight burying money and treasure, which was found many years after in Tyngsborough; all which has been said to be "as early as 1665."

The facts which are proved are, that Cromwell was living at Thornton's Ferry in 1656; and that, two or three years later, he purchased of Capt. Edward Johnson a grant of three hundred acres of land, made to him in 1658, and situated just north of the Nacook or Howard Brook in Tyngsborough. To this place Cromwell removed, built a house large for the time and had a large store, but soon died in 1661. His inventory, in the handwriting of John Parker, is preserved. It was taken in January, 1661-2, and embraces household, farming, and trading stock, such as suggest no recent Indian raid, and could hardly have been gathered there save by a wealthy madman, which he plainly was not, in the face of danger of such attack. Any later discovery of buried treasure cannot be used to reproach his memory, for he died in his bed, and would not have left his widow in need of it, to mortgage and loose the place there, as she was compelled to do. His wife was Salome, daughter of William Batcheller, of Charlestown, and he left two sons, John and Benjamin, and a daughter, Rebecca, who were living in 1702. It is not certain that Cromwell was a model Puritan; but the case against his memory is shadowy, and he is entitled to the benefit of the doubt. He was an active, enterprising man, as the pioneer at that day in the Merrimack Valley needed to be. The "pound weight" story is charged to various men, and more than doubtful in any case; and it is not clear that John Cromwell is not entitled to honorable remembrance, or that he brought any reproach upon the great family name which he bore.

The result of Parker's negotiations with the Cambridge proprietors took shape in an instrument known in the Records (p. 137) as "our great deed." I quote, omitting technical and immaterial portions:—

"BILLERICA:

"DEED OF THEIR TOWNE FROM CAMBRIDGE PROPRIETORS.

"We whose names are subscribed, for sundry good consideracons. vs thereunto moving. and for valluable consideracon to us respectively payd * have sold * vnto the Inhabitants of Billerica * * and such others as shall from time to time be by them admitted as free denizens of the said place. & to the enjoyment of the priviledges thereof. all o' respective rights & interest therein or vnto any part or parcell of the said land, now called by the name of Billerica, al^s Shawshin * * (only excepting & reserving our Joynt & respective interests that any of us have in the farne. wherein John Parker now dwelleth, comonly called by the name of the Churches farne. i. e., the church at Cambridge, with free liberty on all the commons of the said place. for the Inhabitants on the said farne, from time to time, for herbage, timber, & firewood. as any other of the Inhabitants, and a Joynt interest therein, together with the said Towne and inhabitants thereof). To have & to hold * * Provided always, this instrum^t is to be vnderstood of every man's engagem^t to be only for & in the behalfe of himselfe, his own heires * * & no further or other. In witness whereof wee have put to o^r hands and seals this 25th day of March, Anno Dom. 165(?)."

The last figure is torn off in the original, but should probably be "9." The Deed was not recorded until 1671, and it must be a slip of the recorder's pen which makes the year 1650. One of the signers, Martha Bradshaw, did not acquire that name by her marriage until 1665. and it is probable that several years passed before all these signatures were obtained. The names of the signers may be found on pages 13 and 14, being those not starred in the list there given.

One other important grant to Billerica enters into our early history. In the Records of the General Court for 1661. May 22, we find the following:—

“In ans^r to the petition of the inhabitants of Billerikey, the Court, having considered of this petition together with the petition of Mr. Deane Winthrop for laying out the lands graunted his mother, & being certainly informed that the towne of Billerikey is a hopeful plantation, & that they have & doe encourage & mainteine the ministry amongst them, & have waded thro^e many difficultjes in purchasing much of theire land, & never had so much as one-third part of lands graunted them by this Court, as other villages inferio^r to them have had, doe therefore graunt the sajd towne fower thousand acres of land, in such place or places where they can find it wthin this jurisdiction, for the redemption of the sajd lands, provided it shall not pjudice a plantation or any former graunt; & that Cap^t. Edward Johnson, Thomas Addams, wth Jonathan Danforth, surveyo^{rs}, be appointed to lay it out & make returne to the next Court of Elections.”

The disposition which Billerica made of this four thousand acres was as follows (Grants, pp. 3 and 11):—

“They do grant to him, y^e said Jonath. Danforth, with his father-in-law, John Parker * * jointly and together, one thousand acres of land in the wilderness, which land is part of that 4,000 acres which was granted,” etc. * * “on condition that they the aforesaid John & Jonath. shall be at all cost & charges in and about discovering & laying out of the whole 4,000 acres,” etc.

“They do grant to * * John Parker 3,000 acres of land more, which was y^e remainder of that 4,000 acres formerly spoken of, all which lyeth up & downe in the wilderness * * for & in consideration of forty pounds sterling, which the said John was to pay to Mr. Samuel Whiting, our minister, & for satisfaction in full for charges due to y^e said John about building of our meeting house. And also upon the validdity of this grant, the said John Parker * * stands bound & ingaged to the Towne of Billerica, that he * * shall purchase & procure, in the behalf of & for the use of the Towne * 300 acres of land & upward, lying on the West of Concord river, that is to say, that wholl farme which was sometime in y^e possession of Mr. Thomas Weld, of Roxbury * * and make it sure to them according to law.”

This four-thousand-acre grant was thus used to secure for Billerica three things: Two-thirds of Mr. Whiting's salary for the year 1662; the completion of their first meeting-house; and a good title to the Weld Farm of five hundred and thirty acres of land, which lay along the Concord River on the west side, beginning nearly opposite the Two Brothers.

Of this four thousand acres, one thousand were given to Danforth and Parker for expense of discovery and survey of the remainder. The Records of the Court do not show where this land was located.

The remaining three thousand acres were located in three places. The first and largest fraction was in what became Dunstable. The description of it is found in the deed to Thomas Brattle, executed 1662, July 16, and signed by John Parker, Jonathan Danforth, and Thomas Henchman, of Chelmsford. They sell "1,600 acres more or less," and "in the wilderness on the west side Merrimack river, upon forrest-field hill and Salmon brooke, beginning at the South west corner of Mr. Samuel Cole's last grant, & is bounded by him on the east." [His farm of four hundred acres was on Merrimack River, at and beyond Tyngsborough depot.] "Edward Cowell's farm South west," [which consisted of two hundred acres and began at Mashapoag Pond,] "and elsewhere by marked trees." Thomas Brattle, the purchaser, was a leading Boston merchant, and one of the wealthiest men in the Colony. His son, Thomas, was Treasurer of Harvard College and founder of Brattle Street Church. The father was the first signer of the petition in 1673 for the incorporation of Dunstable. Like Brenton he has also been credited with a "grant" of his large farm in Dunstable, and the fact that it was originally Billerica land has been forgotten. When he procured a deed from the Indians, as he did in 1671, confirming his title, the tract is said to contain two thousand acres. It included the present village of Dunstable.

The second part of this grant was located as follows:—¹¹

"1663, 6, June.

"Lajd out to the toune of Billirrikey one parcell of land contelning eight hundred acres. more or lesse, lying in the wilderness on the north side of Merremacke River, begining at the southeast angle of Mr. Dummers farne & being bounded vpon him twenty two pole; also bounded by Mr. Webb's farne (which joynes to him there) thirty five pole (vpon his northeast corner) westward. & sixty fower pole southward; from thence it runs in a long spruise swamp, about half a point northward of the east, fower hundred & eight pole; then ruling in a streight lje from thence to Long Pond; being partly bounded by that pond and partly by Mr. Batters

Mascuppet, vnto a great rocke. called by the English. Tray Table Rocke; on the northwest it is bounded by Mascuppet Pond and another little pond vntill you come to Mr. Dumer's line, where wee began, all which is more fully demonstrated by a plott taken of the same. Mascuppet Pond is called Tyng's Pond on the modern maps; and this location can be easily traced in the west part of Dracut, including a portion of Tyngsborough. When and to whom this land was sold, I have not discovered.

The remaining five hundred acres were located by the General Court, as follows:—¹²

.. 1667. Oct. 9.

.. Laid out to Billirrica five hundred acres of land in the wilderness, on the north side of Merremack Riuer & on the East side of Beavar Brook, a little below Patuckett. It is bounded on the south & on the southeast wholly by lands formerly graunted to Richard Russell, Esq., and on the west by the aforesaid Beavar Brook, elsewhere by the wilderness. The line on the east side of it is one hundred ninety six pole in length. running halfe a point westward of the north w^{ch} is exactly the continuance of the long line on the east side of Mr. Russell's farm; also both the lines on the north side of it are exactly paralell to the lines on the south side of it, the most northerly of which is one hundred & sixty pole long & runns halfe a point westward of the most southwest; the other lines runns two degrees westward of the southwest & by south fower hundred eighty & seven pole, w^{ch} closeth to the brook. all which are sufficiently bounded by markt trees & pillars of stone. The form thereof is more fully declared on the other side, by a plott taken of the same.

.. "The Court allowes and approves of this retourne aboue mentioned."

Beayer Brook comes into the Merrinack from the north in Lowell; and this tract of five hundred acres was held for exchange and was at last exchanged for the similar "farm," on the west side of the Concord River, which had been early granted to Reverend Mr. Weld, of Roxbury. This farm extended down the river from the Allen grant, which became a part of the Blood's farms. Probably the Weld Farm was never exactly located. The town had assumed possession and granted portions of it long before the title was finally transferred. Parker's death occurred before he had completed this part of his engagement, and it was not until 1694, March 6, that deeds were exchanged with Mr. Palsgrave Alcocke, of Roxbury, who then held the Weld Farm title; he receiving the five hundred acres of land above described. Mr. Alcocke previously owned the grant of sixteen hundred acres to Mr. Russell, which lay between the Billerica land and Merrimack River.

It appears from this survey of Billerica's ancient possessions, that the villages of Bedford, Carlisle, Tewksbury and North Tewksbury, Dunstable, Merrimac, and Litchfield, are all located on land which once belonged to this town.

CHAPTER IV.

THE STORY AS TOLD IN THE RECORDS.

THE Records of Billerica furnish the warp and much of the woof of its history. As a whole, they have been well made and very well preserved. Their publication in a full and literal transcript, for at least the first hundred years, would be a useful contribution to the history of New England, and have great local value. To guard against the possibility of future loss, the town would be wise in printing them, and it is perhaps not out of place here to commend this important question to the intelligent consideration of its citizens.

During the early years, it will be expedient to quote the Records extensively; and a description of these volumes, their character and contents, may properly introduce this chapter.

The town has been fortunate in the services of intelligent and careful clerks. Danforth, after Parker, was clerk for twenty-one years, 1665-86, and gave character to the system, which remained substantially unchanged for two hundred years. Few records made today are as clear and easy to read as are those of Danforth. And a peculiarity of his method, for which those who consult the Billerica Records may be grateful to his foresight, is found in the separation of the records of births, marriages, and deaths, from those of current town action, and their arrangement in special volumes; not chronologically, as was usually the case, but by families. By this method, with the aid of the alphabetical index, the record of any family as far as it was made can be found fully and immediately.

These Town Records consist of:—

- I. The series of volumes recording current town action.
- II. Two volumes of land-grants.

III. Successive volumes of births, marriages, and deaths.

Of the Records proper, Volume I has lost its binding and three leaves, or six pages. Fortunately, the first leaf has been preserved, the missing leaves containing pages 3-6; but portions of these pages were transferred to the Book of Grants, and very little is really lost. The Reverse of Volume I contains seventy-eight pages, mostly devoted to record of the earliest land-grants, the substance of which was also transcribed in the volume of land-grants. The first leaf, or two pages, of this Reverse of Volume I is missing, and we have no clue to its contents. Pages three, six, and seven, of the Reverse, are specially important, as they contain Parker's earliest record of the births, marriages, and deaths, prior to 1660. These were transcribed by Danforth in the new volume which he soon after began; but the copy contains one important error, and the existence of this earlier authority has been commonly overlooked. The original agreement with Mr. Whiting is also found on page 4 of the Reverse; a copy being also in "Land-Grants," page 67.

Volume I extends to 1685; Volume II, to 1706; Volume III, to 1749; Volume IV, to 1780; and Volume V, to 1796.

All these volumes except the first are substantially bound, and nothing appears to have been lost from them. For more than a hundred years they record not only town action, but also that of the selectmen, and the disbursements of the treasurer. The tax-lists were unfortunately not recorded until 1733, but, after that date, the series is continuous. Prior to 1733, the only list which has been preserved is the "minister's rate" of 1663.

Two volumes are occupied with land-grants. The first Book of Grants was prepared by Danforth in 1665. In it, he was instructed to transcribe all previous grants which had not become void; and, after a careful examination by individuals, it was ratified by the town, and pronounced authoritative. All later grants to 1685 were entered in this volume, which is mostly in Danforth's fine handwriting, and is certainly one of the best preserved and handsomest volumes of records, two hundred years old, to be found. The Grants are arranged under the name of the recipient, and the alphabetical index makes it easy to trace the possessions of each inhabitant. The volume contains also the "Whiting agreement," descriptions of the more important early roads, and some of the early covenants and "standing orders." Volume II of the Land-Grants continues the record after 1685. It contains a larger number of highway descriptions, and is almost entirely in the good handwriting of Oliver Whiting, who was town clerk 1704-23.

The third series consists, prior to 1850, of four volumes, containing "Births, Marriages, and Deaths." The first was prepared by Danforth in 1665, as above suggested, and continued in use until about 1730. But in the later years, after 1700, the number of entries falls off, in a way which suggests that the record was much less complete than it had been while Danforth kept it. The difficulty in tracing many family lines during this period strengthens this probability that the record was imperfect. The second volume was prepared in 1730, and a large part of the contents of Volume I was copied in it. But the transcript was not complete, and it was probably the design to omit all families the representatives of which were not still resident in town. For this reason the Bedford families do not appear.

The Third Volume came into use about 1790 and continued until 1844, when it was displaced by a thin volume, used for ten years, following the chronological, and not the family, order. In 1855, the system was changed again by the State, and separate volumes are used for births, marriages, and deaths; each with a second index volume. Whoever has occasion to trace a family through this period must explore six volumes, and if his experience is like this compiler's, he will sigh for the simplicity and convenience of the earlier system of Danforth.

The earliest record is as follows. A few words obliterated in the margin are supplied in brackets.

• "[?] November, 1654.

"Sertin Orders made by vs the present inhabitantes of the Towne of Billerkey, for y^e weall of y^e [town]:

"4^b. Lots to be inhabited within a yere. That what person soever takes up any accomida[tions] in this place for propriety." * * *

[The remainder of this paragraph must be inferred from the caption.]

"[1^b] If any person shall leave any wood or Timber lying anywhere on the coman Lande above the full time of twelve months, it shall be forfeit, and free for any man y^e is an inhabitant to take [?] for his owne use, excepting all such wood or timber as is fallen for the publique use of the Towne.

"3^b. It is ordered that for hoppoles. if any person doe fall any on o^r comons, as aforesaide, and cary or sell them to be made use of in any other towne, as aforesaide, they shall forfeit for every hundred of poles the sune of twenty shillings; all which forfeitures shall be taken up by the constable then being, from time to time. for the use of the towne."

"9: 9mo 1658. It is ordered and joyntly agreed, that such as either haue already or hereafter shall take vp any Alotments in the toune vpon grant from the toune shall be equally acomidated with those vpon Mr. Dudley's farme, no person exceding a twelfth p^t of the saide farme, which is one hundred and thirteen acors of vplande and twelve acors of meddow, which [is] granted a ten acor Lott. and so in [proportion] to others that haue eight or six [or fve] acor Lotts: the inhabitants that doe [take up] alotments of the toune as aforesaid [shall pay] to the purchasers of the aforesaid farme of Mr. Dudley, he that takes vp [ten] acors for his house lott the one halfe of what a twelfth p^t of the said farme at the first did cost of the aforesaid Mr. Dudley: which 12th p^t is usually called a single share; which pay is to be made by those that take vp ten acors for a house Lott, as aforesaid, and so others acording to ther proportions and at such times as is agreed vpon and written in a paper written the day and yere aboue specified. the times of payment is, the one halfe the next yere after the [alotment] and the other halfe the yere [after] that first payment, in corne [?] currant and merchantable."

The remainder of the second page is torn off, and the next four pages are missing. Page seven begins with the following, which is numbered "7," implying that it is one of a series of "orders." The contents of the first six orders can be only conjectured.

"[It is agreed by the town] that for the raysinge publique charges, shall continue in the way we are at present in, for the building a house for a minister and for the maintenance of a minister, that is acordinge to o' severall proportions of land and meadowes; and it is agreed, that all devitions of Lands and meadows and comons and all other priviledges shall be devided and layed out acordinge to o' publique charges; also, this way of rateing shall continue without alteration vnlesse it be don by the joynte consente of the wholl inhabitants; and the devitions in comon fellds from time to time shall be devided by Lott for propriety. both to us, the present inhabitants, and also to all others y' shall hereafter be excepted and entertained as inhabitants amongst vs. But for such farmes as doe Ly within the boundes of o' Towne vnoccupied. or such as are occupied by non-residents, shall haue no priviledge in devitions of lands, nor comonage of wood and Timber and feed for kattell as o'selves, nor be rated alike, nor no other wayes than the propriety and free denizens y' are inhabitants shall agree. And it is furd' agreed, y' when any furdre Addition of meddows be made to the inhabitants, or any of them, there publique charges shall be borne vp acordinge to the former proportions, excepting such meddows as are made by any person out of swamp or other wayes that is not granted by the Towne [obscure] meddows; all such medows so [made] are freed from all publique [charge which] concerns the Towne."

Agreements eight and ten relate to highways, and are quoted in the chapter devoted to that subject. Agreement nine, on page 8, is this: "It is ordered that no proprietor or inhabitant within the boundes of our Towne shall at any time receiue any inmates or Tenants without the consent and approual of the Townsmen. he or they y' shall soe do, shall forfeit to the Towne the sume of twenty shill p' week for euery person so receiued & entertained as aforesaid." [And in the later handwriting of Clerk William Tay, it is added:] "And euery p^m that shall inhabit [?] the p^cincts of the town w'out the Towns consent shall forfeit twenty shill: p' weeke for euery week abiding as [?]"

And in article eleven, "it is ordered that not any inhabitants in this towne shall turn out any cattell in the Springe tyme from yere to yere without a keeper, until the herd goe oute, Leaste he thereby doe damage to his Neighbors meddows." Article twelve relates to the first division of meadow lands, and will be found in the chapter on that subject.

These earliest records show us the questions which the town had to meet at the beginning. It is noteworthy that the care of the fathers for the character of those who were to make homes here inspires their first record. There was no welcome for such as could not bring good testimonials. The policy was that of the towns generally, and it was not illiberal but wise. If the doors had been open in our New England towns to all the restless and unworthy adventurers sure, in an age like that particularly, to seize such opportunities, the evil heaven would have lowered the standard of character and exposed the settlements to mischief, if not shipwreck.

And the fathers did not wait for the official sanction by the Court of their new English name before they began to use "Billerica." It stands at the head of the first page of Records, in 1654, and in the Boston record of Danforth's marriage, 22d November of that year, it also appeared.

In 1658, when Mr. Whiting came to Billerica, he found twenty-five families in town; eleven on the Township, seven on the Dudley Farm, and seven elsewhere, of whom but one was north of the Township, Paterson, and he adjoined it. His own house was built, but not yet finished; the meeting-house was not begun. There was a road to Woburn, another to Concord, one to Chelmsford, and one to Andover; whether the road to Cambridge was distinct from the Woburn Road west of the Shawshin is very doubtful. These roads were little more than paths in the woods; indeed the word "path" is not infrequently applied to them in the Records. Fences were not yet built, and the care of cattle and swine was a matter of common concern. A herd in the care of a keeper, driven out in the morning and home at night, was the natural convenience of their primitive life. Sometimes the herd would go in one direction, and then in another. Fox Hill and its western slopes long furnished the herd a range, and another extensive common field was beyond North Billerica.

The care of the common lands of the town already claimed attention. Citizens had privileges of use for cutting wood and timber and feeding "commonage," as the right was called; but it was restricted to their own use, and unauthorized traffic was forbidden.

There was much surveying to be done in those early days. The woods and meadows would be carefully explored in all directions for lots and ranges likely to prove most valuable and convenient; and it gives one a sense of weariness to sit down, with the book of Land-Grants in hand, and think of Danforth's travel and toil in running the thousands of lines there described. For his services in surveying, plotting, and recording the several lots "drawn by the whole inhabitants," the town agreed with Danforth, "10: 9: 59," that he should receive two and one-half pence for every acre, "to be payed vnto him out of y^e Towne stock collected by Rate," etc.

It needed hardy, courageous, self-relying men and women to plant homes in this wilderness; men and women who could live happily without luxuries, or what their children deem conveniences, and fertile in resource to supply their own necessities. Such, it is plain, were these Billerica men. They had discouragements, dangers, hardships, in plenty, but they were of too sturdy stuff to surrender.

While they were laying these foundations, they were watching with keen interest the course of events in Mother England. Those were the days of the Commonwealth, which enkindled all their Puritan sympathies. Cromwell's own name of Oliver found its way, not by the force of personal admiration, but following naturally the line of family relationship, to the second son of the Billerica pastor. Parker and Danforth and their neighbors would often talk over, by their winter fires, the latest news of the Protector's policy and battles, and were thrilled with the tidings of his death a few weeks after Mr. Whiting's removal to the town. The Commonwealth in England had nowhere more earnest friends than in New England. It can not be doubted that the seed then sown in the hearts of the fathers bore legitimate fruit a century later in the American Revolution.

The building of the minister's house and the raising of his salary brought heavier common expense, and a collector was needed. So, "11th 11^{mo} 1658," John Parker was empowered "to gather, receive, and take up all and euery p't and p'sell of the severall sumes due vpon the rate made for the building and finishinge A house for A minister, and all other pay that is or shall be due from any of the inhabitantes or any other proprietors y^e are non-resident, as is or shall be by him, the saide John Parker, requested to receive and disburse for the use of the town as aforesaid; and we doe also impower the saide John Parker to make distress vpon the goodes or Landes of any such person as shall refuse to pay there dues." They promise to defend him in any suit to which his lawful acts in this office may expose him; require a true account of all his receipts and disbursements; and undertake to make good any deficiency if his authorized payments exceed receipts. This agreement bore at first the signatures of the inhabitants; but the Record does not preserve the names.

During the year 1659, arrangements for building a meeting-house were made, as elsewhere related. "Goodman Shead and Goodman Kinsley shall have Hogrooten Lott, if they doe desire it"; perhaps the name repelled them, and they did not. A committee are instructed "to ad such Lande to fox hill Lott as they shall see meet for the incouraging such persons as shall enjoy the same"; and Goodman Walsley [?] was granted ten acres of land to set a house on, "on the East side of bare hill, leading towards Shawshin; also he is granted 10 acors of medow"; but both these last grants were made "null" afterwards. July 15, Lieut. William French was chosen "Comitioner for making the cuntry rate and caring in a duplicate to y^e shiere meeting, and George Farley and Jonathan Danforth is joyned with him for this worke." "John Durante is granted $\frac{1}{4}$ of a ten acre lot of uplande to set a hous on, and it is lefte to y^e comitee y^t Lays out all other Lots, to lay it out where is most convenient: y^a it was determined by John Durant to have y^e Land next Miles Reding, and the Towne granted he should have y^t to Will Hail's." Reding's land became John Brackett's at the "Corner," and this grant to Durant embraced the present homestead of Mr. Anthony Jones. A grant follows to Edward Iron, which became a nullity. William Sheldon asked that the committee might view a piece of land which he wished, and act upon his request as they might deem "most advantageous to the publique"; but his petition was not granted. He held his grant on condition of building "a mill to grind corn," and in 1663 the town "siezed the forfeiture," the condition not being performed.

"6: 12: 59. The Town doe agree that there shall be a Towne meeting for the wholl inhabitants the first second day in enery month from time to time; and all those that are y^e present inhabitants shall pay [for?] absence one shilling; and also those that doe meet what our acts shall be de[clared?] shall stand as vallyd acts, and the fines shall be gathered by the constable then being from [time to time?] and shall be disposed of as them that doe meet shall see cause, and the time of meeting is to begin about the sunn one our and a halfe by; and whosoever is Not at y^e meeting [within one our?] after the time set, shall pay the fine vnlesse he can giue a good account of his being absent." There would be murmurings at least if citizens were now fined for absence from a monthly town meeting!

The first record of Town officers appointed is made in March, 1659-60. Samuel Champney is chosen constable; Jonathan Danforth and Henry Jestes, surveyors; and "John Parker is added to them to help be(?) over the work about the bridge and casway at Shawshin," which was near his house. The Selectmen were John Parker, Leift^t. Will French, Ralph Hill, Sen., Thomas Foster, and Jonathan Danforth. John Sterne and John Baldwin "are apointed to vew fences." John Parker was "chosen to carry the votes for Nomination of Magistrates and Country Treasurer," and also to attend upon the next General Court with the Town's petition "for Attaining of Mr. Weld's farme on the other side Concord River, to the Towne as other Common Lands, if the Court pleased to grante the same and to give Mr. Weld some land elsewhere." But the petition, if presented, failed, and the town did not gain full title to this land for thirty years, although it early began to make grants upon it.

John Hall receives but declines a grant of land. George Farley is chosen to serve on the grand jury, and Ralph Hill, Jun., on the jury of trials. Jonathan Danforth "is chosen deputy for the town to joyne with the Comitee to isew the buseness about County bridges and also to answer the presentments about Shawshin bridge," which had been complained of.

"2: 5: 60. The town do consente to Captin Gookin y^t he shall haue 40 or 50 acors of land in some convenient place where it shall be found for convenient cituation to build vpon and break vp, in lew of which p^rcell of Lande y^t is granted to him by the Town Lying on the Township, and a committee is appointed to make the exchange." His lot on the Township was on the south corner of Long and West Streets, where the Library, Church, Post-Office, and Town Hall now stand, and his fifty acres in exchange were laid out "on the south side the Town, and a little southeast of Nuttin's pond."

During this year, the town "accepts" as inhabitants the brothers Peter and John Bracket, and Joseph Tomson and Simon Crosby, whose wives were sisters of the Brackets, all from Braintree; also of John Kittredge and Roger Toothaker. And Benjamin Scot, brother of Christopher Webb's wife, had "leave to live in town," but did not accept it.

"John Bracket, requesting of the Town a small skirt of Lande Lying between his hous Lott and the highway on the East, together with a small Angl of Land Lyinge crosse the upper road way at Abot's Bridge and Simon Burd's fence according to two trees already marked by Jonathan Danforth, and so runninge to the hither corner bounde mark of John Durant's house Lott, the Towne grant his request, provided that John Bracket at his owne charge shall make a good and sufficient Bridge over that durty place (called Abots Bridge) both watter course and all the bad way on each side so far as is needful, which sufficient way shall be Judged and accepted of by the present surveyors and the work to be done by the said John Brackett by the Last of the Nexte month ensewing, or else this grant to be voyde." Bracket's house stood between the brooks at the corner, and this record identifies the locality, but does not explain the source of the name, of Abot's Bridge.

In December, 1660: "At a Meeting at Leiftent. French's, the major prt of y^e Townsmen did agree y^t Will Browne shold wayt sum time for the disposinge of his acomidations y^t was granted him by the Towne, in reference to the getting of his charges y^t he had expended upon the premises by way of improvement of the same himself, or by such other person as the Towne shall approue on, by his procuring or otherwise procured by the Towne; it was also yielded to the saide Will Browne that it sholde be propounded to the towne and move to another vote whether Simon Crosby shall injoy the Bargain sould to him by the saide Will Browne, whether the said Simon shall injoy the same notwithstanding the vote y^t is paste by the towne already, or whether he shall not injoy it." The result was no doubt in favor of Simon Crosby, as he henceforth appears as a citizen. This action, it will be observed, is of the "Townsmen," a frequent early name for the officials commonly known as Selectmen. Was not this early word better than that which usage has adopted?

It was soon found important to define the functions of these all important officials of the New England Town. The Town itself was an experiment in local government such as the world had never tried until the fathers set it in motion on these shores; and its successful working was and is still fundamental in the American system. Upon the Selectmen much of this success depended, and Billerica thus outlined their duties:—

“19: 9: 1660. The severall p^ticulars drawne vp for instructions for the Townsmen. accordinge to which they are to act in the Towne affairs. This was voted by the major prt of the Towne.

“1st. That what worke or business is by order of Courte Assigned on the Selectmen, or Injoynd on the Towne, the Selectmen shall take due care to effect the same so as may best conduce to the publique good, and no damage by the neglect thereof.

“2nd. As often as they shall see Needful, they shall giue publique notice to the Inhabitance to meet together, & what orders or determinations shall be passed by publique vote of the Town, made by there Selectmen, the Selectmen shall take due care to execute, fulfill, and acomplish the same without respect of any man's person.

“3rd. They shall take due care for the maintenance, repairing, and well ordering of all such things wherein the Towne hath a comon interest, as the meeting house, Amunitione, ponde, stocks, common highways, common herdes, and the like.

“4th. They shall make such prudentiall orders and impose such penalties, and duly publish and execute the same, as may best efecte the execution of the premisses for the publique weall of the Towne.

“5th. That the nessary charges expended on the premisses in the execution thereof be discharged by an equall Rate made by the Townsmen and levied by the Constable on the severall Inhabitants and Proprietors accordinge to orders.

“6th. The Constable at y^e end of his yere shall giue in his acountes vnto the Townsmen (and any other person that shall receiue anything of the Townes debts, or money in Like manner) of what they haue receiued of the Towne by way of Rate or otherwayes, of the publique stocke, and how they haue disbursed the same, which shall be cept vpon record in a Booke.

“7th. The Surveyors of the highwayes shall take order for there work from the Townsmen, and shall take due care for the repairing of all Country Roades in the Towne. (and of no other without p^ticular order), and they shall keep vpon record (in a book fairly written) the names of all such persons as are improued therein during there yere and deliuer the same to the Townsmen then in place.

“8th. The Townsmen shall carefully examine Town records which are already recorded, and wherein any of them are not so fully expressed as to the true intent of the Towne they shall corect and amende the same.

“9th. Whatever damage they shall aprehende to come to the Towne by any person within or without the Towne, by appropriating, intruding, or dammifing or exceedinge there owne due proportion in any wise, in any of the Towne comons, Lands, or woods, or other publick stocke, Libertyes, or interests in y^e Towne, accordinge to there best discretion they shall timely preuent and remoove y^e same; and where any Lands are in question at the present, whether they are or shall be the Just right of such prsons as Lay claime to the same, they shall Judge accordinge to there Best discretions and either more fully confirm the same or else vindicate such Lands to the Towne.

"10th. In case complainte be made by any man wantinge his due and Just proportion granted him by the Towne, they shall take due care that it be made good accordinge to there beste discretione.

"11th. All lands which are to be recorded to the propriety of any, a copy of the same shall first be vewed and approued by the Townsmen before they are entered in the Towne booke.

"12th. The Townsmen shall demande and carefully examine & receiue and pay all Towne debtes, and in case any refuse to pay, to destraine by the constable accordinge to the former orders.

"13th. They shall haue no power to grant any house Lott or acomidations to any person, vnless it be in making satisfactions to persons damnfied by the highwayes going cross y^r propriety, the which they shall haue power to act in accordinge to y^r best discretione.

"19. 9. 1660. this was uoted on y^e affirmative."

"27: 12: 64. The Town voted these instructions be not in force, but as they are voted by the Town from yeare to yeare." And a frequent vote of later years was to repeat previous instructions to the Selectmen.

In the Treasurer's accounts for this year, Henry Jeffs has credit for "300 briks for y^e minister's chimney"; Ralph Hill, Sen., and Thomas Patten are charged thirteen shillings each for "not trayninge"; and Will Sheldon, James Paterson, and John Kittredge, for "defect in trayninge," two shillings.

"17 December, 1660. Leften^t. Will^e French is chosen Deputy for this Town for the Next Gen^rl. Court, and no longer." Two days later he was in his seat at Boston, the first Deputy from Billerica to the General Court.

On page 27, an important letter is found:—

"18: 11th mo. 1660. A copy of a letter from Major Willard, directed to John Parker: the contentes follow:

"Loving and kind friend, you haue heard of the many notions between my son Blood and myselfe about the farme adjoining to the New addition to your towne; also you remember the agreements that we made about running the Line between you and the farme, which, when I came with the men of Concord to [run?] it out, I had forgott: therefore, to prevent any further troubles. I pray, let that agreement [with?] y^rself, Goodman Hill, and Gou. ffarley, which my sonn Blood and myselfe made, let it [stand?] and continue; and to this eande I commit the thinge to my son Blood, wholly: in witness whereto I set my hande.

"Dated this 18: January, 1660.

SIMON WILLARD."

This forgetfulness of the good Major was apparently the basis of a claim made by Concord about 1700, and of a controversy carried up to the General Court, concerning these lines.

In 1661, the town agreed that the clerk should have "twelve pence per a page," and for every land-grant entered in the book sixpence from the grantee; and sixpence for every copy taken out of the book.

"The town did agree with John Parker to look out some land for the towne, to the vallew of four thousand acres granted to the town by the General Court; and for what time the said John doth expende in looking for the said Lande, they do covenant to pay vnto him six shillings a day, and also to pay him for what other charges he shall necessarily be at in hireing Indians to discour or otherwayes, except his own provitions, which he is to bare himself."

The location and disposition of this grant are described elsewhere. The pay was probably not large enough to tempt Mr. Parker to devote any more time than was necessary to the service.

In 1661, we find an order concerning the "common herd":—

"3: 2: 61. The Townsmen do order:

"1. That there shall be a comon Herde kept in the toune; or more herds if it is more convenient for the inhabitants who Live remote from the senter of the Toune.

"2^v. That all such persons as Live convenient to turn there catell to the comon herd, shall pay their full proportion to the same, whether there catell be turned to the herd or not, if they goe without a cow[?]keeper.

"3^v. That all such persons as live remote from the Toune, who can not so conveniently turne there cattell to the comon herd, shall put there cattell vnder a sufficient keeper, or pay half so much to the comon herd as others doe who live convenient for the same. The persons which we judge to Live remote, and are Lyable to pay but half, or else herd there owne cattell, are such as dwell upon or about Loes playne, and about foxes hill and which live on the east and south of bare hill, and beyond them that way, except Shawahin farmes.

"4th. They do grant vnto the inhabitantes y^r Live about a mile from Shawahin house to make vp there herd if they wante, to the Number of three score.

"5^v. They doe order that the usual places at which the Herdsmen in the toune shall take and deliuer there cattell are at Ralph Hill, senior's, and Jonathan Danforth's south east corner of his house lot.

"6^v. That Jonathan Dantorth and James Kidder shall agree with herdsmen or a herdsman, and to draw vp orders that consernes the same, in behalf of the whole.

"7^v. They doe order that all such vplands wch. ly vnfenced, which are the propriety of any particular person or prsons whatsoever, shall be accounted comon for the free feed of cattell, without any Lett or hindrance from the particular proprietors of the same.

"8^v. It is ordered that the herdsmen shall driue out there herd theese severall ways hereafter mentioned, in theire severall days, towards the falls and beyond that way; and ouer Concord riuer when the water is Low. that the Catell may pass through the riuer; and beyond goodman Hills and arounde the ponde and beyond it; and by Nuttens towards Capt. Gookins farne; and round fox Hill (but not to keep the herd about any of the houses of such as pay half the herdage, whose cattell cannot goe conveniently with the herd); also to keep the herd out of all meadows, as they will answer the neglect of it at their own peril.

"9^v. It is also ordered that what person or persons soever shall refuse to pay there proportions to the comon herd, they shall pay one-quarter so much more than there wholl proportions; and to be Levied by distress by the constable; acording to Law, or such other person as the Townsmen shall apoynt. And that all such cattell as either goe with the comon herd (or are Lyable to pay to the same) three weeks in either half year, in the Time of herdinge, shall be Lyable to pay for the whole half."

Soon after, "it is ordered that any person being Legally warned to keep the comon herd vpon the sabbath day. and he refuse and neglect the same, shall pay for a fine five shillings." A fine of sixpence was also laid by the Townsmen, "if any one of them doe neglect to appear at the usual days of meeting, by eight of the clock, in the forenoon," and, "if any of them shall deprt at any time, without special leave from the rest of the company," he was fined two shillings and sixpence.

In 1660, "Simon Burd is sworne Clerk of the Trayne Band," the first record of the military life of the town. "24: 8: 61. James Kidder is chosen sarjent, Thomas Foster, eldest corporal, George flarley, corporal, Samuel Kemp, drummer, and Willⁱ Hamlitt, Clarke to y^e company."

Four days later, the town made a distribution of meadow lots to forty-one inhabitants, which was afterwards annulled, probably because it was found to belong to the "great meadow" of Governor Winthrop's farm.

An important agreement bearing the same date follows:—

"We, whose Names are vnderwritten do Agree that John Parker and Jonathan Danforth shall haue one thousand acres of Land (to there owne propriety) out of the four thousand acres of Land granted to the Towne by the Last General Courte, provided that they Lay out the other three thousand Acres at penicooke, or sum of it nerer home in either place or places, as the Towne shall Apoynte, and be at all charges about it, returning a record of the buttings and boundings of the same, with a platt of it, to the Generall Courte for their confirmation of the same.

A glimpse of the pioneer side of life follows: "5: 9: 1661. It is ordered that what person soever shall kill a wolfe or wolues shall haue, for euery wolfe killed and brought to the constable acordinge to law, he shall haue for euery wolfe Twenty Shillings, which shall be payd by the constable then being, in the towns behalf * provided that either English or Indian shall make proof to the constable or select men that it was killed within the boundes of o^r Towne." Ralph Hill, Jun., and John, Indian, received each one pound from the town for wolves killed, in 1661. At the same time a committee was appointed to make recompense to "the several inhabitants for Highways taken out of there lands."

A large share of the town action of this period is devoted to grants of land, general and special. Much of this record can not be quoted here, but some items have special interest and may be given.

"19: 9: 61. The Towne doe grant vnto Francis and John Wyman that pcell of Lande y^t Lyeth between Oberne Line and the farme that they purchased of Mr. Dunster, which is by estimation four score acres, more or less, and is bounded on the south or south east with Captain Gookins farme Line, which prcell. of Land the Towne doe grant to the aforesaid Wymans for propriety; and also the Towne doe grant them Liberty to mow the meadow that Lyeth in o^r bounds Nere to Oberne Line, on Stop brooke, from yere to yere, vntill it shall be otherwise disposed of, if it fall not into Captin Gookin's farme, when that farme Line come to be perfected."

"John Parker is chosen juryman for Cambridg cort. 8^{mo}. '62."

"Will^t Tay was chosen comitioner for y^e cuntry rate. '62."

An early custom, long disused, is brought to light in this item: "22: 10: '62. John Kitrige is desired to se to the fulfilling of the order about ringing and yoaking of swine; in case any of our inhabitants doe not ring and yoake their swine acording to the order, we doe impower him the said Kittrige to ring and yoake; he shall haue for euery swine he doth ringe, after three days warning giuen to the owner off them, he shall haue for euery swine he rings sixpence a swine, Levied on the persons that doe neglect; and for euery swine shall be yoaked by him, after such notice giuen as before said, he shall haue 9p. pr. yoak for all that he suffitiently yoakes." The record is John Parker's, and he intends his language to be explicit, if it is sometimes a trifle redundant and ungrammatical.

"8: 10: 62." Christopher Web asks for about two acres of land, "on the brook aboue his house, Next brother Foster's fence," but the town declined to grant it. On the same day, "Joseph French is accepted of by the major prt. of the towne, to be an inhabitant in the Town on Golden More's lot." But Mr. French did not remain on More's lot. He married soon a daughter of Thomas Foster, and three years after has leave to cut timber for his house, which stood, as his "grants" show, east of the Woburn Road, near Mr. Foster's.

"2: 12: 62. The Townsmen doe order that the meadowe belonging to y^e Mill Lott, and the meadowe called by the Name of y^e Cow-keeper's meadowe, shall not be mown by any person whatever without leave from the Townsmen, and an agreement made with them what Rent they shall pay for the same, or any pr^t. or prcell. thereof." "John Sternes is ordered to pay for the grass that he did mow the Last Summer on the Mill Lott, or any other comon meadows, 6p." The cowkeeper's meadow was south of the falls and present mill-dam at North Billerica.

"23: 12: 62. At a town meeting it is agreed that there shall be trees marked on the Highways to stand for shade for cattell from time to time; and what trees soever are fallen by any prson w^hsoever, that is or shall be marked with T, shall forfeit for any tree so fallen pay tenn shillings; if any such trees be Lopt, they shall pay the like penalty."

"The Towne did agree y^t Leiftnt. French and George Farley, as a comitte in the Towne's behalf, shall treate with Ralph Hill sen^r. about a peece of land, about half an acre for a burying place." The result was, "10: 2: 63. Ralph Hill Sen^r gaue to the Towne half an acre of Land for a burying place, on condition that the Towne shall fence all against it Next unto his own Land from which this $\frac{1}{2}$ acre shall be taken." This was the origin of the Old South Burying Ground. Mr. Hill died a few days later.

"16: 1: 63. John Baldwin and John Trull are chosen to vew fences on the west side of y^e Rode y^t Leads between Concord and Andever. Tho. Foster and Benjamin Parker to vew all the fences the east side of that Rode."

"The Townsmen doe order that all fences shall be made sufficient by the 1st day of Aprill Next ensuing after the date hereof, about all corn fieldes, on penalty of paying four pence pr. euery poll y^t Neglects; and all fences shall be good, fine rails, or one equivalent to it; and that fence y^t is three feet and eight inches high shall be accounted a sufficient fence: the fine set shall be Lyable to be payd by all prtys. defective when the time is out, y^t is alowed by y^e Law to vewers of fences; the four pence pr. poll fine to be payd, the one half to the vewers of fences & the other half to the Towne."

Town meetings were, at first, held frequently and whenever business required, and town officers were chosen as convenience called for them. The first appointment of a regular town-meeting day was made as follows: "10. 2. '63. James Kidder is chosen cons^{ble} for y^e yere insuinge, till the Last second day of March; and the Towne doe agree that from yere to yere, the last second day in the 1st month shall be the day of Election for Constable and Townsmen and all other officers to be chosen in the Towne, according to Law."

The following extract illustrates the persistency of the disused name Shawshin: "5: 11: '63. At a Towne meetinge at Shawshin, the Towne did agree that those prsons y^t haue had their Lands taken away from the comon field, by Mrs. Winthrop's farne Nere Concord River, shall haue their lands layd out to them, in Lew of the same, vpon the playne beyond the mill Brooke, called content Brooke: that prt of the playne that Lyeth on the North side of heath swamp meadow; to be Layed out by a comittee at their best discretion to act between the Towne and the prsons conserved therein; and they are ordered to Lay out golden more's 50 acres of Land that y^e Town granted to him, to be Layed Next adjoining to the comon field Lotts at that end Next toward the Indian's plantation. The comittee appointed and impowered to do the work are these: George farley, Jonathan Danforth, Henry Jests." On the same day, "The Towne doe except of Samuel froste and his brother, James frost, as Inhabitants in this Towne, in case they can by or hire acomodations in the Towne to liue vpon."

Farther action was also taken in the matter of the Cambridge lots. John Parker's agreement to clear the titles of eight thousand acres is given in the preceding chapter. Now, "the Towne doe request and impower John Parker to purchase the Remainder of the Lots of Cambridge that Ly in this Towne Boundes, for the vse of this Towne; he is not to exceed six pence pr an acor; and the Towne doth ingade to pay vnto the saide John Parker, in cattell or such corne as he can, with the owners of the Lotts for, at or before the Twenty and ninth day of december Next cominge After the date hereof. And they doe agree to pay to him six pence an acor, at the least, for what he shall soe clere to the Towne more than the eight thousand acres formerly agreed on to be clered by him to the Towne."

The Cambridge lots numbered ninety-eight hundred acres, so that if Mr. Parker had lived to carry out his former bargain fully, there would have remained eighteen hundred acres to which this stipulation would apply.

"17: 12: 63. The Townsmen did order that all records and copies of records, and all platts of lands and meddows that concerned the Towne, shall be kept in the hands of the Townsmen, or their order, for the Town's vse & benefit for the future."

Mr. Parker came to Billerica as lessee of the Church Farm, and did not acquire any claim in the common lands until the following grant was made to him:—

"25. 11. 63. The Towne did sell vnto John Parker, the mill Lot, the House platt to be removed Nere to the great bridge, 44 acors; and the former place is Lade by the Town at present comon to the Town's vse; (but the Town hath sould vnto the, aforesaid John Parker the said lot, called y^e mill lot, formerly laid out and recorded to Will^m Sheldon, vpon conditions which were not performed by the said William,) the said John, his Heirs, executors, and assigns, by the Town's agreement shall have, hold, possess, and Enjoy. all that Lott, together with all devtions of Land that are Layd out, or hereafter shall be due to be layd out, of upland and meadow land, and all other priviledges as doth or may belong to an eight-acor Lott; for and in consideration whereof, the said John doth consent and agree to pay vnto the Towne for their vse this present Town Rate, to the valew of Twenty and five pounds, now in hand. according to the Townsmen's order; and the sune of Thirty pounds more in such pay as shall Answer the Town's ends, for present or future comon charges, for laying out Landes or such like publique ocations, to be payd by the said John, his Heirs or assigns, to the Townsmen of the Towne of Billirica, or to their order, as the said charges publique shall necessarily arise in the Towne to be paid, as abovesaid, vntill the just sune of fifty and five poundes in all be discharged."

Town charges and taxes were not a light burden to the hardy men who were clearing the forests and laying the foundations here. Most of the pioneers had not much to begin with, except their own strong arms and brave hearts; and the providing of the plainest necessaries for the comfort of their families was often quite as much as they could secure. It was natural and legitimate therefore, for them to appropriate the grant of four thousand acres from the General Court, to the payment of their heaviest early charges for the meeting-house and Mr. Whiting's salary; and provision for other obligations by grants of their common land, as in this case, to Mr. Parker, were reasonable in their circumstances.

The Records have fortunately preserved exact account of these public charges, which the town was called upon to meet, and this chapter may fitly close with a transcript of the accounts of the town, 1661-4.

"1: 12: 63. The Townsmen did order the Town debts and credit shall be recorded in y^e Towne booke.

CHAPTER V.

BOUNDARIES.

SHAWSHIN was bounded on the southwest by Concord, southeast by Cambridge and Woburn, north by Andover and the Merrimack River, and west by Concord River. By the changes since made, these lines have been so completely modified, that the only fragment of the Shawshin bound which Billerica retains with the same neighbor, is the short portion of Concord River between the Tewksbury line on the east and the Pawtucket stake on the west, where the Chelmsford line leaves the river. The Burlington line is also a part of the early boundary, but Woburn, not Burlington, was then the neighbor of Billerica there.

The first change was made when Shawshin became Billerica, in 1655; the part of the town lying west of Concord River being then added. The line of this enlargement began at Pawtucket stake, on the west side of the Concord River, nearly three miles from its mouth, and ran 43° west of south, the present Chelmsford line, four miles, to a point about one-half mile south of the Carlisle line. It then turned westward 36° for three hundred and thirty-two rods, and reached Major Willard's farm. It was then bounded by this farm, south 46° west one hundred and sixteen rods, south 41° west three hundred and eighty-four rods, to a point in the old line of Concord about three miles and one-quarter west of the river. Following the Concord line one mile, to the Blood's farms, its course was along Blood's line, northerly, easterly, and then southeast, to the river, which it reached between the Two Brothers and the present line of Carlisle. Or, if we assume Billerica's early claim, afterwards yielded to Concord, of the Blood's farms, this old line of Concord and Billerica ran a straight course south 53° east about seven miles, to a point forty rods east of the Shawshin, passing along the southern slope of the village of Bedford, between the Main Street and the depot.

Leaving the Concord "old line," the boundary with Cambridge, afterwards "Cambridge Farms," and Lexington ran northeast to "the pine at Cambridge," which was also the southwest corner of Woburn. If any survey or description exists of this Cambridge line, I have not found it; and I can not say whether it was direct or angular. But the present bound between Bedford and Lexington, running southwest from the Burlington corner, would, if extended in a straight line, meet the Concord "old line" so nearly, if not exactly, at the point in question, that there can be little doubt that this was the old Cambridge and Billerica bound, and that this was a straight line about a mile in length. From "the pine at Cambridge," or southwest corner of Woburn, the Billerica line ran a nearly straight course one mile east of Shawshin River until it reached Andover, a distance of about eight miles. The course of the Shawshin is too winding to make such a line easy to determine, and a controversy naturally arose with Woburn in reference to it. But the skill of the early surveyors, Jonathan Danforth and John Sherman, stood the test, and the line first run by Danforth was finally accepted by both parties. It still remains as the west line of Burlington and the east line of Tewksbury; but Billerica has lost the short portion of it which Wilmington took from Woburn, that corner east of the Shawshin having been granted to Wilmington soon after its incorporation.

Andover retained a section of meadow by agreement with the Billerica proprietors, east of the Shawshin, which would have belonged properly to this town; but, from the Shawshin to the Merrimack, the line was direct and about five miles long. Thence, the line of Billerica followed the Merrimack and the Concord Rivers, until it reached the Pawtucket stake again, a distance not far from three miles on each river. All these lines gave ancient Billerica a circumference of 35.5 miles. Every change, except the transfer to Wilmington, has reduced the extent of the boundary, which is now about twenty-five miles.

The Andover boundary was apparently drawn perpendicular to a line connecting the two meeting-houses, and was to be six miles from the Andover meeting-house. This was a nearly equal division of the distance, and obviously so intended, between the two meeting-houses. For some compromise or consideration, which is not explained in the Records, Andover was allowed to hold the meadows on the east of Shawshin for nearly a mile beyond this line.

The earliest reference in the Records to the Andover line appears thus: "3: 7: 60. Jonathan Danforth, John Parker, and [no name given,] chosen a committee to prove the line between Andover and o^r Towne on both sides the river of Shawshin."

No record is given of the action of this committee, but the following letter appears eight months after, and explains itself:—

"a letter to Andever, 6: 8: 1661.

"Loueing friends and Neibors: Conservinge the meaddows that were granted to y^r Towne by the Generall Courte within our boundes, Nere Shawshin River, it is agreed that if yu will except of the Line that was Last staked at the olde pine that is fallen downe, acordinge to trees then marked, it will be an issew; other wayes, if you will not except it there, our towne's mind is that it shall be measured; y^e are intreated to send y^r answer speedily whether y^e will will meashure the medow or except the Line; but the Towne doe not consente at presente to alter the Line of the upland."

Andover probably accepted the line already run; as, if it had been again measured, the appointment of a committee for the purpose would hardly have failed of record. In March following a committee was appointed to run the line with Andover; and "23: 8: 1663, Ralph Hill, Henery Jeiffs, and Jonath: Danforth, are appointed to run the line between Andever and oure towne, on y^e east side of Shawshin River, and to lay the bounds by measure from their meeting house."

These adjustments, however, were not final, and almost twenty years after the question came up again.

"At a meeting of the Selectmen, 17, 2^m, 1683. They do appoint and impower these psons. whose names are vnder written, to state & establish the bounds between Andover and our towne, on the east side of Shawshin River: Provided always, that they state it but six milles southward of Andover meeting house; (which, as we vnderstand, is according to y^e Hon^d gen^l Court's grant to them in that place,) or that they state it from Woburn line, that is, from y^e North west angle of Woburn land toward Andover, & so to square to Shawshin River, & not otherwise. The committee are ens. Joseph Tompson, Corp^l. John french, Jonathan Danforth Sen^r Jonathan Danforth Jun^r."

Three days later the committees of the two towns united in the following agreement:—

"Whereas the bounds between Andover and Billerica on y^e east side Shawshin river was never yet fully agreed on by the saide townes; by an agreement of a committee chosen by each towne, with full power for that end abovesaid, they have mutually agreed that what meadows and vpland Andover hath laid out to perticular persons, on the east or southeast side of Shawshin river abovesaid, before the date hereof, (excepting a peice of meadow laid out to Steven Johnson of Andover,) shall belong to Andover, though it should fall without y^e limmits the generall Court hath granted them; and what vpland Andover hath laid claime to, hitherto, that shall fall without their claime, vpon the measure of their six miles, shall belong to Billerica.

"In witness that this is our mutuall agreement, we have herevnto set our hands, this twenty of Aprill 1683, and that six miles shall be the stated bounds between town & town, only as abovesaid excepted.

"a greed upon for Billerica,

"Jonathan Danforth Sen^r, Joseph Tompson, John french.

"By Andover,

"Dudley Bradstreet, John Osgood, Thomas Chandler."

When this agreement came before the selectmen, we find the following curious and significant record. To appreciate it, we must remember that the three members of the committee were all selectmen, who, with Ralph Hill and Samuel Manning, composed the board.

"The selectmen, comparing the committee's order by which they were to act with what they returned in writing vnder their hands, as abovesaid: And they find that y^e said committee acted beyound the power committed to them; and therefore do wholly disallow of what they did, according to what they returned in writing.

"But, the said committee, declaring that their agreement was not fully written at that time, for want of paper sutable for such a purpose, and that their plaine and honest agreement was, that the stated boundes betwene the two townes shalbee according to y^e generall Court's grant, i. e. six mile from Andover meeting house, and that what land Andover towne had granted & recorded in their towne book before that day, to any of their inhabitants, (excepting only a parcell of meadow granted to Steven Johnson of Andover,) shall belong to the severall psons to whom Andover hath granted them, as if such lands had bin granted to y^e s^d psons by Billerica towne; and that this their agreement should be preferred to y^e Hou^d Generall Court for their confirmation thereof.

"The Selectmen doe alow and confirm such agreement as this, in case Andover do consent to it; or els they declare all which was done by y^e comittee to be anul^d and of none effect."

A committee was appointed, "4: 9: 61, to run the Line Nexte to Chelmsford," consisting of Ralph Hill, Sen., Henry Jefts, and Jacob Brown, and, in 1678, Jefts was again a member of a committee for the same purpose. But, beyond the occasional appointment of such committees, the Chelmsford line has no notice in the Records. Consisting of the river and of a straight line, no controversy ever arose concerning any part of it.

The Concord line, however, west of the river, was complicated with Blood's farms, and the disagreement as to its location was serious, requiring the interposition of the General Court to decide the question. The germ of the controversy is revealed in the letter of Major Willard, given in a previous chapter;¹ but it was not developed until a generation later. The following petition brings its elements into view:—

“CONCORD, Febr. 7, 1694.

“To the Hon^{ble} General Court: &c.

“The humble petition of the selectmen of Concord and Chelmsford, on behalf of s^d towns, Sheweth: That whereas there is a considerable poell of Land Lying between the towns of Concord and Chelmsford and the Blood's farms, part of which is challenged by Billerica, and another part by Robert Blood, Sen.; to a great part of which we do humbly conceive the said Billerica & Blood have no legall or just title; And whereas the said land lyes at a great distance from the said Billerica, but joins upon the said Concord & Chelmsford; Your humble petitioners do therefore, with submission to this Hon'd Court's pleasure & wisdom, pray that a committee maybe appointed to examine the claims that are by them made to s^d land, and the lines that they pretend unto; and that, in case their just right to the premises can not be demonstrated, that then this Honored Court will be pleased to bestow the say^d lands upon the aforesaid towns of Concord & Chelmsford, as an enlargement, and your petitiones shall ever pray,” etc.

THOMAS BROWNE.”²

In response to this petition, the Court appointed Capt. Thomas Brown, of Sudbury, Lieutenant Fiske, of Cambridge, and Mr. Joseph Sherman, of Watertown, “a committee to view the lines between Concord, Chelmsford, Billerica, Weymesett, and the Blood's farms, or any lands thereabouts in controversy between the towns adjacent, farms, or cuntry lands, near said Towns, and make report whether there be any Cuntry lands left there, according to their particular grants, and of their doings therein, at the next session of this Court.”

² See Massachusetts Archives. Vol. CXIII, 24.

This contest with Concord and Chelmsford had a twofold basis: the indefinite terms of the grant to Billerica, in 1665, and the question whether it was designed to include all the then ungranted land between Concord and Chelmsford; and the uncertain bound of Major Willard's farm, which was one of the Blood's farms. The Bloods had made an exchange of land with Billerica, and this controverted line was included in the exchange. Major Willard's farm of one thousand acres, which had been given by him to Robert Blood, who married his daughter, was located north of Concord line and on both sides of the present boundary between Acton and Carlisle. It bounded Billerica on the west, and gave occasion for the following: A committee report, "22: 12: 58. We did meet the Major and stated y^e Line of his farme, and by the Major's advice and aprobatione; and also we then made an exchange for pr^t thereof with Robert Blood for sune scurts of Landes adjoining to his farme that he purchased of Mr. Hough, of Redinge." A few days later the town voted that this agreement should be perfected by the same committee; and, "6: 3: 61, the whole agreements with Robert Blood and the said committee was confirmed fully, as appears by writings drawne and sealed and subscribed between the said Robert and vs, in behalf of the towne."

At the session of the General Court, in May, 1655, when Shawshin received its enlargement west of Concord River, Concord also received a grant of five thousand acres, known in her later history as "Concord Village," now the substantial part of Acton. In the petition for this grant, the petitioners say,³ "we finde about seven thousand acres left out, of which Major Willard hath two thousand acres, except a little part of one end of his farme, which Lyes in the place or parcell of vacant land that was since given to Shawshine." This Concord petition has curious interest to Billerica in two particulars. It recognizes the grant to Billerica of the very same tract, which, in 1693, the representatives of Concord and Chelmsford sought to wrest from Billerica. And the date of this recognition is so early, in that very May, 1655, as apparently to imply that the action of the Deputies in October, 1654, granting the petition of Shawshin, as already given,⁴ was recognized as binding, although not confirmed by the Magistrates until May 30, 1655.

⁴ Ibid., pp. 17 and 18.

By the exchange made with Blood, Billerica gave him a strip adjoining Mr. Hough's grant, and received an equivalent from the Willard Farm, and with it the question afterwards raised as to its boundary. In 1665, Danforth surveyed and mapped Blood's farm; and his description was produced in a controversy which arose in 1683.⁵ At that time, Blood, in his petition dated May 16th, recites facts given above about the meeting with Billerica committee, and adds, "afterwards, y^e said Major Willard, meeting with a committee of Concord, did with them so state the bounds of the farme, without the knowledge either of y^e towne of Billerikey or y^e aforesaid Robert Blood, which was recorded in the town book of Concord, which was not then in his power to do, having already set the bounds in part and left it with the said Robert to perfect them, as appears in a letter of his, sent to Mr. John Parker."

The letter of Major Willard⁶ confirms this statement. The whole transaction shows that good men were as liable to err then as now, and that human nature has not changed much in two hundred years.

But the result of Blood's controversy with Concord, at this time, was an arrangement by which, with certain privileges, he and his farms should henceforth belong to Concord, and his prior and rather undefined relation to Billerica was terminated.

Ten years later, Concord and Chelmsford, as shown in the petition given above, sought to wrest from Billerica the western part of its early extension, and divide it between themselves. The reply made by Billerica has not been preserved; and it might, perhaps, have been made more conclusive, had Billerica been aware of, and able to quote, the above admissions of Concord's representatives in 1655. But the controversy remained undecided, and, 1698, November 17, a petition of Billerica gives her statement of the question at issue:—⁷

"Whereas your honours well know that our humble petition for the confirmation of a tract of land, granted by this Honourable Court to our Towne, for our incouragement, to settle a plantation where we now live (about 40 years since) have been before your Honours; and about four years last past, we followed it at severall sessions, and again renewed our peticon the last May; and since that, as we understand, this Honourable Assembly have spent very considerable time about it, and yet no issue; we yet again humbly pray, that an aspect of your favour might be towards us, to prevent our plantation from breaking up or breaking in peices, after all that charge we have been at, And hazards that we have run, to keep our ground hitherto & not broke wholly in peices. We humbly pray, that the wrong information that the Court hath had from Abraham Parker, or any other person ill-minded to us, may not be taken notice of, who hath much concerned himself for his own private interest, and far beyond what he had order for from their Towne to do in this case. We still asert, as we did before, our case is Honest. We have neither deceived the Court, nor wronged any of our Neighbors. We had real need when we beg^d it, and now shall be left ten times worse, if taken from us, than if it had been never granted; for we lotted out all that was good in it to our inhabitants about 35 years since; and many persons have sould their alotments to others, and themselves now dead, & their children not able to make good their father's sale; neither hath our town any meadow yet lying in common to recompense them that shall lose their meadows therein. We still own that our first petition, which was about 43 years past, was worded too short; it wanted Bounding at the west end; we could not then help it, for Concord had not then laid out their village, neither had Mr. Willard laid out his thousand acres, neither was Mr. Hough's farm of fower hundred acres laid out, nor Mr. Weld's farm of five hundred and thirty acres laid out. Hence, we could not Bound it, and it is not yet three years since some of them was finished, or but little past; but now we know what is left in common. And now we pray this Honourable Court to confirm to us, the inhabitants of Billerica, our heirs and suckessours, all the common and waste land, not formerly granted by this Court to any other, lying between Concord River & Chelmsford line on the North, Concord township & their village line westward, and southward by the farms granted to Mr. Nowell, Mr. Alm & Mr. Hough, which land is now possessed by Robert Blood; and that Robert Blood might be ingadged to shew us the bounds of his land, for this forty years hath he refused to shew them; of some of them no record is to be found in Court rolls, nor of any confirmation of them as he hath laid them out. Now, we humbly pray this honourable court to consider our necessity and grant to us our humble request at this sessions; And as for the charge the Committee was at about it, we are willing to discharge it; But as for Abraham Parker's bill, we pray it may be considered we can prove it unreasonable, and above half the charge without any order from Chelmsford. So shall your humble petitioners continue to pray & remain your humble servants.

"In the Name and behalf of the Town:

The results of this petition and progress of the controversy appear in another petition of Billerica,⁸ in May, 1700:—

⁸ Massachusetts Archives. Vol. CXIII, 217.

" * Whereas report hath formerly been made unto this honourable house, as if the town of Billerika did encroach upon the Country's land, & that report so far received by this honorable house, that our town hath bene sent unto by this honorable house to Render our Resons, if any we had, why such land might not otherways be disposed of; the which we gave in March 5, 1694-5, which we hope have been considered of by this house; and have divers sessions been waiting upon this honorable house for the confirmation of the bounds of our plantation, that part thereof which lyeth on the west of Concord river, but still we remain unsettled, to the great discouragement of our plantation. Our last petition we presented unto this honorable house was granted June 20, 1698; but it pleased not the honorable Council at that time to concurr therewith, but rather to appoint a Committee to go upon the ground, which yet hath not bene done. The circumstances of our plantation hath sometime bene laid before this honorable house, & before several of the Council more particularly. That the fathers, or first planters of our plantation, petitioned the General Court for a tract of land between Concord line & Chelmsford line, on the west of Concord river, is clere upon record, bearing date May, 1655, and that our petition was granted the same Court for our incouragement to make a plantation. And although the petitioners, the beginners of our plantation, did not, in their petition, fully express what they intended, for doubtless they petitioned for all that waste land, in that place, which by the Artis' return in the survey thereof, amounts to or contains about six thousand acres; and in regard the whole of our Township, that we have planted upon, we had not one foot of it granted by the Country unto us; it was granted unto the Town of Cambridge & laid out in farms & divided into an hundred & fiftene alotments, which we have been purchasing of them as we could, & have not yet clered them; so that our plantation never yet hath had that incouragement from the countrie as other plantations had then at their beginning. We prayed, in our first petition, for a small tract of land, but then could not be so particular in the boundary thereof, because there was fouer farms contained therein to be laid out before we could know what was certainly our own, the last of which hath been but lately laid out. And, because we understood that, by the answer of our petition, we were not to touch upon any propriety, we did hope that what was not appropriated had been ours & accordingly have allotted out the same, bought & sould & have run our lines with our neighbors plantations, about fourty year. Chelmsford Northward of us & Concord Westward, without any disquietment * * by reason of our public calamities have been long laboring under many discouraging circumstances, being a frontier & having been at sundry times broken in upon by the enemie, but have stood our ground hitherto, but have reson to feare if your petitioners be not favored we shall be broken * * that your petitions may quietly possess what this honorable house shall confirm unto us, that so our harts & our hands may be strengthened to discharge those dutys that we do owe unto God, our Soueraigne, & your honours, & be farther obliged to pray for Divine assistance upon this great assembly in y^e management of y^e weighty concerns before them. Your humble supplicant,

JOSEPH TOMPSON,

"In the behalf of the Town of Billerika."

These petitions may not be models of condensation, but they deserve the careful study of all who seek to understand the position and feelings of the founders of the town. They repeat the fact, often mentioned and with justice, that the connection with Cambridge at first, instead of aiding the settlers, had been a serious tax to them, in the necessity of purchasing the Cambridge titles, when a grant direct from the Court would have involved no such expenditure.

This burden was in part relieved by the successive grants west of Concord River, at Naticott, and the later gift of four thousand acres; but the relief was only partial, and the embarrassment would certainly have been disastrous if their title to the first, after forty years' occupancy, had proved invalid.

The Court answered this petition by the appointment of a committee, consisting of Col. Elisha Hutchins, Esq., Maj. James Converse, Capt. Benjamin Garfield, and Maj. Jonathan Tyng, "or any three of them, to view and settle the lines between the town of Billerica & the farms of John & Robert Blood, & the line between said town and the Towns of Concord & Chelmsford."

The report of this committee, and action of the Court, were as follows:—

"Anno R^e Gulielmi decimo tercio.

"At a great & generall Court or Assembly for his majesty's province of Massachusetts Bay, begun & held at boston, upon Wednesday, 28th of May, 1701.

"Whereas Major Jonathan Tyng, Maj^r. James Converse & Capt. Benjamin Garfield, a Committee [as above] have reported their doings therein, as followeth:

"That is to say, that as well by their own view of the lines, Court Grants and Deeds produced to them. as on hearing of what was offered by the agents of the severall Towns, they find the land of Billerika bounded by the line of Chelmsford northward, beginning at Pautucket stake, so called, by Concord River, where Chelmsford & Billerika & the Indians do meet, then Chelmsford line runneth south fourty three degrees west to pillar of stones; then it runneth south, seventy nine degrees west, three hundred thirty & two poles; which reacheth unto Major Willard's farme to a great heap of stones lying in Chelmsford line; then the Major's farm runneth southwardly fourty six degrees west, one hundrd. & sixtene pole to a little white oake. Then it runneth south, fourty one degrees west, three hundrd. eighty & fower pole, which reacheth to a marked pine, in Concord village line, near to a place call^d berry corner; then it is bounded by Concord line, one mile on the southwest; it is bounded southward by a line which was run by the above said committee, betwixt the Bloods & Billerika, which Ran from a pine called Allin's corner, south, eighty & five degrees west, five hundrd. & sixtene pole, to a great white oake marked R. B.; then it runs from thence fourty degrees west, one hundrd. seaventy & four pole, which reached unto Concord line againe. It is bounded north east & south east, east, & south east, by Concord River.

Resolved, That the s^d report be accepted & approved & the Boundaries & lines of the Towns & lands above named, stated & settled accordingly.

“ISAAC ADDINGTON, Secretary.”

The survey which accompanied and explained this description is fortunately preserved in the office of the Secretary of State. This makes plain points which are obscure, giving the length of the first named Chelmsford line from Pawtucket stake, four miles. It shows also that, in running the line between Billerica and the Bloods, the committee began at the northwest corner of the Allen grant, and ran back to the point previously reached in the Concord line. This issue of the contest gave Concord and Chelmsford nothing, and vindicated the justice of the claim of Billerica. Whether it gave Billerica any less than she claimed, on the side of the Bloods, does not appear.

“15th and 16th days of y^e 9th mo., 1659.

“the line betwene this towne and Wooberne was Run and marked and agreed upon to stand for propriety by Captin Edward Johnson and John Wyman and James Convers for Wooberne; and Ralph Hill, Sen^r, and George Farley and John Parker for Billericey, and Jonathan Danforth, Artiste, who did y^e work for both townes. The line was run two poynt and half easterly of y^e North, set of from the river in o^r old line formerly Run from Cambridge Boundes, from a black oake Nere y^e cart path, Leading from Billericey to Wooberne; y^e line continued about 3 miles. and then by agrem^t of the comite and Artiste, set on againe two poynts of the compass toward the river, and so continued to Andevere boundes.”

The designation of the road to Woburn as “the cart path” gives us a glimpse of the character of the principal highway through the town, in 1659. The “set of” near that road was made to preserve, approximately, the distance of one mile from Shawshin River, which was to be the west bound of Woburn, according to its original grant, and may be seen on any map of Burlington and Billerica. The other “set on,” three miles north, has disappeared with the cession to Wilmington; but the difference in bearing between the present west line of Burlington and east line of Tewksbury corresponds with this original description.

But this line did not escape contention, of which the following record gives the outline:—¹⁰

“1666, 23 May.

“In answer to a motion made to this Court by Mr. Humphry Davy, in the behalfe of Billirikey, that the bounds may be settled between them and Wooborne, it is ordered that Mr. Edward Collins, Capt. Timothy Wheeler, & Left. Richard Beers, do repaire to the place where the ground of the difference doe arise, and according to what shall appeare to be the right of each place by grant from this Court, & not otherwise determined by the mutuall concession of the grantees or their assignees, to settle the lines betweene the sajd townes, being authorized & impowered as a comittee to that end; and what they shall doe herein to be a final issue of that controversy, & returne it to this Court to be recorded.”

This Committee made report in October:—

“ . . . We have determined that the line of division betweene the townes shall run from the pinetree at Cambridge Corner, by a streight line to the marked tree nere the old foote path from Wooborne to Billirikey, at the corner of Elder Champney's farme; & what ever land hath bin layd out by Wooborne town, one that side next Billirica to John Wymans & Francis Wyman, shall remain to the said Wymans; and that the line of division betweene the sajd townes, in all other places, shall runn as it is stated by the order of the Generall Court, i. e. a mile from the river.”

This report was confirmed by the Court. The arrangement, however, was of short continuance, and the whole question was soon reopened, as appears from the following:—

“PETITION ABOUT WOBURN BOUNDS.”¹¹

“The towne of Bilrica humbly present to this honored Courte: That whereas they have formerly several times made application to this honored Courte for settlinge the lyne between Wooborne and them accordinge to the first graunt of the Courte to bee a mile from the River. The magistrates, as sensible thereof, having since passed somethinge in order thereunto, which yet is not consented to by the Deputies. The said Towne of Billerica, findinge themselves agreeved by what hath been already done about Drawinge the line, as hath been formerly declared to this honored Courte:

¹⁰ Colonial Records. Vol. IV, Part II, pp. 300-325. Also Town Records. Vol. I, p. 80.

¹¹ Massachusetts Archives. Vol. CXII, Nos. 195 and 196.

"They humbly intreate the Consideration of what farther they haue to Demonstrate in a few words: first, That Whereas it is alleadged, that the first parte of the lyne was Ran by Cambridge and Wooborne before Billerica was a towneship. & therefore to stand, although 114 pole nearer the riuier than a myle; which is contrary to the courts graunt. To which we say, first, that there is no record to be found thereof & onely one person of Cambridge alive who did act therein, & he doth testifie that their agreement concerning it was, that the wrong done in coming too neare in that part of the line should be made good in Drawing the rest of the line, which was afterwards ran By Ensign Sherman, but no satisfaction made for the former Defect, as doth appeare by this draught, for he onely intended a myle from the riuier according to a common line. And, Secondly, we finde that where he began this last line, it wants 47 pole of a mile from some part of the riuier & it wants 30 pole from the utmost angle of the riuier in a direct lyne, and from the end of the old lyne at the Crooke to the riuier it wants 114 pole of a mile to the riuier, as hath been proved by Lient. Fisher about a week since, & therefore no satisfaction is made nor any agreement past between both towns that should take off the force of the Court's order. Therefore, once more we humbly intreate this honored Courte, that the crooke which is in the lyne may be made straight & that allone will satisfie us; also, it will easily be done in one day by an artist, without further trouble.

"May it please this honnored Courte to consider that it is not the quantity of the land that we strive for, but it is the loss of the benefitt of a great farme, which the Wyman's bought in our towne, & carry the profit of it to Wooborne, who are farr better accommodated to beare their own charge than for our poor towne to loose 8 or 10^{lb} p annum (of what should help beare up our charges) to maintain theirs, besides the loss of so much land, which is yet our just right, accordinge to the honnored Genneral Courte graunt.

"P. HUMPHREY DAVIE for
"y^e towne of Billerica."

"This may Certify whomsoever it may consern, that I, Joshua Fisher of Dedham, being at Billerica about the 10 of May. 1669, with my instruments, was desired to try the length or distance from the line between Obourne & Billerica, at a place where there is a settinge off in that line, to try how far it was from thence to Billerica riuier; which accordingly I did & found it to be from the end of the old line formerly run by Cambridge men & Obourne, as I was informed divers years since the runninge, & there I found it to be 208 rod to the riuier, or so farr as a parralell line to that line cutts the riuier in divers places, and from the end of that line from the river ward, where there was a set off into Oburne boune, as I was informed, done by Ensign Sherman not long since, to a stake by him or his direction pitched, I found it 67 rod, so that from that stake to the riuier it is 290 rod, which want 30 rod of a mile to the riuier, which was measured into a point of upland that runs in at that place, the riuier being on both sides of it divers rods nearer the stake from whence we measured, so that I doe conceive that if a straight line were run from c to d, as it is marked in the plat. it would [indecipherable, mostly lost,] answer the grant of the General Courte made to Billerica, though it would not be a mile from the river in divers places, & the proprietie of the land might remaine to each grantee, if it be granted out by either of the towns, and the jurisdiction belong to each town accordinge as the straight line should devide them. I judge not the case, but only inform how I found it & so leave it to them concerned.

“JOSHUA FISHER.

“DEDHAM, 24 May, 1669.”

“In answer unto this motion made by Billerica Inhabitants, the case being fully heard at last Gen^l Court, both ptyes then appearing. This Court do judge meet and for a finall issue of all complaynts conclude that a committee of equal minded & judicious men be nominated & impowered to run & determine the line between Woburne & Billerica from one end to another, attending the Courts graunt, not to come within a mile of Shawshin river; viz^t. the comon line of the River duly to be taken & sett by some able Artist; and in case it do appeare that the complaynt of Billerica hath been causeless, they shall then defray all the charges thereof. The Majesty have passed this, their brethren the deputies thereto consenting,” etc.

The result was that a committee of the Court and representatives of both towns united, 1669, October 1, in recommending “that the line of divission between the two townes, last made by Ensign Sherman, by order of the Committee of the Generall Court, shall stand as it doeth. And whereas Francis & John Weymans Seniors have their present habitations neere the line aforesajd, & enjoying much of their livelyhood & benefit at both townes, & may pertake of the publicque ordinances in both places, they, the sajd Weymans, shall contribute equally to both townes in all publicke charges, both civill & ecclesiasticall.”

This recommendation the Court consented to and confirmed, “to be vnderstood the half of what they should have payd to either toune, if they had been wholly in either of them; and that Wooborne shall take the valluation of the Weymans estates for the country rate, as formerly, and give a true account of the same annually to Billerica, who shall have power annually to demand & receive all toune charges (according to that order) of the sajd Weymans, as if they were inhabitants.”

This adjustment did not satisfy the Wymans, who petitioned the Court for relief; and, in response,²² “27: 3^m: 1672. The Toune having considered the case, after much agitation, doe agree (with one consent) to stand to y^e generall Court's order concerning y^e said agreement, desiring y^e continuance of y^e same, vnlesse y^e Hon^{ble} Court would please to giue vs our streight line, which we should haue had at y^e first, according to Court grant; neither will y^e toun consent to take it out of y^e hands of y^e Honore^d Court, to put it into a Comittees hand to end."

But the town was not successful in this issue with the Wymans. At least, the agreement was soon after declared void. Whether the rectification of the town line was secured in connection with this rupture of the agreement does not appear, but is probable. The line is, and has been, a straight line, and no other date or occasion for making it so is indicated in the Records, and on this supposition the policy of the town was in fact successful.

No other question arose as to the boundaries of the town, and no other changes were made until the incorporation of Bedford and Tewksbury, in the next generation.

CHAPTER VI.

ROADS AND BRIDGES.

THE early highways were very primitive. A path through the forest, marked by blazed trees, was sufficient for this distinction; and the marking was often so imperfect that questions would arise, after a few years, as to the actual location; different wood-paths becoming the subject of neighborly contention. But the fathers understood the importance of roads quite as well as their children. Among the earliest town orders is one relating to this subject.¹

"9: 9: 58. Also for our work in y^e highways, it is agreed that it shall be done as followeth: i. e. every male of sixtene years old & upward shall come in to worke in y^e highways, acording as due warning shalbe given by y^e surveyours, chosen for y^e well ordering of the same. And so all that have oxen shal come in with their teames also, vntill y^e worke be done in y^e country highways.

"And for such as are proprietors with us, and are non resident in this toune, They shall all do their proportions when they come vp, both peons and teames, themselves or others for them, such as the surveyors shall approve of for y^e worke, both persons & teames. Also y^e surveyors shall keep a true account of every man's work from time to time.

"And it is further ordered & agreed, that the surveyors shall have no power to make or mend any but country roads at y^e towne charge, without y^e consent of the whole towne and by their order. And for non-appearance after due warning given as aforesaid, both persons & teames, any person neglecting his duty acording to this order shall pay two days' work for one."

We have here, in distinct outline, the system of supporting the highways which is still the prevailing one in New England, and which has only very recently given place in Billerica to the method of appointing a town agent, under whose direction the appropriations for highways are expended.

¹ I quote from Danforth's copy of this Order, Book of Grants, I, 170. The original partly obliterated may be found in Records, Vol. I, p. 7.

The principal roads leading from town to town were for many years designated "country" roads, and were at first the only roads to receive public care as a matter of course and without special vote of the town. The roads to Woburn, Chelmsford, Andover, and Concord, appear to have been at first the only roads thus distinguished. The first record of surveyors is, "1 mo. 1660-1," when James Kidder and John Baldwin were chosen. The road to Woburn is mentioned, "9: 9: 60. At a town meeting the town doe choose to joyne with a committee from Oberne to lay out the highway from Oberne to o' meeting-house, Ralph Hill, jun'. & John Parker." The report of this committee is not recorded, but ten years later we find this record:—²

"The country road to Woburn thro Shawshin farmes.

"Shawshinnock, or Billerica, 10. 10^m. 1670.

"Whereas the country road leading from Woburn to Billerica was laid out by a committee legally chosen by each towne formerly, but there not being a record of the same to be found, where it was exactly laid, and there arising some difference in apprehention where y^e way was laid thro Shawshin farmes; At y^e request of Mr. Rl: Daniel, Gent^{l^m}, the committee of each towne did meet together at Shawshin farme; and, hearing what could be said every way, and taking an exact viewe of the most comodius way for the country road to passe in, did determine that the way from billerica to woburn through Shawshin farmes should henceforth bee and continue, beginning at the westerly end of the said farmes, and so continue streight through y^e dirty swamp, and so along vpon the high land, taking a black oak tree marked with D (which stands in the side line between the churches farm and Samuel Chamnes farme) in the middle of the highway; and so passing over the small swamp or runnitt above Shawshin house where it is the firnest ground. there being a great white oak stump standing by the side of that valle on the north; from thence it continues streight along, going over y^e ridge, where the oldest highway went neer Samuel Chamne's house on the north of it, and so through his old field vntill you come to y^e casey neer Shawshin river, there being at this time, a ditch plowed almost all the way through these farmes, on the northerly side of this highway; and so the road is allowed seven pole wide southerly from the ditch aforesaid, there being sundry trees marked, some on y^e west side, some in or about y^e middle. and y^e ditch on the north of y^e s^d way. And on y^e easterly side of Shawshin river, y^e road lyeth much whereabouts it is now trodden, and passeth over the brooke at y^e east end of y^e plaine in y^e middle way that hath been trodden over that brook. This was agreed upon by us, the whole committee being present.

"JOHN SEIRES. JOHN WYMAN. JAMES KIDDER.

"RALPH HILL. JONATHAN DANFORTH."

² Book of Grants. I, 100.

This record does not add much to our knowledge of the Woburn Road, except the fact that it was originally seven rods wide; but it gives interesting illustration of the phraseology and methods of the men who laid it out.

The Concord Road is thus described:—³

"19: 12mo., 1660. Concord country road to o^r Towne.

"The highway from Billerica to Concord laid out by the Comittee appinted for y^e same By both Townes was laid out as followeth:

"It beginneth at the country road in long street and runneth in a streight line [from?] North east corner of y^e fence of John Rogers, Sen^r., i. e. of his house lot, being laid out four pole wide anent y^e North-west corner of Billerica meeting house, being bounded onward toward Concord by John Rogers' fence as now it do stand on the west; by Jacob Browne's and Daniell Sheed's fence (as now it stands) on y^e east; and so going streight on forward to the pounds, through Mr. Whiting's lott, then it turnes westward. ruñing down charnstaff lane, vntill you come to y^e bound corner stake between George ffarley and Jn^o. Sternes, on Mr. Dudley's farm, whose dividing line between them is the center of the highway vntill you come neer y^e lower stake of y^e divitions at that place, anent which stake it lyeth wholly on the east side of it; so running to y^e fence of lieut ffrench, his field, (which was sometimes the lot of Joseph Parker,) which fence bounds y^e highway on the south-east. Then running over y^e swamp at the Island between brooks, or over two brooks, being bounded by marked trees in the Center of y^e highway, vntill you come to the paster fence of Ralph Hill, Sen^r., which fence bounds it on the west; so ruñing on y^e south east of Ralph Hill, jun^r., his barne, vntill you come to y^e old road which leads to Concord, trees being marked for y^e center of it; and from this place it keaps (generally) y^e old beaten road to Concord swamp acording to center trees; and it is agreed that it shall lye four poles wide from long street, vntill you come to Mr. Dudley's farme; and from y^e entrance of Mr. Dudley's farme, until you come to Concord great swamp, it shall lye at least six pole wide; and from y^e great swamp to Concord towne, Center trees are marked aboute y^e old road vntill you come to the south corner of the widow foxes' land; then leaving the old dirty road on the right hand, and passing through an opening of the swamp, acording vnto trees marked in y^e center of it, we continued to Cramfield gate, and from thence keeping the comon road, to y^e meeting house.

"The comittee which laid out this highway were as followeth:

"for Billirica :

*Sarg^{ts} JOHN PARKER.
GEORGE FFARLEY.
JOXATH: DANFORTH.*

for Concord :

*ROBERT FFLETCHER.
JOSEPH WHEELER."*

The record of the Andover Road immediately follows the preceding:—

“ 26: 12m. 1660. Andover highway.

“ Wee whose names are hereunto subscribed, being a comittee choesen respectively by y^e Townes of Andever and Billerica, to lay out the country road leading from the one Towne to the other, have laid out y^e said road in manner as followeth:

“ Wee began at the country road that leads from Chelmsford towards the bay, or in long street, neer the meeting house, of Billerica, and soe ran Crosse y^e house lots of James Parker and Ralph Hill, Sen^r., (about y^e middle of them.) laying it four poles wide through y^e said fellds, acording to marked trees; from thence we ran by the North line of John Shildon's house lott Towards foxes hill, and on the east side of the said hill, in y^e old drawne way, vntill you come to a meadow, called Content meadow, being six poles wide from y^e former house lots to Content meadow, and four poles wide at y^e saide meadow, between the lots of Jonathan Danforth and Samuel Kinsley, and from the meadow to Strongwater brook six poles wide; and at Strongwater brook it lyeth crosse the meadow, about the middle of y^e lot belonging to John Poulter, and from thence to a meadow belonging to George Abbot, Sen^r., of Andover, at the north east end of the meadow and runeing to y^e drawne road, which leads from Andever Towne towards Shawshin River meadows; and so to enter the said road, at a hill called east hill, and so down the plaine to y^e bridge that lyeth over Shawshin River, neere to y^e house of William Ballard, still continuing six pole wide acording to trees suffetiently marked from y^e foresaid content meadow to Shawshin bridge. And from that bridge toward andever Towne, vntill you come to y^e houses of John Johnson and Thomas Johnson, wee judge meet that y^e highway shalbe where it is now drawne; and it shall lye in the wet swamps and rocky places ten poles wide at the least, and in y^e hardway elsewhere to be eight poles wide at least, and between the houses of y^e Johnsons aforesaid and the town of Andever, it shall lye as now the fences are already set up, and from the corner of y^e aforesaid Thomas Johnson's fence next toward y^e Towne of andever, the way shalbe six poles at the least, vntill you come to the shop of John frye, and from the shop of y^e said John frye to Mr. Bradstreet's yard corner, right against the way y^e leads down to Andever meeting house, it shalbee four poles wide at the least, being the way which is Now drawne; further it is agreed that from the Hill, called east Hill aforesaid, down to the Bridge ou^r Shawshin River aforesaide, neere y^e house of William Ballard aforesaid, the highway shall be but four poles wide.

“ This highway was laid out by us. 26: 12^m. 1660.

Sarg^{nt} JAMES KIDDER.

Mr. Danforth's presence was not as a member of these committees, but professional, as "artiste" or surveyor, employed by both towns.

Of the Chelmsford Road no description is recorded.

These four roads are all in use still, substantially as at first laid. The most important changes are, that the Woburn Road first ran over the top of Bare Hill, instead of turning around its northerly side as now; that the Concord old road ran a nearly straight course, still easily traced, through the swamp about a mile west of Bedford Village, turning from the present road to Bedford near Huckins Street; and the Chelmsford Road crossed the river at the Fordway, and not as now at the Corner.

Another important early road was that leading to Wamesit, of which we have this record:—⁴

"9m. 1659. The Great Comon-felld.

"It was agreed before the laying out of the alotments, in the great comon felld which lyeth below y^e great Bridge, [i. e. at the fordway,] on the east side of Concord River, That there shalbee a convenient highway alowed throughout the wholl felld, cross all the lots, for foot, horse & cart, either where it is already Trodden, or elsewhere, as shalbe Judged to be most convenient, which is to be noe open highways, but may bee taken in with in there lands & fences.

"March, 1664. The Towne appointed a Comitt: to lay out this highway, which made this returne, vnder theire hands, following:

"It begins at the east side of Samuel Trull's fence as now it stands, and so to lye two pole wide, and runs from thence crosse the lott of Roger Toothaker, the east side of y^e highway, crosse that lot is bounded by a stub which stands by the corner of Samuel Trull's fence, on y^e eastward of it about 4,000 [! So the record; probably it should be four] poles, and so runes to a rock, w^{ch} Rocke stands a little on this side of y^e brooke; from thence acording to marked trees all along, vntill you come to y^e going down to y^e mill place; and Thus far y^e trees are marked only on y^e east side of the way, but onward the middle of the highway is marked, vntill you come to William Hamlet's swamp, and from thence the way is to lye as the road is now trodden, toward bacon brooke; and the agreement is that y^e way shall be, all of it, two pole wide.

"The Comittee that did the worke was William Hamlet, James Kidder, Ralph Hill, Jun^r."

This road, passing the houses of Toothaker and John Rogers, (see ROGERS, 2, in Genealogical Register,) ran near the present site of the depot in North Billerica. The road recently opened from the Fordway to North Billerica must be near the line of this early highway.

Another road to the great plain and great common field, which were towards and beyond North Billerica, followed the present Long Pond Road to the foot of Fox Hill, on the north, and then ran directly across the swamp and fields, where its disused route is still easily traced. The road which run east from the "Pollard" place, to and beyond Mr. Nason's place, existed very early and was known as the road to Jeff's Cove, or Trull's Cove.

From the Andover Road, sometimes called East Street, the road running south, at the foot of Fox Hill, was of course in early use. For convenience, I refer to this as the "East Road," and the following record must refer to it:—

"1658. The highway at Loes-Plaine.

"At the laying out of the alotments at and about loes plaine, it was agreed:

"1. That there shall be a convenient highway allowed out of the lots Just below the Rockes and hills by the side of loes plaine, and so through the land of Samuel Kemp, for a cart to pass vpon any ocatlon, which land (if the proprietors please) they may take within their fence.

"2. Ther is also laid out another highway four poles wide, on the North side of Samuel Kemp's lot, so ruiling ouer the brooke on the north of Simon Crosbee's land & on the South of Jacob Browne's land.

"3. There is also laid out a highway of two poles wide betweene the East side of Sam^l Kemp's line and the heads of those lots y^e lye on y^e east of Samuell Kemp's lot, which is for the use of those proprietors."

Samuel Kemp's lot was near Miss Sophia Allen's, and this record outlines vaguely the East Road to that point and the road leading towards the Shawshin from it, early known as Marshall's Lane, John Marshall living near the turn. We may suspect that the latter road had a westerly extension, which would pass Peter Bracket's, and connect directly with Tufts Lane. From Kemp's, southward, the East Road appears in a later record.

"19. 1st 1688. The Townsmen doe order Sarg^t John Parker, Tho: foster and John Marshall to lay out y^e highway from John Marshall's house to y^e country road, that lyeth through the churches farme, and make retorne thereof vnder their hands to y^e Townesmen."

The road "through the churches farm" indicates the highway north of the Woburn Road, as the latter did not pass through, but south of, the Church Farm.

A later record,⁵ 1670-1, March 21, states that, as no report of this committee was found, and Mr. Parker was dead, the selectmen directed Messrs. Foster and Marshall to renew the work, and proceeds to say that they, "finding a convenient way by y^e bounds of Shawshin farme, from Thomas Richardson's lot to a new bridge, and over which is a ditch leading to the country road, did, with John French and Thomas Richardson, address y^e selves to Richard Daniel, gent., proprietor of Shawshin farme, for his consent, who, to gratify his said neighbours, did freely condescend, that they should have a private way to pass for carts, &c., in y^e bounds of y^e said farme, from y^e said Thomas Richardson's lot to y^e afores^d new bridge, and from thence five pole on y^e outside of y^e side [said?] ditch that lead to y^e said country road; and y^e s^d committee & y^e s^d John French & Thomas Richardson did thankfully accept of y^e same," and appointed this a private highway from Richardson's house to the country road.

Mr. Daniel represented wealth and rank, his wife at least belonging to the nobility; and there was no other citizen to whom the town officially showed such deference, or from whom it sought as favors what it would have taken from others as its right. Whether the present East Road follows the line of this early location is uncertain.

Farther north, on the Andover Road, an early and long forgotten way turned not far from the Cemetery and ran to the Shawshin near the Crosby place, reaching the river at a point called the "Willow Spang."⁶ This grant refers to it: "There is three acres of land allowed in James Kidder's lot where it may be most conveniently taken, for a way from the country road at fox hill to y^e second part of the second divisions. Also allowance is made to Simon Crosbe's lot, for y^e highway to pass from James Kidder's lot toward Shawshin River."

A highway which had always been an important one is described in the next record.

"It was agreed before the laying out of the 2^d divition Partaineing to y^e Towneship. That there should be a highway from the south side of fox hill, ouer little content brook, and so ouer ailwife brook, streight away to ⁵ Book of Grants, p. 153.

⁶ Danforth often uses the word "spang" to designate some point in field or meadow; the same word which Webster spells "spong." William Tay had land at this place; and the copyist of his will, in the Suffolk Registry, evidently had trouble in deciphering the original, for his transcript reads, "the willow spangs." Some future editor or archaeologist may find here occasion for a learned explanation of the pangs of the willow!

94
Shawshin River on the north of globe hill, and so over heeth brook, cross Christopher Web's meadow lott & continuelng onward over Strongwater brooke, at the narrow neck betwene William Tay's meadow, and so onward to andover meadow."

HISTORY OF BILLERICA.

This, the Pattenville Road, was in Danforth's common usage the road to Globe Hill." It left the Andover Road near Mr. Holt's house, and crossed the "little content" brook higher up that stream than does the present road near Dea. Samuel King's house.

The next description may refer to the road from Pattenville towards Wilmington. "Also one highway vpon content plaine from this road, beginning upon the hill eastward of two little round swamps, and so runing anglewise about y^e middle of y^e part of y^e 2^d divitions, which lyeth on the east of ailwife brook," etc.

The following description more clearly refers to the road from the depot to Pattenville: "1664. It was ordered at the laying out of y^e comon feild on the plain which is on the east side of Content meadow, that ther shalbee a highway from y^e country road leading to andever, to Shawshin Riuer, beginning on y^e east of content bridge, & so passing through y^e lots of Nath. Hill, leiut french, Jonath Danforth, John Rogers, El^d Chamne, Golden More, William P'attin, Peter Brackett, James Kidder, & Capt. Brackett, which enters it into y^e road which comes from John Balden bridge, leading to globe hill, and at y^e most easterly corner of Simon Crosbes lot begins that highway which goeth to William P'attin's meadow at Shawshin River." The references in the closing paragraph are to the two roads named in the preceding descriptions.

A highway, which probably never had much use and was soon forgotten, was laid between the two parts of the Second Division. It was "on each side of the dividing line from loes plain until you come to ailwife brook"; or from a point near Mrs. Asa Holden's, and passing towards the brook by the corner at Mr. James Page's, on the Wilmington Road, where "Marshall's lane," extended from the Crosby place, comes into it.

The Lexington Road, early and long known as the road to Bacon's mill, or Fitch's mill, is first mentioned, "16: 1: 63. Will^m Tay & George farley are Apoynted to Lay out a highway from the Towne, leading to Mr. Michell's farme, and to y^e land y^e was Lay^d out for Mr. Edward Oaks' farme, on y^e south East end of Mr. Winthrop's great meadow, to be layd out four polls wide."

Nineteen years later it needed relocation. "23. 1^m. 82. At a meeting of y^e selectmen: Whereas Mr. Muzey makes a complaint for want of y^e knowledge of y^e highway from his farme, that hee bought of Timothy Brookes, to the towne; The selectmen do order George Harley, that was one of the committee that lajd it out at y^e first, * & corp^l. Jn^o french, forthwith to go and renue y^e markes of y^e said way, that it may be obvious to all travellers; also to draw vp a record as distinct as may bee how it lyes, that so it may be found afterward without much difficulty."

The road farther east is not described in the Records. But it was in existence, and known as a country road as early as 1670, when Joseph Walker's grant was bounded east by it. The survey of Mr. Daniel's farms shows that this road formed in large part the west line of the Champney Farm.

That there was a road farther south from the Concord Road towards Cambridge is certain, but no description of it is recorded. It must have been substantially the same as that which now runs southeast over the hill, a mile north of Bedford Village.

The following record gives a good example of the private highways often laid out for the convenience of adjacent farmers: "1658. It was agreed, That there should be reserved three pole wide (vpon the Towneship) by the river side, from the angle of the township neare George Harley's, vntill you come below abbott's Bridge, which is to be no open highway, but for any vse for cart, or for landing of goods, hay, corne, etc., which highway is to be taken into euery man's diuiduall (i. e. his propriety or allotment) if hee please. And any man taking downe any bares or opening any gates, to passe by the Riuer's side vpon any such ocation. shall safely put them vp againe; and in case of neglect, as aforesaid, shalbe lyable to pay whatever damage any person shall sustain by his neglect therein."

The town also reserved the same liberty to pass from Charnstaffe Lane to this river highway. "Also, it was agreed, That the Brook which lyeth in the middle of the township should ly open (for y^e use of y^e inhabitation in generall) from long-street downward to y^e line of Mr. Dudley's farme, and six pole wide on each side of the brook, to ly in comon for publick vse." This "brook-highway" bounded Mr. Whiting's grant on the east, and has other mention; and this description proves the identity of Charnstaffe Lane and the line of the Dudley Farm.

Crosby, upon bare Hill, and to make a Return of their Judgment concerning it." Their report is wanting, but we may conjecture that it favored the easier route, around the northerly slope of the hill, where the road has long been. The road north of Fox Hill, leading east from Long Street at Abot's bridge to the Davis place, was in early use, and doubtless continued as far as the Andover Road; but no description is found in the Records.

West of Concord River, the larger part of the land remained "common," until the great distribution soon after 1700, and the roads before that date were few and only incidentally appear in the Records. The earliest was, no doubt, the "treble-cove" road, beginning at the Fordway and running southwest on the line, substantially, of the present highway east of Gilson's Hill and northwest of Winning's Pond, and so towards Concord. It derived its name from the "treble-cove," a locality often named in the Records, and situated near the Carlisle line. This road is often called the "road to John Hill's," who doubtless lived near it.

The "rangeway" road, as its name indicates, followed the dividing line between the first and second ranges of lots in the great land division of 1708. The first range, bounding on Chelmsford line, was about half a mile in width, and the road still follows the line thus indicated.

A bridge over Concord River was an early necessity. The first bridge was at the Fordway, a half-mile above North Billerica. The date of its erection is not certain, but is probably indicated by the action of the General Court, 1657, May 15, when the importance to the country of bridges at Billerica and Mistick was affirmed, and assessment of expense, for building and maintaining them, upon adjoining towns and plantations was provided for. The bridge was in use in 1659, as William Haile's grant, which was near by and made in that year, mentions "y^e great bridge." The "great common field," which was divided in 1659 among the proprietors, is also described as lying on the east side of Concord River, below the great bridge.

This early bridge was, of course, rude and primitive and soon needed repairs. "25: 7: 60. Ralph Hill jun^r and James Kider are apoynted to join with Chelmsford in the repaying of y^e bridge Leading to Chelmsford; and they are to doe what work they, with the comitee of Chelmsford, shall judge meet to be done, and to Leuie the charges according to the General Cort's order; and they have power given them to call in for helpe acordinge as they shall see meet, from time to time, till the work be done, provided they be such persons as are behinde in high way work, to the Number of 6 days of them that hath done y^e moste." "1662, 4, 9," it was agreed that Thomas Foster should "goe to the great bridge" and "br Hill Senr, if James Kider could not go." John Parker was also requested "to goe to the work, if his ocations would give way," and a note was sent to Chelmsford "for their comitte to meet at the work."

In 1664, complaint was made to the Court at Charlestown of "great defect in Chelmsford Bridge," and the selectmen of the two towns were enjoined to take order for the repair thereof forthwith;⁹ and, November 29, the "Townsmen did choose Willⁱ Hamlett to join with a man from Chelmsford to repayr the great Bridge."

In making these repairs, in 1662, Billerica furnished five hands and Chelmsford four, "a day in the water," charging 2s. 6d. per day. Besides, there is a charge for two quarts of liquor, 4s., showing that one day's work would pay for a quart of liquor and a quarter. In 1665, the whole charge for previous repairs was "7p. 10^s. 6^d., " of which Billerica paid "4^p. 1^s. 6^d." and Chelmsford "8^p. 9^s." Groton does not seem to have been called upon at this time, but for the charge in 1665, Groton paid its proportion. "21p. 2^s. 2^d." were raised on the county rate, Chelmsford paying "10^p. 3^s., " Billerica, "7^p. 8^s. 4^d., " and Groton, "8^p. 14^s. 7^d." It was to be expected, that a partnership like this would not long work smoothly; and the following record will surprise no one.

"12 1st 1666. Whereas, the selectmen of Chelmsford (by writing vnder ther hands) have declared (to the selectmen of Billerica) their absolute refusall any longer to assist in maintenance of the great Bridge vpon Billerica riuer, as also giving Notice to them to repair the same acording to law. Hence the selectmen of Billerica (for y^e preventing of dangers and hazards by travellers) do order that some of the planks of that bridge be taken away, that so there may be no passing over it; and some provision made on each side the breach to give warning of the danger to any traveller." Whether any compromise of the difficulty was made, or the bridge continued impassable for two years, the Records do not tell us; but a higher power interposed; and, 1667, October 9, the General Court takes action as follows: "In answer to a motion made by the deputies of Billerica & Chelmsford, in reference to the bridge over Billerica River, it is ordered by this Court • that the said bridge shall be repayred & vpholden by the townes of Billerica, Chelmsford, & Groaten, and all such farmes as are there granted," and these towns were to be free from the maintenance of all other bridges, "except in their own bounds."¹⁰

In execution of this order the County Court at Charlestown, 1667, December 17, "did nominate and empower Mr. John Webb, alias Evered, Mr. Thomas Hinksman, Mr. James Parker & Jonathan Danforth, to agree with some able and honest artificer for erecting a bridge over Billerica River, as speedily as might be."

This committee employed Job Lane to build the bridge, and the contract made with him is preserved.¹¹ It was made, 1667, January 11, and the work was to be completed before the 29th of September following. The size of timbers and form of structure are minutely specified. The arches were to be sixteen feet wide, and the flooring of oak plank four inches thick. He was to receive in payment, "seven score and five pounds starling": ten in cash, ten in wheat, ten in malt, and the remainder in corn and cattle, not exceeding one-half in cattle, which must be under seven years old. If the parties could not agree. they were to be appraised by two men properly chosen, and the corne was to be good and merchantable at such rates as the country rate set. One half was to be paid at or before the first of May, and the balance within the next year. Payments were to be delivered at Capt. Adams's mill in Chelmsford, or in Billerica town. If Mr. Lane chose, Chelmsford or Groton payments might be delivered near the bridge until it was finished, and after that in Billerica.

Mr. Lane was distinguished as an "artificer." He paid for his large farm by the erection of a mansion for Fitz John Winthrop, at Norwich, Connecticut, and he built one of the College buildings at Cambridge.

In 1676, there was again complaint of the bridge, and united action of the towns in repairing it. After that, the bridge is hardly mentioned until twenty years later, when it was carried away by a flood, a disaster which ended the existence of the Fordway bridge, after an existence of forty years. This, no doubt, happened shortly before the date of the following action. Clerk Joseph Tompson, without date, says: "Received an order from Chelmsford, dated about the first of December, 1698, desiring of our selectmen, or Town, to send a person or persons empowered to join with them and Groton and Dunstable about the new building of a bridge over Concord river." The selectmen appointed Captain Danforth and Mr. Tompson to attend this meeting, on December 6, but, "Capt. Danforth, being presented with the selectmen's order, wholly refused. Joseph Tompson went alone." He met there Major Jonathan Tyng, for Dunstable; [Thomas?] Williams and James Blanchard, for Groton; and Major Thomas Hinchman, Solomon Keyes, Sen., and Cornet Nath: Hill. The result of the deliberations of this committee must have been, although our Records leave us to infer the fact, that the new bridge should be built farther up the river, at the "corner," where it has since stood. Groton, for some unexplained reason, refused to participate, and resort was again found necessary to the General Court, to bring this intractable town to terms. An act was passed, 1699, March 20, authorizing the Court of Sessions to assess and collect of Groton, "24^s. 10^d.", and to pay it to "Major Hinksman, Major Ting, & Mr. John Lane, undertakers for the building of the bridge lately erected in Bilrica." There were good reasons why Billerica desired to change the location. With but one bridge over the Concord, it was important that it should be nearer the centre of the town, and not make so long a circuit necessary to reach the west part of it. In fact, it was for Billerica a question of removal, or the maintenance of two bridges; while to the towns above the difference was trifling. This view prevailed, and the most important bridge in town found a location which has been so far permanent. How long the other towns were called upon to aid in its maintenance, I can not say, nor how many times it has been rebuilt. In 1737, the bridge fell down and was rebuilt after some discussion as to the location. In 1873, the old wooden bridge gave place to a handsome and light iron structure.

The ghost of the Fordway bridge did not, however, rest with perfect quiet. Ninety years later, in 1789, a subscription was made and committee appointed to build a bridge at the old place. The record of that committee is preserved.²² The first meeting was appointed by people in Chelmsford Neck, now Lowell and vicinity, and held, 1789, January 23, at the house of Isaac Sprake. Others were held at Jonathan Manning's and Esquire Barron's, and Aaron Chamberlin was moderator and William Manning clerk. A committee was sent to Concord and Sudbury, who reported that "there was not much danger of opposition from those towns on account of flowing their meadows." It was found that the subscriptions amounted to £59, 10s., and the subscribers "voted to Go on and Build"; and a committee of nine was appointed to collect the subscriptions and carry on the work. March 3d appeared the selectmen of Billerica and sundry others, "and forbid our going on to build on perill of paying all Dammage that should arise therefrom to said Town." In April, a committee was sent to Woburn, doubtless to see if aid could be had there. They brought back unfavorable report, and, May 19, the meeting adjourned without day.

The Centre bridge was built in 1737. The vote for its erection was passed, 1736, November 16, and in 1738 the building committee received £95 from the treasurer, which was perhaps its entire cost. It was built "against the bridle way, betwixt Mr. Enoch Kidder and Oliver Whiting, Jun^r. lots."

Hill's bridge first appears in the following record, 1736, July 22: "Whereas, a number of Persons in the neighboring Towns have Petitioned the General Sessions in Middx. for a highway from Westford meeting-house cross Concord River over Lt. Joseph Hill's bridge to Lexington," a committee of five was chosen "to manage that affaire in the behalfe of the Town." Lieutenant Hill probably lived on the west side of Concord River near this bridge, which he may have built for his own convenience and that of the neighborhood. It would seem that the Court approved the petition, for, 1737, May 16, the town instructed the committee "to manage the affaire in Defense of the Town"; to proceed either by appeal from the Sessions, or by laying the matter before the General Court, or both. The town was soon called upon to pay £59, 10s., which implies that the case was decided in favor of the petitioners.

The Hill bridge contributes no other noticeable facts to the history, except an episode, which greatly stirred the town at the time and lingers in the memory of the older inhabitants still. After the opening of the Middlesex turnpike, the Hill bridge and road crossing it fell into disuse and decay; and at last the bridge, falling, was for some time not rebuilt. But a demand arose for the rebuilding of the bridge and a straightening of the road leading to it, which had been somewhat devious. A route more direct and less hilly than the turnpike was sought, in this improvement, from Chelmsford and towns above to Lexington. Mrs. Joseph Foster gave the right of way through her land for some distance on the west side of the river, and others set about the work and built one of the abutments. But the majority of the people did not relish the proposed diversion of travel and business to a line so far from the centre of the town. When other means of opposition failed, some of the citizens, and, tradition affirms, some of the most respectable, determined to take the case into their own hands and proceeded to destroy the offensive abutment. The mob, for such it seems to have been, and perhaps the only mob known in the town, did its work thoroughly. Suits followed and were decided against the town, which was compelled to build the bridge and road and has since maintained it.

CHAPTER VII.

THE INDIANS AND WAMESIT.

THE Shawshin territory was a favorite resort of the red men. The Pawtucket tribe occupied the vicinity of the mouth of the Concord River, on both sides of it, as their headquarters. From this place they went forth; to this they returned; here they planted their corn. Wamesit, or Weymesit, was originally the name of the eastern angle, between the Concord and Merrimack Rivers, around Fort Hill and the modern "Belvidere" of Lowell. Here many, if not the majority, of the Indians lived, giving ancient Billerica a large Indian population, though the town never probably exercised civil jurisdiction over them. This Indian settlement confronted the fathers of Billerica as they looked northward. Their road down the Concord River was the road to Wamesit.

This Indian reservation, specifically granted by the General Court, was surveyed and described by Danforth in 1664, April, as follows:¹

" * * There is laid out unto the Indians, who are the inhabitants of Waymesick, five hundred acres of land on the east side of Concord River and joyning to the said river & to Merremack River; it runnes upon Concord River about one mile & three quarters, which reacheth to Bacon Brooke, & bounded by the said brooke on the south fower score poole; it runnes from the mouth of Concord Ryuer doune Merremacke River two hundred & fifty poole, where it is bounded by a red oake marked; from thence it runnes according to the bound marke trees wth two angles, unto Bacon Brooke; all which doe more plainly appeare by plott of it under written. This five hundred acres is part of that three thousand w^{ch} was layd out to M^r. Winthrop formerly, only in the retorne of said three thousand there is mention made of one hundred acres allowed in that farme, in refference to land the Indians had improoved w^{ch} in the bounds of it. This worke was done by the Comittee appointed to y^e same by this Generall Court.

In place of this four hundred acres taken out of Mrs. Winthrop's farm, her heirs were granted six hundred acres elsewhere. The mouth of Bacon Brook, which bounded this Indian plantation southerly, is a few rods south of the Salem Railroad bridge. The present boundary of Lowell on the east of Concord River falls a little below the line of the Indian survey. There is no evidence that these Pawtucket Indians were ever troublesome or unfriendly neighbors. In common with other tribes, their numbers had been greatly reduced by a desolating pestilence not long before the period of the English colonization; and the wise and Christian missionary labors of Eliot and Gookin among them did not fail to bear important fruit. Had the Indian policy of the country been moulded in later years by the same spirit of benevolence and justice, the nation would have been saved much disaster, expense, and reproach.

John Eliot, pastor of Roxbury, 1632-90, began to devote himself to labors among the Indians about the time that the Shawshin settlement became a practical question. Beginning at Nonantum, now Natick, the success of his efforts encouraged their extension, and he soon sought out these Wamesit Indians. Passaconaway, the aged sachem, became friendly, if not Christian, and, in 1660, in a farewell speech to his children and people, he "warned them to take heed how they quarrelled with their English neighbors, for though they might do them some damage, yet it would prove the means of their own destruction." His death did not follow immediately, for, in 1662, he asked and received from the General Court a grant of land "about Naticot, above Mr. Brenton's lands, where it is free, a mile & a halfe on either side Merremacke River in breadth & three miles on either side in length." "Mr. Brenton's lands," here mentioned, were the early grant of eight thousand acres to Billerica, which the town had sold to that gentleman, and this grant to the sachem was beyond the Souhegan, near Manchester.

In 1670, Wannalancet had succeeded his father as sachem, inheriting his peaceful spirit also. He yielded to Eliot's faithful persuasions and avowed himself a Christian, 1674, May 5. The account given by Captain Daniel Gookin, of Wamesit and its population and the conversion of this chief, is interesting and important as a contemporary narrative, and I give it entire. It was written in 1674, and the writer is himself the "English magistrate" mentioned.²

Wamesit is the fifth praying town; and this place is situate upon Merrimak river, being a neck of land where Concord river falleth into Merrimak river. It is about twenty miles from Boston, north north west, and within five miles of Billerica, and as much from Chelmsford, so that it hath Concord river upon the West Northwest. and Merrimak river upon the north north east. It hath about fifteen families, and consequently, as we compute, about seventy-five souls. The quantity of land belonging to it is about twenty-five hundred acres. The land is fertile and yieldeth plenty of corn. It is excellently accommodated with a fishing place, and there is taken variety of fish in their seasons, as salmon, shads, lamprey eels, sturgeon, bass, and divers others. There is a great confluence of Indians that usually resort to this place in the fishing seasons. Of these strange Indians, divers are vitious and wicked men and women, which Satan makes use of to obstruct the prosperity of religion here. The ruler of this people is called Numphow. He is one of the blood of their chief sachems. Their teacher is called Samuel, son to the ruler, a young man of good parts, and can speak, read and write English and Indian competently. He is one of those that was bred up at school, at the charge of the Corporation, for the Indians. These Indians, if they were diligent and industrious,—to which they have been frequently excited,—might get much by their fish, especially fresh salmon, which are of esteem and good price at Boston in the season; and the Indians being stored with horses of a low price, might furnish the market fully, being at so small a distance. And divers other sort of fish they might salt or pickle, as sturgeon and bass, which would be much to their profit. But notwithstanding divers arguments used to persuade them and some orders made to encourage them, yet their idleness and improvidence doth hitherto prevail.

“At this place once a year, at the beginning of May, the English magistrate keeps his court, accompanied with Mr. Elliot, the minister; who at this time takes his opportunity to preach, not only to the inhabitants, but to as many of the strange Indians that can be persuaded to hear him; of which sort, usually, in time of peace, there are considerable numbers at that season. And this place being an ancient and capital seat of Indians, they come to fish; and this good man takes this opportunity to spread the net of the gospel to fish for their souls. Here it may not be impertinent to give you the relation following. May 5. 1674, according to our usual custom, Mr. Elliot and myself took our journey to Wamesit, or Pawtucket; and arriving there that evening, Mr. Elliot preached to as many of them as could be got together out of Matt. xxii. 1-14, the parable of the marriage of the king's son. We met at the wigwam of one called Wannalancet, about two miles from the town, near Pawtucket falls, and bordering upon Merrimak river. This person, Wannalancet, is the eldest son of old Passaconaway, the chiefest sachem of Pawtucket. He is a sober and grave person and of years between fifty and sixty. He hath been always loving and friendly to the English. Many endeavors have been used several years to gain this sachem to embrace the Christian religion; but he hath stood off from time to time and not yielded up himself personally, though for four years past he hath been willing to hear the word of God preached and to keep the Sabbath. A great reason that hath kept him off. I conceive, hath been the indisposition and averseness of sundry of his chief men and relations to pray to God; which he foresaw would desert him in case he turned Christian. But at this time, May 6, 1674, it pleased God so to influence and overcome his heart, that it being proposed to him to give his answer concerning praying to God, after some deliberation and serious pause, he stood up and made a speech to this effect: Sirs, You have been pleased for four years last past, in your abundant love, to apply yourselves particularly unto me and my people, to exhort, press, and persuade us to pray to God. I am very thankful to you for your pains. I must acknowledge, said he, I have all my days used to pass in an old canoe (alluding to his frequent custom to pass in a canoe upon the river) and now you exhort me to change and leave my old canoe, and embark in a new canoe, to which I have hitherto been unwilling; but now I yield up myself to your advice, and enter into a new canoe, and do engage to pray to God hereafter.

"This his professed subjection was well pleasing to all that were present, of which there were some English persons of quality, as Mr. Richard Daniel, a gentleman that lived in Billerica, about six miles off; and Lieut. Henschman, a neighbor at Chelmsford; besides brother Eliot and myself, with sundry others. English and Indians. Mr. Daniel, before named, desired brother Eliot to tell this sachem from him, that it maybe while he went in his old canoe, he passed in a quiet stream: But the end thereof was death and destruction to soul and body. But now he went into a new canoe, perhaps he would meet with storms and trials; but yet he should be encouraged to persevere, for the end of his voyage would be everlasting rest. Moreover, he and his people were exhorted by brother Eliot and myself, to go on and sanctify the sabbath, to hear the Word, and use the means that God hath appointed, and encourage their hearts in the Lord their God. Since that time, I hear this sachem doth persevere, and is a constant and diligent hearer of God's Word, and sanctifieth the Sabbath, though he doth travel to Wamesit meeting every Sabbath, which is above two miles; and though sundry of his people have deserted him since he subjected to the gospel, yet he continues and persists.

"In this town they observe the same civil and religious orders as in other towns, and have a constable and other officers. This people of Wamesit suffered more in the late war with the Mohawks than any other praying town of Indians, for divers of their people were slain; others, wounded; and some carried into captivity; which providence hath much hindered the prosperous estate of this place."

The picture of this faithful magistrate and friend of the Indians, accompanied by his "brother" Eliot, on this annual visit to Wamesit, dispensing justice and the Gospel to the red men there, is full of interest; and the conversion of Wannalancet might furnish a painter with an attractive subject. Its interest to Billerica would be increased by the presence in it of Mr. Daniel, our "English gentleman," who for ten years resided here with his "noble" wife, and then returned to England.

Wannalancet is credited with building the fort from which "Fort Hill" takes its name; and traditions which seem trustworthy fix the site of the log chapel, in which Mr. Eliot preached to the Indians, very near the fine edifice of the Eliot Church.

In the summer of 1675, when the alarm and peril of King Philip's War assailed the Colony, these Indians retired to the wilderness, at Penacook, (Concord, New Hampshire,) to avoid being involved in it. Still, they were suspected, and in September a company of one hundred men was sent to ascertain the position of Wannalancet in regard to the war. On their approach, the Indians concealed themselves in the woods, and their deserted wigwams were wantonly burned. But, though thus sorely tempted to join Philip in retaliation, the sachem did not forget his father's counsel, and restrained his young warriors, who were eager to attack the whites. He soon after went farther, to the head waters of the Connecticut, and there spent the winter. The next year the Indians were allured to Dover and unjustly imprisoned; but they were soon set at liberty and returned to their Merrimack home. After the conclusion of the war, the sachem visited the Reverend Mr. Fiske, of Chelmsford. To his question, whether Chelmsford had suffered much, the clergyman replied that they had not, and devoutly thanked God. "Me next," said Wannalancet, implying that he had restrained the Indians under his control. Billerica perhaps owed her security during those dark days to the same friendly sachem.

But the Indian occupation of Billerica was not confined to Wamesit. The frequency with which their arrow points and other articles are found, shows how numerous they once were. Graves and the site of a wigwam are still shown north of Jaquith Brook, near Concord River; and the north shore of Nutting's Pond was so distinctively theirs as to be sold by them in 1665. The hill north of this pond was known as Indian Hill. In May, 1665, the town granted to Henry Jeffs, "four acres of land, lying at the Indian Hill on the north of y^e Indian field at Nuttins pond." In December, "the bounds of his land purchased of the Indians at Indian Hill by the pond were taken by Ralph Hill and Jonath: Danforth, which are as followeth: i. e. on the south it is bounded by the pond, and on the southwest, west, and somewhat northerly, it is bounded by that land [above mentioned]; it runnes easterly to a maple marked in the swamp and a white oak marked beyond it; both which are on the west of the high cleft of rocks; and from thence a little rounding to the N. E. corner of his fence, * and from thence it turnes towards the pond to a red oak with a rock by it, and from thence it turns a little inward to a hunch of maples by the pond side."

Danforth records the death of his Indian servant, John Warrick, 1686; and, in 1681, James Speen, Indian, receives "eight pounds due to y^e Indians for four wolves heads," and other records occur of the same sort. These dusky forms must have been frequently seen in the early homes of Billerica. Did their coming excite fear or confidence, repugnance or pleasure? Whatever it was, the sensation was a familiar one. And, however they had learned to trust their Wamesit neighbors, as they observed the labors of the saintly Eliot among them and the fruit they bore, the fathers could never be long forgetful of the darker fringe of savage humanity beyond, the working of whose policy or passion might at almost any moment involve them in peril or ruin. This danger hung over the pioneers of Billerica for more than fifty years, and their slumbers were likely to be broken by a warwhoop. In our estimate of their faith and courage in planting the town, this fact should be remembered.

The earliest indication of this danger afforded by the Records occurs in "1667, 9^m, 11. At a meeting of the selectmen. It is agreed concerning fortification in this Town, That ther shall be a house built of stone & brick wth a chimney at y^e west end of it, y^e dementions of y^e house to bee twenty-six foote in length, twenty-two foot wide from outside to outside, with a doore three foot wide on y^e south side, near y^e west end, & two windows, one at y^e east end & y^e other on y^e south side, being each window three foot wide & two foot & a half in height, all in y^e clear; y^e walls of y^e house shalbe nine foote in height from y^e floore to y^e under side of y^e plate; also, a floore, lying one foot below y^e plate, with crosse ruñers, y^e long girt lying cross y^e house; also, ther shalbe iron barres in each window & one window at y^e gable end on y^e east; y^e roofe of y^e house to be sawne stufte, covered with bords, chamfered & after shingled. And for y^e effecting of y^e premises, we do agree that hands shall forthwith be employed to digge clay and stones, & y^e rest of y^e work to be carried on with as much convenient speed as may be, according to y^e order of y^e gen^l Court."

The order of the General Court was passed in May, 1667, requiring every town to erect, "either inclosing the meeting-house, or in some other convenient place, a fortification, or fort, of stone, brick, timber, or earth, as the place maybe most capable, of such dimensions as may best suit their ability, where women, children, & the aged maybe secured in case of sudden danger, whereby the souldjers maybe more free to oppose an enemy."

But this fortification never was built, whether because the tax was too great, or the alarm less, we can only conjecture; but this description is interesting in depicting the house the fathers would have built for such a purpose.

Eight years passed, and the peril came in earnest, the most critical hour, perhaps, in the history of New England. The Indians, alarmed at the growing numbers and strength of the settlements, and incited by resentment for fancied and, perhaps, some real injuries, rose in a determined effort to exterminate the colonists. Philip, chief of the Pokanokets, was the leader, enlisting the Narragansetts and as many others of the natives as he was able. They fell upon Swanzey, and soon after Brookfield suffered. Deerfield was burned, and Hadley attacked. Springfield, Northfield, Lancaster, Medfield, Weymouth, Groton, and Marlborough were successively the victims of savage assaults; and where the next blow might fall was an ever present dread in every hamlet and home. Had the Wamesit Indians joined in the fray, Billerica would probably have been among the first to suffer. The town and perhaps the Colony owed its salvation to their friendly neutrality. Eliot and Gookin had such reward as they did not foresee for their benevolent labors. Other reward they had too, in the suspicion and bitter denunciation of many of the people, because they would not turn away from the friendly Indians, when the popular feeling included all red men in a common conspiracy and malignity.

The alarm came unexpectedly upon the town. On the third of May the selectmen "order the constables watch to cease this present suñer unless greater need appear." The need did appear, and the following pages of the record are of sufficient interest to be exactly reproduced.

"18. 6^m. 75. At a publick Towne Meeting.

“Also, the Selectmen & Comittee shall have further power to act in and about the premises (keeping to the order of the Hon^d Council aforesaid) so as may best conduce to the benefit of the wholl, although in some respects altering what is already ordered.

“Also, Job Laine was allowed to fortify his owne house, and to have two soldiers for garrison men to defend his house, in case y^e country could spare them.

“All this is allowed & confirmed by me,

It needs no lively imagination, reading between the lines of this record, to depict something of the tumult, hardship, and peril through which Billerica was passing. Families fled from their homes to the garrison-houses, or the greater security of the lower towns. The labors of the field gave place to fortifying, scouting, and watching. The corn must be removed to safer receptacles. They organize a military company with Jonathan Danforth, lieutenant, and James Kidder, ensign. Some of their own brave sons enlist in the service of the Colony and march to peril and death. Timothy Farley was killed at Quaboag, August 2, in the assault on Lieutenant Wheeler's company, and John French carried through life the effect of the wounds received there. And two mothers approaching their confinement sought comfort and safety in Charlestown—the wives of John Marshall and of the pastor; nor is it too much to infer that the anxiety and hardship they had suffered may explain the death, in a few days, of the sons born to them there.³

Forty-eight families are enumerated in the list of assignments above given. In 1677, a question arose and it was decided by the General Court, that the families who “departed the town” at this time should pay their war tax in Billerica. The names of seven are recorded as involved in this decision. Three of these are included in the above forty-eight: Timothy Brooks, Michael Bacon, and Joseph Foster. The four others who fled from the town were John Blood, Robert Blood, Josiah Bracket, and John Poulter. But the Blood brothers, notwithstanding this decision, seem to have been doubtfully attached to Billerica, and were soon after recognized as belonging to Concord. Billerica had then fifty families, in 1675.

The location of these garrisons was substantially as follows: Sergt. Ralph Hill's house was near Mrs. Boyden's and opposite the late Captain Ranlett's. It stood till about 1850. Sergt. Thomas Foster's house was near Mr. Mason's, southeast of Bare Hill; and Simon Crosby's was northwest of the same hill, near the fork of the Lexington and Woburn Roads. Rev. Samuel Whiting's, the main garrison, was just north of Charnstaffe Lane and west of the brook. Thomas Patten's was near the house of Mr. Frank Richardson. James Paterson's was the most northerly garrison, near Mr. Sanborn's. Sergeant Kidder's and Jonathan Danforth's were opposite each other on West Street, the former on the south side, where Gardner Parker, Esq., lives; and Danforth's still standing, or rather just disappearing as this is written, in 1879, the only structure in town which is an incontestible relic of that day. George Farley's was near the Jaquith place, southwest of the village; and Jacob French's was near, if not identical with, the house in which Mr. James Fletcher resides, a half-mile east of the village. Mr. French's house, years later, stood on the east side of the road, but he may have changed his own residence; or, as uncertain as roads often were in those days, this may easily have been turned from one side of the house to the other. Certainly the brick-lined walls and general structure of this venerable building represent the architecture of that period, and probably they are the same within which five families kept their dreary and painful watch and ward, in 1675. Timothy Brooks owned the mill at the falls of the Shawshin, in the east part of Bedford. Mr. Daniel, who had leave to fortify his own house, was on the south side of the Woburn Road, near the Shawshin River; and Job Lane, who bought the Winthrop Farm, lived very near, if not in the same ancient house, just north of Huckins Street, in Bedford, where Mr. Hiram Dutton now lives.

How much labor was spent in fortifying we may gather some idea by gleaning from the record the fact that the work done on Mr. Whiting's house, under the charge of Peter Bracket, employed thirty men, with several cattle, a little more than two days each, and the amount credited was eight pounds, six shillings, and nine pence. But the blow so long dreaded and guarded against did not fall, and the town was mercifully spared more than its common share in the burdens and losses of Philip's War. That share was sufficiently trying, and bore heavily upon the inhabitants.

Chelmsford was not quite as exempt. A letter from that town,⁴ dated "25: 12^m. 1675," reports that scouts found three dwellings burnt, "near where Joseph Parker was formerly shot," (he with others having been fired upon by Indians, but not killed,) and other signs of hostile Indians, and the more remote inhabitants had fled into the body of the town. Indians had been seen from Billerica on the west side of the Concord River, and fires, which were suspected to be signs of their presence. The letter asks an order to Billerica, "or otherwise," to secure "the bridge between them & us," and adds that some of their men are out, on Major Willard's order, and some on the other side of the Merrimack, to secure the corn of Colburn and others residing there, which Lieutenant Henschman had orders to do, and carry it over to his own house.

A petition from Groton illustrates the situation of Billerica as well, during this anxious and tedious winter of 1675-6.⁵ It "humbly shows":—

"That, whereas it seemeth meet to your worships to commend unto our honored Major Willard and impose upon him the maintaining a continued scout of forty troopers and dragoons, to range between Groton, Lancaster, and Marlborough and those parts; we make bold humbly to present our conceptions upon that account. For Marlborough we do conceive the present supply left there in garrison do answer the end more fully, and will also render our scout an unnecessary burden; for Lancaster and Groton we find by experience that the safety is little advanced in this way, by reason of so long absence and so great distance of this scout, necessary in this method. Besides the incumbrance lying upon us for quarters for horse and men, besides the drawing up of our men from several towns to such a limit, seems to carry inconvenience with it; the towns from whence our forces are raised, especially Chelmsford and Billerica, being weak and in want of more strength at home, and danger occurring to them by the sudden and suspicious removal of the Weymesit Indians, whose troopers do hereupon desire a release. Moreover, the conceptions of the towns related, conceive humbly, that a scout of garrison soldiers, though of a less number and these footmen, whom the towns may out of themselves make dragoons, by order from authority as occasion may present, would be more for the security of the towns; besides the hazard in which so small a number must needs go in, as we have sufficient ground to suspect by experience, and many emergencies which may suddenly fall out before address be made to your worships. We humbly present to your honors consideration, and if it seem rational, to alter or add to this matter, according to your discretion.

“Your honors humble supplicants,

“JAMES PARKER.

THO: WHEELER.

HENRY WOODHOUSE.”

“GROTON, Feb. 6, 1675-6.

Mr. Parker had been an early citizen of Billerica, and this petition was dated only three or four days before the burning of Lancaster, and five weeks before that of Groton. It was written by Rev. Samuel Willard, of Groton, afterwards President of Harvard College, and son of Major Simon Willard, who was now devoting the last energies of his useful life to the defence of the Colony; his death occurring April 24th. On March 29th he was in Chelmsford, and ordered the fortifying of Billerica bridge at the request of the people.

At the same time Jonathan Danforth was in Cambridge, employed as the following paper shows:—⁶

“CAMBRIDGE, 28:1:1676.

“In obedience to an order of the Honorable Council, March, 1675-6, appointing us whose names are underwritten as a committee to consult the several towns of the County of Middlesex with reference to the best means of the preservation of our out-towns, remote houses and farms, for their security from the common enemy; we having sent to the several towns to send us their apprehensions by some one meet person of each town, this day we consulted concerning the same and have concluded to propose as followeth:

"1. That the towns of Sudbury, Concord, and Chelmsford be strengthened with forty men aplece, which said men are to be improved in scouting between town and town, who are to be commanded by men of prudence, courage, and interest, in the said towns, and the parties in each town are to be ordered to keep together in some place commodious in said towns, and not in garrisoned houses; and these men to be upon charge of the country.

"2. That for the security of Billerica there be a garrison of a number competent at Weymessit, who may raise a thousand bushels of corn upon the lands of the Indians in that place; may be improved daily in scouting and ranging the woods between Weynessit and Andover and on the west of Concord river, on the east and north of Chelmsford, which will discover the enemy before he comes to the towns and prevent lurking Indians about our towns. Also, that they shall be in a readiness to succor any of the three towns at any time, when in distress; also, shall be ready to join with others to follow the enemy upon a sudden, after their appearing.

"3. That such towns as Lancaster, Groton, and Marlborough, that are forced to remove, and have not some advantage of settlement (peculiar) in the Bay, be ordered to settle at the frontier towns that remain, for their strengthening; and the people of the said towns to which they are appointed are to see to their accomodation in the said towns.

"4. That the said towns have their own men returned that are abroad, and their men freed from impressment during their present state.

"5. That there be appointed a select number of persons in each town of Middlesex, who are, upon any information of the distress of any town, forthwith to repair to the relief thereof; and that such information maybe seasonable, the towns are to dispatch posts, each town to the next, till notice be conveyed over the whole country, if need be.

"And in reference to the line of stocadoes proposed to the serious consideration, after our best advice upon it. It is conceived by ourselves and by all the persons sent by the several towns, that it is not admissible for the reasons following:

"1. The excessive charge to effect it, maintain and keep it, the line being conceived, by those that know it best, to be longer than is proposed; neither can several fords fall in the line, unless it be run so crooked that it will be more disadvantage than profit.

"2. The length of time before it can be accomplished, in which time it is to be feared that many of the towns included will be depopulated, unless other means prevent.

"3. The damage it will be in taking off laborers, which in this season of the year had need be improved in sowing and planting, help in many places being very scarce.

"4. The usefulness of it, when it is done, it being so easy a matter to break through it, and the rivers which are to fence a great part of these towns are fordable in several places, and in all other places passable by rafts, &c., which is much in use by the Indians at this day. We might add the great discontent and mourning of the people in general, so far as we have had opportunity to discover concerning it, that we fear the imposing of such a thing would effect an ill consequence. These things considered, besides several other reasons of weight that might be added, cause us to present our apprehensions, as in the first place we did, that the drawing of this line at this time is not admissible; but all with humble submission to your Honors in the case.

“Your humble servants,

“HUGH MASON.

RICHARD LOWDON.”

The share that Billerica took in the military service is suggested by items like these:⁷ Samuel Whiting is enrolled among the troopers; Job Lane is impressed; and Daniel Rogers, from December to February, 1675. And when, fifty years after, Massachusetts rewarded the soldiers in this war somewhat tardily by land-grants, the following Billerica men or their heirs shared in these “Narragansett” grants, proving that they had been in the service: Samuel Hunt, John Needham, James Paterson, Nathaniel Rogers, John Shed, John Sheldon, John Stearns, Joseph Thompson.

These and possibly others are the men alluded to in the following action of the town, in June, 1676: “The selectmen, considering the necessity of some speedy care to be taken that y^e corne of those souldiers that are now in the country service should forthwith be dressed, do order the constables to take special care of y^e same, & * * to impress persons into that worke, as need shall require; & that y^e constables lay not the burden of this worke upon some few particular persons, but as much in general as may bee, only taking them most that may bee in y^e best capacity to attend it with least damage.”

The position of the Christian Indians at Wamesit and other “praying towns” was one of especial embarrassment and hardship during these dark days. Gookin was their candid judge, as well as their true friend, and his estimate of their attitude was amply vindicated by later developments.⁸ They were honestly friendly, and desired to act on the former advice of Passaconaway. Gookin wished that advantage be taken of this fact, and that their forts at

⁷ Massachusetts Archives. Vols. LXVIII, LXIX, and CXIV, p. 101.

Fort Hill and elsewhere should be manned by a few English soldiers, who could direct and use the activity of the Indians in the public defence. But the excited imaginations of the English, generally, could appreciate no distinction of friendly and hostile Indians, and every red man was a foe to be dreaded and distrusted, if not shot at sight; and Captain Gookin's wise plan of defence stood no chance of being accepted. The hostile Indians, of course, sought every opportunity, and found many, to foment this jealousy, if they could not win the Christian Indians to their side.

Wannalancet, the Wamesit sachem, had retired at the beginning of the war to the vicinity of Penacook (Concord), and subsequently to the region of the upper Connecticut, resisting overtures from the English to induce him to return. A portion of the tribe remained at Pawtucket. James Richardson, of Chelmsford, was for a time in charge of them; and a barn or haystack belonging to him was burned by skulking hostile Indians, as were two or three houses in the same town. The unfortunate Wamesits were falsely charged with these acts; and a party of fourteen Chelmsford men, under pretence of scouting for Philip's forces, went out to assail them.⁹ Calling the unsuspecting Indians from their wigwams, two of the party fired. Five women and children were wounded, and one boy was killed. The others were restrained from their murderous purpose, and the outrage was severely condemned by the better part of the English. The murderers were tried; but the juries, swayed by the popular feeling, would not convict them. The Indians saw that however friendly they might be their lives were in peril, and fled to the woods for safety. The Council sent Lieutenant Henchman to persuade them to return, but at first without avail. After three weeks of great suffering for want of food, most of them, however, did return. The Council directed Major Henchman to treat them kindly, and sent Rev. John Eliot, with Majors Gookin and Willard, to encourage them and try to persuade the Chelmsford people to treat them better.

It is not easy to determine the order of events, and the following incidents were probably concurrent with or prior to some of those above mentioned. The Court, as well as the Chelmsford men, undertook to punish the Wamesits for wrongs of which not these but others were guilty. They were summoned, and brought down to Boston; convicted, on no good evidence, of the Chelmsford fires, and for a time imprisoned. Most of them were soon liberated and sent home, under conduct of Lieutenant Richardson. But a military company was encountered at Woburn on their way, and one of the soldiers against orders fired and killed a young brave. The murderer was acquitted by a jury. The Indians, alarmed by these repeated wrongs, again fled. They left behind six or seven persons too old or invalid to accompany them; and the wigwam in which these unfortunates were left was set on fire by inhuman white men and consumed with all its inmates. The wretched remnant of the Wamesits, convinced at last that there was no peace for them in their Pawtucket homes, finally joined their chief in the depths of the forest, and did not return until the war was over.

It would not be strange if in retaliation for their wrongs some of the Wamesits were responsible, as was charged, for later assaults. Mr. Hubbard, the pastor of Ipswich, in his Indian Wars, thus explains an attack at Andover. He records the burning of a house there and wounding of one Roger Marks, and adds: "Two more houses about Shawshen, beyond the said Andover, were burned about March 10; also they killed a young man of the said Town, April 8, the son of George Abbot. And another son of his was carried away the same day, who yet was returned some few months after, almost pined to Death with Hunger." Mr. Abbot lived on the Shawshin, in the west part of Andover, and the inference which has been drawn from Hubbard's language, that the houses "about Shawshen" which were burned were in Billerica, has no good foundation and is improbable.

Joseph Abbot, of Andover, was slain, as we have seen, on April 8. The next day, which was the Sabbath, a special alarm occurred in Billerica, and troops from below were summoned to the defence of the town. Increase Mather tells us:²⁰ "This day, being the Lord's Day, there was an alarm at Charlestown, Cambridge, & other towns, by reason that sundry of the enemy were seen at Billerica, and (it seemeth) had shot a man there." A letter from John Cotton is also quoted, saying, "the Indians beset Billerica round about, the inhabitants being at meeting."

Read Mather's doubtful statement about "a young man murdered there," in the light of Hubbard's record that Joseph Abbot was killed at Andover the day previous, and it becomes clearly probable that the trouble and bitterness of that anxious day were not intensified by the actual death of any one here. This probability is strengthened by the fact that Danforth, who records carefully by name all the victims of the massacres in 1692 and 1693, makes no such record at this time, as he surely would not have omitted to do, if one of the sons of Billerica had then fallen, in circumstances so sad and striking

Another glimpse of this Sabbath alarm is preserved in the following curious paper. John Seers, constable of "Wooburne," petitions the Court, 1676, May 10, complaining of John Wyman, "for resisting his impressment of a horse, when some time last April, Capt. J^m. Cottler marched through oburn with several soldiers to go to bilerekye against the Indians, he having a warrant from our honred. maygor Willard, late deseased, to myselfe & the constable at bilerekye, to impress horses or anything. * * because of the stir at bilerekye, about 20 of the best of our horses & men were gone up to help them, & horses were very scarc." He goes on to recite the hard words and resistance of Wyman, and prays "for such action as will prevent such abuse, * * that soe I & other constables may not goe in fear of our lives, when we are upon the execution of our ofess," etc.

Plainly the day when twenty troopers from Woburn came to the rescue of Billerica was one of serious alarm and agitation here. But the days of this dark trial were approaching an end. and, August 1, it was ordered, "that the garison soldiers of Billerica, Chelmsford, & Groton be dismissed," unless those towns should within six days make the necessity of their continuance appear to the Council. Philip was killed on the 12th of August, and peace ensued, except on the eastern border, where the war dragged on another season. But its alarms no longer thrilled the homes of Billerica. Families could return to their houses and resume their accustomed duties. Farmers could plant and reap without expecting to hear a warwhoop; and Mr. Whiting could write his sermons undisturbed by a sentinel's tread, and preach without having guns stacked at the church. Groton was less fortunate, in its greater suffering, and it was not till the spring of 1678 that its exiled inhabitants were able to reoccupy their deserted homes.

Of the condition in which the town was left at the close of the war, we have fortunately a description in the language of the selectmen, whose petition to the General Court, "1676, 8^m, 12," is preserved:—¹¹

"Whereas, by an order of this Honrd Court, May the last, for the levying of 10 single country rates, it was ordered that the frontier towns, which were considerably weakened in persons or estates by reason of y^e enemie, should represent their condition to this Court.

"These are humbly to entreat this Honrd Court to consider the condition of our towne, being weakened both in psons & estates by reason of the distress of the war. by reason of some persons removing from us the last winter & spring into other inland towns, & have paid their last 10 rates in those places to which they went; others put off their cattell or took them to other towns, (for fear of losing them here by y^e enemie,) & so are lyable to pay rates where they are, or else have spent great part of them in billeting garrison souldiers.

"Six persons & their families removed out of town & paid elsewhere, so that, Whereas, our single country rate in Aug.. 1675, was 14. 07, 00; when we took an exact list of all, according as the law directs, y^e whole was but 11. 10. 3. We humbly intreat this Honrd Court to give order to the country treasurer to abate us such a proportion as our rate falls short of what it was, that so our inhabitants may not be burthened beyond the true intent of y^e law. especially considering that part of that estate that paid in our town the last year, do pay these 10 rates in other towns, & we nevertheless pay o^r full rate, according to law. Also, we humbly intreat this Honrd Court to consider o^r poor towne in reference to the great charge we have been at in keeping garrison soulders for the defense of towne & country, both the last year & this sumer, which in all does amount to as much as 12 men's billet 35 weeks, or 420 weeks of one man, the burden of the same lying upon some few men, others there not capable to do it; also many of our inhabitants are grown very low, several persons at this time having no bread corne; yet considerable families to provide for; & in general we all drew very heavily, not knowing how to pay our dues & maintain our families.

"We humbly intreat this Honrd Court to consider our low condition & abate us in our after rates, as in your wisdom you shall see meet; so shall you further oblige your appear, answer to Billerica was not made until 1677, October, and after a second petition had come from the selectmen. Then the Town Record says:¹² "the Court ordering that those families which did depart y^e towne should pay their ten rates to us, notwithstanding their payment of them elsewhere." Seven names follow of the persons concerned: "John & Robert Blood, Mib: Bacon, Tim: Brooks, Josia Bracket, J^m Poulter, & Jos: Foster"; and the sum which the constables are ordered to collect was thirty-one pounds, "and to add or abate for transportation."

In June, 1677, an expedition, numbering two hundred Indians from Natick and forty English soldiers, was sent, under Captain Benjamin Swett, of Hampton, to the Kennebec, where the Indians were reported to have six forts well furnished. It ended in disaster; and one Billerica soldier who was involved has left a record of it in his petition for relief.¹³ Thomas Dutton states that he "was imprest from Billerica and sent to the eastward." He was in "that fatal scirmish in which Capt. Swett, the worthy commander, was slain, and almost all his offisirs, with about 50 men and 21 more wounded." Dutton was one of the wounded; "shot through the side of my belt & through the left knee, & fell down not able to help" himself. He recites a long story and asks, with apparent justice, for relief from the General Court.

CHAPTER VIII.

INDIAN AND MILITARY HISTORY.

FROM the close of Philip's War, in 1676, a period of peace with the Indians ensued for fifteen years. These years were not, however, free from anxiety and frequent alarms. The most interesting incident in the Indian history of Billerica during this period was the procuring of an Indian Deed. It is found in the Middlesex Records, Vol. IX, p. 274, and, omitting much legal phraseology, affirms, "that Sarah Indian, daughter of John Tahattawan, John Thomas and his wife Robert, John Nompow and his mother Bess, all of Weymesitt, and Thomas Waban and his mother, the relict of old Waban, of Natick, deceased; For and in consideration of the full and just sume of 18 pounds sterling, silver, New England coyned, to them well and truly payd, by Jonathan Danforth, of Billerica, for the use of said town of Billerica; i. e. to Sarah aforesaid, 5 p., to John Thomas and his wife, 50 shillings, to John Nompow and his mother, 8 p., to Thomas Waban and his mother, fifty shillings, etc., Have granted * * all and all manner of Indian right and claim to that whole parcel of land, granted by the General Court of this Colony, to be called by the name of Billerica, lying on both sides of the Shawshin river, and on both sides of Concord river, bounded by Merrimac river North, Andover North east, Woburn South, and Concord West, to have and to hold * * without the lawful claim of any Indian whatsoever."

The date of this deed is, 5 June, 1685. Whether the motive which led to the acquisition of an Indian title at this late day was purely benevolent may be doubted. A conflict of claims as to the bounds of the town on the west side of Concord River had arisen. The bounds of the grant from the General Court were obscure, and, in 1684, the Bloods had obtained an Indian deed to quite a large tract, claimed also by Billerica, in the vicinity of the present Carlisle

Village. The line described in the deed to Blood was "to begin at the North corner of Mr. Allen's farm," or not far from opposite the Two Brothers rocks, "to begin to state a straight line over the highest place of the great hill, called by y^e Indians Puckatasset, till it come to Chelmsford line," including all the land between the Bloods farms and Chelmsford line, "till you come to a little brook at Concord village, [now Acton line,] and so down to the great river by Concord old bounds." This description includes meadows which Billerica had granted to her own citizens twenty years earlier, and to which her right was confirmed, in 1700, by the General Court. When Billerica obtained her Indian deed, it was probably felt to be prudent to secure whatever title the natives could give, and not leave the benefit of it to the unjust claim of the Bloods.

With the increase of English neighbors, the Indians at Wamesit found their home there less satisfactory, or the prices offered for their lands more so, and gradually sold their reservation. "Wanalanset, Sachem," and others sell to Jonathan Tyng, 1687, December 2, two parcels, of which one was on the east of Concord River, and is described as containing "the old Planting ground, which the Indians, who were the former proprietors thereof, and their associates, used to employ & improve, by planting, fishing, & Dwelling thereon, for many years past, and contains 212 acres, more or less; and is bounded by Merrimac river four score pole, and so runs in a straight line nearest the south, to take in the greatest part of the old Fort Hill; and bounded south by the fence of the old Indian field, and West by Concord river."¹

This description includes less than half of the five hundred acres granted by the Court to the Indians there; but it is improbable that they would have sold this angle between the rivers first, and, if they did not, then this is the date when the Indian title there ceased.

Mr. Tyng, however, deemed his Indian title not quite sufficient, and petitioned the Governor,² reciting that he had given satisfaction to the Indians to leave the same, and praying for a grant of the said lands, under "such moderate quit-rents and acknowledgment as to y^o Ex^c shall seem meet."

The Winthrops had already raised the question, whether the lapse of the Indian title would not open the way for them to reclaim the full bound of their early grant: When the Indian reservation at Wamesit was taken from their grant, the Court gave them leave to locate an equivalent elsewhere; but, for some reason, they did not avail themselves of this permission. They may have anticipated the departure of the Indians, and preferred to retain the chance of recovering here. For this purpose, as early as 1679, Mr. Wait Winthrop presented a petition to the Court.³ After reciting the fact and motives of the grant to his grandmother, he adds that "about y^e yeare 1661 or 1662 some psons, zealous To settle y^e Indiyans in some civil and ecclesiastical state, moved y^e Gen^l Court to grant pt of s^d land, called, as I suppose, Wameset, for an Indian plantacon, which y^e Gen^l Court granted, ordering y^e like quantity or value of other lands To be laid out to us in Lew thereof." He explains why the interests of the family were not defended, in opposition to this action, and proceeds to say, "that noe land hath been laid out since for our family; and Though God has pleaded our Right by expelling y^e Indian inhabitants and leaving y^e land in statu quo prius, yet I have informatcon that some English have, by Addresses to y^e Hon^l Court, petitioned for y^e same or part thereof. My humble request therefore is, that That which was soe long agoe, and upon such good and grateful consideracons granted to us, may not be disposed from us, or. if any grant to that purpose be already made, the same may bee suspended Till our Claymes and right may, at y^e Appointment of this Hon^{ble} Court, further appeare." The Court, however, seems not to have favored Winthrop's petition, and Mr. Tyng secured the title, which he sold to Borland, in 1687.

The peace secured by Billerica and other towns from Indian assaults was precarious and maintained only by constant vigilance. In 1689, Dover suffered a deadly assault, in which Major Richard Waldron, one of her oldest and foremost citizens, was barbarously murdered. European policy was perhaps the occasion of this outbreak, for the Revolution in England gave the French, who ruled Canada, a pretence for instigating this attack. Five days later, July 12, Lieutenant Henchman reports⁴ Indian spies around the garrisons in Dunstable and asks for relief, "20 men or more," a request soon repeated by the selectmen of that town.

There was need enough for the military company which existed in Billerica, and of which an interesting glimpse is preserved in a report to the "onered goviner and counsel and gentlemen representatives," giving account of the choice of officers, 1689, June 17.⁵ Captain Danforth led the company out, gave them liberty of choice, manifested his own unfitness for the place and willingness that another be chosen. Only those who were twenty-one years old voted. They took Captain Danforth at his word, and gave him only twelve votes, to thirty-five for Lieut. Joseph Thompson. Sergt. John Marshall was chosen lieutenant and Oliver Whiting ensign. Samuel Frost, whose spelling is marvellous, if he was "Clark," makes this return, and craves confirmation of the company's choice from the authorities. The representatives confirm it, but the governor and council "consent not"; and, disregarding the popular will, they "insist that Danforth remain Captain and Thompson Lieutenant, though Oliver Whiting is allowed as ensign."

In 1690, the English, moved by these constant perils, and feeling that there would be no security as long as the French held Canada and sent their Indian allies on such bloody expeditions, laid their plans for the reduction of Canada. The result was disastrous. With great effort and cost an expedition set forth under Sir William Phipps against Quebec. But the delays were so great that it did not arrive in season for action, and could only return discomfited.

In this expedition Billerica was represented by no less a person than Captain Danforth, as appears from an order,⁶ dated July 15, 1690, "that Capt. Danforth, now going forth in their Maj^{ty} service, in the intended expedition for Canada, have liberty to hire some meet person in said town to serve his domestic occasions in his absence, and that the said person be exempted from impress to any public service other than attending duty in town during said expedition."

In 1691, the Indians fell upon Dunstable, September 2d, and murdered Joseph Hassell, his wife Anne, his son Benjamin, and Mary Marks. Hassell's father Richard lived for a few years in Billerica, and was a tything-man here in 1679. They came again to Dunstable, September 26th, and killed Christopher Temple, and Obadiah Perry. The latter, when fleeing from Dunstable on the alarm of 1675, had been permitted to hire in Billerica and resided here for some years.

The following winter an expedition was sent "to the Eastward," in which a son of Billerica did good service. Belknap, in his History of New Hampshire, repeats the account of it from Mather's Magnalia: "A young man being in the woods near Cochecho was fired at by some Indians. Lieut. Wilson immediately went out with eighteen men, and finding the Indians, killed or wounded the whole party, excepting one. This struck a terror and kept them quiet the remainder of the winter. But on the tenth day of June, an army of French and Indians made a furious attack on Storer's garrison at Wells, where Capt. Convers commanded; who, after a brave and resolute defence, was so happy as to drive them off with great loss."

Capt. James Convers was from Woburn, and his plucky lieutenant was John Wilson, of Billerica, who richly deserves to have his long forgotten part in this expedition recorded here for remembrance in Billerica. He came from Woburn in 1683, and built the mill, which long bore his name, on Vine Brook; and there no doubt he lived. In 1700, he was granted three pounds for service and use of his own horse at this time.

The Indian assault so long dreaded and guarded against fell at last upon Billerica soon after, and two homes were made desolate. This sad event occurred, 1 August, 1692, and the place was near the turn in the road by Mr. Russell's house, a half-mile south of North Billerica. In the early days, there was a "cross-roads" at this point, an old road running south towards Fox Hill and the village. On the east side of this road, and south of the other, now leading to the Rev. Elias Nason's place, was the home of John Dunkin, who, in 1670, received twenty-five acres of land here for the "fat ox," presented by the town to its deputy, Mr. Humphrey Davy, of Boston. He married Joanna, daughter of Henry Jefts, and died in December, 1690, of small-pox, leaving seven children. His widow married Mr. Benjamin Dutton, whose father Thomas lived not far south on the same road.

The other fated family lived opposite, or on the northeast angle between the two roads. Zachary Shed was the son of Daniel Shed, one of the early settlers. He married Mrs. Ann Bray, in 1677, and their home was blessed with five children at the time.

Of the circumstances of this attack we know nothing. None of the histories of the period mention it; and Danforth's record, giving the names and adding simply, "all slain by y^e Indians," is our only authority for the fact of this first Billerica massacre. Lancaster suffered a similar attack two weeks earlier. Whether the same or other Indians came here, and whether it were in the morning, at noon, or in the night; whether the homes were burned or left to the smitten survivors, we can not tell. We only know that in each, the mother with her eldest and youngest child perished at the bloody hands of the savages; but that is enough to stamp the dark day in the memory of Billerica, and make it fit that we glean and record all the little that we can of such sufferers. Mrs. Dutton was thirty-six years of age, one of the earliest natives of the town. Her daughter Mary Dunkin was sixteen, and her son Benoni, "son of her grief," was less than two, born two months after his father's death. If Mrs. Shed's age were the same as her husband's, she was also thirty-six; her daughter Hannah was thirteen, and Agnes was a child of two years. None seem to have been made captives in this assault. Four families at least were living as far north, or beyond, which were for some reason spared by the savages. Mr. Shed's brother Daniel lived beside him. Beyond was Roger Toothaker, who at this very time was wasting his time and substance in pursuit of the witchcraft delusions at Salem, and leaving his family to charitable aid; and farther north were John and Thomas Rogers, and probably John Levistone; names all involved in the still more dreadful experience to come. The wives of both the Rogers brothers were sisters of the Sheds, and of these four brothers and sisters living within a mile of each other and of North Billerica, the family of Daniel Shed only escaped in both attacks.

The Records, February 27, 1692-3, show us the vigilance which the town needed to maintain under these trying circumstances. "At a meeting of the militia in Bilerika, both of horse & foot, in observance of a warrant from our honoured Major, for the renewing of watching and scouting in our Town, ordered by the militia present that the watch at Capt. Hill's & in the centre of the Town, & a corporall for the end of the Towne, be carefully observed, & notice unto the other outskirts of the Town to stand upon their gard, & to require to keep such a watch in their several quarters as they are capable of keeping.

"At the same time it was agreed upon by the militia, both of the hors and foot, that a petition be drawn up in behalf of the Towne, to be sent by our deputie, Capt. Hill, & by him to be presented unto his excellency & y^e honoured Cowncell & Representatives assembled, or when assembled, for some easement of our scouting required of us, or metigations in our public charges; this was agreed upon by the militia and by the selectmen & severall other inhabitation present."

Another aspect of the life of these anxious patriots comes out in the subjoined line of the record: "We expended this evening at Bro. Crosbey's two pots of Rosted cider."

Six months later we find the following order, addressed by Thomas Hinchman, Sergeant-Major, to Lieutenant John Lane, of Billerica, 23 August, 1693:⁸ "By virtue of an order from the hon^{ble} Lt. Govern^r, bearing date 22 Ang., 1693, these are in his majesty's name to require you forthwith to Impress eight Troopers out of yo^r troop und^r yo^r command, well appointed with arms and ammunition for his majesty's service; four of which are to be daily Employed as a scout about yo^r town, especially towards the great swamp. The other foure you are to send to me, upon moon-day morning Nexte; you are also to send to me the names of the sold^{rs} imprest who are to enter into sarvice on said moon-day. Wreof you may not fail."

With watching and service like this, diversified with witchcraft excitements and trials at Salem, and with an assault on Groton, 27 July, 1694, in which William Longley, the town clerk, his wife and five children, with two other children, were slain, the people of Billerica passed these trying years. The second massacre fell upon them, 1695, August 5, four days more than three years after the first. The town clerk, who rarely turns aside from official record to mention incidents, gives four lines to this massacre:⁹ "This day received that awful stroke by the enemy of fivetene persons slain & taken, more sad than that we met withall three years before, when we mett upon the like occasion." Mr. Farmer's narrative of this event was the result of careful inquiry sixty years ago, and is as follows:¹⁰

"In the northerly part of the town, on the east side of Concord River, lived a number of families, who, though without garrisons and in a time of war, seemed to be under no apprehensions of danger. Their remoteness from the scenes of Indian depredations might have contributed to their fancied security. The Indians came suddenly upon them in the day time. Dr. Mather, the only early writer who has mentioned the event, says it was reported they were on horseback, and from that circumstance 'were not suspected for Indians, till they surprised the house they came to.' They entered the house of John Rogers, son of one of the early settlers, about noon. and while from the fatigues of the day he was enjoying repose upon his bed. they discharged one of their arrows. which entered his neck and pierced the jugular vein. Awakened with this sudden and unexpected attack, he started up. seized the arrow, which he forcibly withdrew, and expired with the instrument of death in his hand. A woman being in the chamber threw herself out of the window and, though severely wounded, effected her escape by concealing herself among some flags. A young woman was scalped and left for dead, but survived the painful operation and lived for many years afterwards. A son and daughter of Mr. Rogers were taken prisoners. The family of John Levistone suffered most severely. His mother-in-law and five young children were killed and his eldest daughter captured. Thomas Rogers and his oldest son were killed. Mary, the wife of Dr. Roger Toothaker, was killed, and Margaret, his youngest daughter, taken prisoner. Fifteen persons were killed or taken at this surprisal. The records of the town give the names of fourteen who were killed and taken into captivity. Ten were killed, of whom five were adults. Though the Indians were immediately pursued by the inhabitants of the center of the town, yet so effectually had they taken precautions in their flight, that all efforts to find them were unavailing. It is said they had even tied up the mouths of their dogs with wampum, from an apprehension that their barking would discover the direction they had taken. The shock given to the inhabitants by this melancholy event was long had in painful remembrance." And, in his Billerica, Mr. Farmer adds: "Through the lapse of years, it is difficult to give a very circumstantial account of it, and the few particulars I have collected ought, perhaps, to receive some deductions from the brevity of human memory."

The name of one sufferer on that day has escaped record. The other fourteen belonged to the four families already named. The family which was smitten most heavily was that of John Levistone. The site of his house has not been identified, but it was doubtless near that of John Rogers, probably southeast. He was a Scotchman, and first appears in the employ of Carrier. He had married, in 1681, Margaret, the daughter of Thomas Ross, another Scotchman, who lived on the west side of Loes Plain, near Miss Allen's, and whose wife was Seeth Holman, of Cambridge. She had now been a widow about four months, and was either visiting or living with her daughter, Mrs. Levistone, when death came so terribly at the hand of the savages. The parents escaped and their eldest son John; but the daughter Sarah, aged eleven, was made captive, and the five younger children were all slain. Their names were Seth, Thomas, Mary, Margaret, and Alexander. A more desolating sorrow could hardly fall upon a happy home in an hour.

John Rogers lived nearly north of Mr. Talbot's, about eighty rods. The well by his house may still be seen, and bricks from England may be dug from the cellar. He was nearly fifty-four years old and had lost his wife, Mary Shed, seven years before. Of his six children, four escaped; but Daniel, aged twelve, and Mercy were made captives.

Thomas Rogers, a younger brother, lived near. The spot has not been identified, but it was probably very near where the village hall and school-house now stand. His first wife had been Hannah Shed, and after her death he married Mary Brown, a step-daughter of his father. He perished with his eldest son Thomas, while his wife with two children escaped. It is a reasonable conjecture that the father and son were surprised away from their home.

There was one other victim of that bloody day, whose case was if possible more tragic. She was the wife of Dr. Roger Toothaker, and her home stood at the point where, in later years, the Middlesex Canal left the Concord River. Tradition says it is still standing, as the ell of the old brick Rogers' house. Her personality and trials deserve special notice. Her name was Mary Allen, and she was sister of that Martha Allen who married Thomas Carrier and was a victim of the witchcraft delusion at Salem three years before. Not only was Mrs. Toothaker's sister thus fatally involved, but her husband, with more freedom and folly, neglecting the claims of his family and disregarding the appeals of the selectmen to return to his duty, left wife and children to the charity of his neighbors. Two of the children were apprenticed by the selectmen to Joseph Walker and Edward Farmer. Trials like these were mingled in the bitter cup of Mrs. Toothaker, with the Indian alarms and the massacre of her neighbors. At last the warwhoop of the savages sounded her death-knell, at the same time that her youngest daughter Margaret was borne into captivity. If the remembrance and sympathy of later generations could afford any compensation for the sorrows of such a life, we might search far to find a person better entitled to them than Mary Allen Toothaker.

The agitation and alarm which ran through the town, as the tidings of this bloody work spread, we can form slight conception of. The day was Monday, not, as some traditions affirm, the Sabbath. The "garrisons" would be soon filled with excited women and children; the men would prepare for defence and attack, for pursuit of the retreating foe was the first impulse; every nook, every tree and bush would be watched for a concealed foe; and for many days the dread of another and deadly blow must have shaken their hearts.

Three weeks passed and the alarm continued. Colonel Lynde, of Charlestown, was commissioned to pursue the foe, and his report discovers to us glimpses of what Billerica was passing through.

"Aug. 23. 1695." Receiving commission from the Honorable William Stoughton, Lieutenant-Governor, Commander-in-Chief over all the province of Massachusetts, with instructions for his Majesty's service in the county of Middlesex: pursuant whereunto I went that night to Billerica, where I found about three hundred men in arms from Woburn, Reading, Malden, Medford, Charlestown, Cambridge, Watertown, under conduct of Major William Johnson, Major Jeremiah Swaine, Major Wade, Capt. William Greene, Capt. John Greene, Lt. Remington, Lt. Homan, Capt. Gerfield," Sergeant Bond, and Mr. Sherman.

"That night we marched to the river of Merrimack, guarded the fords, there being three between Andover and Chelmsford, with about forty men at each ford, and with about one hundred men encamped that night at Prospect Hill, that lies between Chelmsford and the river, on the northern side of the great swamp; leaving the remaining forces to guard the town. As soon as it was light, on the 24th of August instant, we sent men to the top of the said hill, where we had a view of the said swamp and the country far about, but could discover no fire anywhere. Thence we proceeded to range the woods between Andover and Chelmsford, but finding no sign of our enemies, we rendezvous at a place called Sandy Pond, about eight miles from Billerica eastward; from whence about eleven of the clock that day we went to the great swamp, dismounted half our men, the other half taking their horses. We caused the men on foot to pass through the swamp in a rank, each man at a distance as much as was convenient; appointed to rendezvous again at Prospect Hill; Major Johnson, with about forty men, compassing the swamp on the west side, and myself with the rest of the soldiers on the east side. Our men on foot, with much difficulty having got through the swamp, gave us account that they saw a new track and smelt Indians in one place, but did not judge by their track there were above two; having again rendezvous about four o'clock, afternoon, near Prospect Hill, having before noon ranged the woods belonging partly to Andover to the eastward of Prospect Hill, we proceeded to range the woods towards Chelmsford; rendezvousing again near the time of sun setting at the chief fording place on the Merrimack below Hunt's garrison, where I advised with all our officers. Having no prospect of doing service against the enemy, considering the evil that had accrued by drawing off all forces at once, I left a guard of ten men to guard that ford, under the Gerfield" was Benjamin Garfield, of Watertown, and his name has already appeared (p. 81) as a member of the committee appointed by the General Court to run the important lines and decide the contest between Billerica, Concord, and Chelmsford. Eight months later, we read the situation in the following from the Town Records:—

"April 6, 1696. Training day evening. At a meeting of the commission officers, both of horse and foot, by virtue of a warrant from our Major, we new erected our watches and ordered the repairing of garisons, and appointed the masters of them and the number of souldiers belonging to them. and other persons & families.

"At the same meeting the comition officers with the selectmen ordered that the remainder of the old poudre be dispersed among the severall garisons acording unto the number of souldiers appointed unto them, to be eaqually distributed. and the master of the garison or the masters of the severall garisons unto whom the poudre is distributed to becom responsible for it, and to secure it and return it, or the vallue of it in money, except there be occation for to make use thereof in their own defence.

"The same day the selectmen compounded with our drummers, John Shead & Samuel Frost. To pay forthwith unto John Shead twenty shillings. to clere with him while that day; & to pay to Samuel Frost ten shillings, & to clere with him while that day; but it hath not been attended."

Account was taken in July of the ammunition stock in the hands of Capt. Danforth. It consisted of a barrel of powder, 110 pounds, part of an old barrel, 68 pounds, lead, 120 pounds, flints, 130, bullets, 38, and match "sufficient."

These savage and desolating assaults on Billerica are incidents of what is known as "King William's War," described by Mather, in his Decennium Luctuosum, and extending from 1688 to 1698. There is no evidence that either of these attacks were preceded by any warnings, or that any other towns suffered at the same time.

The dusky foe chose to fall upon some unsuspecting settlement and beat a hasty retreat before neighbors could rally to the rescue. This method of warfare must have been peculiarly trying, and demanded ceaseless vigilance. Of the situation and anxiety of the time, we have a picture in a letter of Christopher Osgood, of Andover, which must apply nearly as well to Billerica. It is dated, 1696, Aug. 14,²² and describes the danger, a number of men having been impressed from the town for the eastward expedition, the river being low and fordable, and the enemy coming between Exeter and Haverhill. "The people of our Town are under such discouragements to stand their ground, that they are in y^e amazement of their spirits about contriving to break up and Remove, and every one to shift for their lives, though it be to y^e loss of their estates; and some garrisons already are upon removing, and extremity of fear and dangers will not suffer men to know their duty"; for which and other reasons, he "makes our speedy application to y^e honor for present relief." Another letter relates, "that William Peeters, belonging to Samuel Blanchard's garrison, went to his house with one Hoyt to fetch his horse, and not returning search was made and both men were found killed and scalped. The house was about half a mile from the garrison, on the Bildrekey road, in an open playn plase."

During all these years of danger, the inhabitants must have grown unpleasantly familiar with the trouble and annoyance, as well as the peril, of garrison life. Houses not ample for a single family must be made to serve often a half-dozen families for shelter and defence; and the comforts of life could have had small consideration. No list of the "garrisons" is given after 1675, but that changes and additions were made after so long a time is certain. The tradition is probable, that the Manning house, still standing on the Chelmsford Road, was in use as a garrison; and it is certain that Samuel Hunt's house at Wamesit was so, and from its exposed situation it was probably the most important. It stood a half-mile south of the Merrimack, at "Hunt's Falls," on what is now the farm of John Clark, somewhat south of a line connecting Mr. Clark's house and that of General Butler, and about equally distant from them. It was just east of the limits of Lowell. Here scouting parties must often have made a rendezvous, as they passed and repassed from Chelmsford to Andover, Prospect Hill, and the Great Swamp. The latter were plainly points of special interest and solicitude to the watchful inhabitants.

In the history of these Indian Wars, the name of John Lane comes into view as the leading military man in the town. He appears in rapid succession as lieutenant, captain, and colonel, and is often mentioned. He is in command of a troop in 1693, and, in 1696-7, February 12, received this order from Maj. Jonathan Tyng, of Dunstable:¹⁴ "Having advice from the Lt.-Governor, that at the spring near approaching, it may be expected that the enemy will make fresh attacks, both by sea and land, I do therefore order that you make inquiry into the state of y^e troopers under your command, and see that every one of them be mounted on a good, serviceable horse for war, and furnished with a good, well-fitted carbine, besides pistols, and to see that the whole troop be in Readiness to pass upon duty; and in case of alarum upon * Discovering the approach of the enemy by sea, you are hereby ordered with the several Troopers under your command, forthwith to repair to the port or place within your county where the Alarum is first given, there to receive and attend to further orders," etc. But no call came to such service, and the nearest approach of the Indians during the years 1696 and 1697 was at Dunstable, Haverhill, and Lancaster.

Captain Tyng, of Dunstable, writes, 1696, September 1,¹⁵ of one person killed and one taken captive "yesterday, both belonging to my garrison." He sent a negro and a Spanish Indian to do some haying across the river, and a soldier, a Plymouth Indian, to guard them. As they did not return and the dogs barked and howled, he became alarmed and sent word to Dunstable and to Captain Bowers, of Chelmsford, who speedily mustered twenty men, crossed the river, found the men dead and the Spanish Indian asleep.

In 1697, March 15, came the attack on Haverhill, immortalized by the heroism of Hannah Dustin, who was taken captive and borne as far as the Contoocook. There, on an island in the Merrimack, aided by her nurse and a lad who were taken with her, she joined consummate womanly tact and masculine heroism, killed and scalped ten of her captors, and reached her home safely with her trophies not many days after.

to bring the glad news to America, and, eleven days later, the treacherous Indians fell once more upon the settlements at Lancaster, burned two garrison-houses, and killed twenty-one, wounded two, and took six captives. This massacre brought special sorrow to Billerica, for one of the victims was the Rev. John Whiting, the young pastor of the church, and son of our Billerica pastor. It is said that he was offered quarter, but chose rather to "fight to the last than resign himself to those whose tender mercies are cruel."

The welcome peace was little more than an armistice, and, in 1703, another ten years' war broke out, known as "Queen Anne's War." A practical sign of its coming took the form of an order from Major Tyng to Capt. John Lane, 1702, April 22, requiring him "forthwith to take effectual care that there be strict execution of the act for regulating of y^e Malitia," and especially to inspect the force and see that it was duly provided with arms and ammunition. This order was not neglected. In the Diary of Judge Sewall, we have a glimpse of the fruit which it bore,¹⁰ and also of Billerica's aged pastor. Monday, 1702, October 26, he writes: "Waited on Gon^r to Wooburn; dined there. From thence to Billericay. Visited languishing Mr. Sam^l Whiting. I gave him 2 Balls of Chockalett and a pound of Figgs, which very kindly accepted. Saw the Company in Arms, led by Capt. Tomson. Went to Chelmsford."

At this point, the Lane Papers contribute a useful letter from Gov. Joseph Dudley to Major Lane.

"CAMBRIDGE, 5 Nov., 1702.

"SIR: I desire you with two of your troops to repayr to the towns of Marlboro'. Lancaster. Groten, Chelmsford, and Dunstable, and there deliver severally the letters given you, and encourage the officers in their duty, agreeable to the several Directions. You are also to labor, by all means, to speak with Wotanummon and the Penacooke men, and to assure them of friendship with the Gouvernor and all the English; but that we are fearful the french Indians will be amongst them soon and do mischief to the English, and that therefore we must have our scouts out, and if they will come and reside in any propper place near the English, they shall be welcome; if their hunting will not allow that, they must keep a good Distance from the English towns, and send one man only to Colonel Tyng, when they would speak with me, and they shall be welcome at all times, and I will never depart from my friendship to them if they will continue friends. Let the officers in the several towns use all prudence not to make the first breach, and let me hear from them on every ocation."

¹⁰ Massachusetts Historical Society's Collections. Fifth Series. Vol. VI, p. 67.

Of training and guard duty, we may be sure that the Billerica farmers had enough; and the kind of service often called for is suggested by another order from Colonel Tyng to Captain Lane, 1703, September 3:" "These are to order you forthwith to give out your warrant to your soldiers in Chelmsford, to watch, Two in a night and the day following, at the wading place at Wamesit; and to continue in that service till they have gone Round. The soldiers are to keep at the said wading place till they are relieved, as the custom hath been, by Capt. Bowers' men." In 1704, more serious work awaited these soldiers. Early in that year, or in February, 1703-4, a party assailed Northampton, surprised the guard, and made captives of Rev. John Williams, the pastor, his wife, and many others. Mrs. Williams, with two of her children and more than twenty other captives, were put to death. Mr. Williams was afterwards redeemed, and published The Redeemed Captive.

In July following, a force of seven hundred French and Indians again invaded Massachusetts, and finding Northampton well guarded, turned eastward and fell upon Lancaster, July 31. The Boston News-Letter tells the story briefly: "On Monday morning past, the enemy, French and Indians, fell upon Lancaster, about four hundred of them, assaulted six garrisons at once, where the people defended themselves very well until assistance came in from all parts by the governor's order, so that in the evening there were three hundred men in the town. And the enemy was beaten off with loss, but are yet hovering on the head of those towns, to make some farther impression if not prevented." The meeting-house was burned, with several dwellings and barns, and Lieutenant Wilder was killed and three soldiers; but the rally was so prompt and the defence so vigorous, that the loss of life was smaller than in the previous assault. Among others, twelve Billerica soldiers went to the rescue, and fortunately Captain Lane has preserved their names for us. They were "Samull Hill, Corporal, John Needham, Clark, Raph Hill, Centinell, John Farmer, Samull Hunt, Andrue Richardson, Thomas Ross, Nathanell Bacon, Samull Hill, Junr., William Grimbs, John Hunt, Steven Richardson," with four men from Chelmsford and three from Groton. "These nineteen were sent out • August y^e forth, 1704, with ten days' provisions, and marched to Lancaster to inforce Major Taylor; and they never as yet received anything for their provision ; therefore they pray that they may be considered." It is to be hoped that so reasonable a request was properly answered.

In November, Colonel Tyng received from the General Court £24 for building four blockhouses, one in Dunstable, two in Chelmsford, and one in Billerica. A blockhouse is referred to in the Records,¹⁸ "nere Andouer line," and may be the same.

It was probably in the same year, 1704, that Robert Parris was murdered, with his wife and daughter, at Dunstable ; and Joseph Hassell, Samuel Butterfield, and Samuel Whiting, Jr., taken captive. Thus a second time did the bitterness of these trying times enter the home of the aged pastor of Billerica. This son afterwards returned, but the injuries and sufferings borne probably shortened his life.

To this period belongs an incident reported by tradition. It is good enough to be true, and comes with sufficient directness to strengthen its probability. We have it from Mr. Leander Hosmer, who is a grandson of the heroine, Mary Lane, daughter of Colonel John Lane. During a period of alarm, the family was left with only one man on guard. A certain stump excited the suspicion of Mary, as she looked out of the window, and she called upon the man to shoot it. He declined, and laughed at her apprehensions. At last she told him that if he would not shoot, she would take the gun and do it herself. This she did, and the stump rolled over, a dead Indian.

The year 1705 passed without special incident, but, in 1706, a second attack at Dunstable alarmed Billerica and called out her militia in defence. A scouting party under command of Captain Pearson, of Rowley, was surprised at Weld's garrison, the Indians being equally surprised, and a bloody encounter followed in which a number were slain. Another party fell upon Blanchard's garrison, and killed Mr. Blanchard, his wife, a daughter, and Mrs. Hannah Blanchard. Seven days later, July 10, there was another encounter between the troopers and Indians, in which Joseph Kidder and Jeremiah Nelson, of Rowley, were killed, and John Pickard, of Rowley, was mortally wounded, dying in Billerica, August 5th. Billerica was prompt in sending relief, and the Papers of Captain Lane give us :—

These names of men who were ready to meet the hardships and dangers of this Indian warfare, in defence of their imperilled homes, are as worthy of honored remembrance from a grateful posterity as those which we carefully record and tenderly cherish, in the later wars of the Revolution and the Rebellion.

In the unsuccessful expedition of 1707 against Port Royal and that which had a better issue, in 1710, we may assume that some of the sons of Billerica had a part, as well as in the disastrous invasion of Canada by way of the St. Lawrence, in 1712. But the only record found of this period is another roll among the Lane Papers, giving the names of twenty-six men all found above. The service is thus explained:—

“BILIRACY, September 18, 1708.

“Reseved of Capt. John Lane the sum of eight pounds, three shillings and sixpence; i say. reseved by me for the solgers that bilary [sent?] unto Chelmsford and Groton.

“JAMES DUTTON.”

Another ten years' peace came, in 1713, with the treaty of Utrecht, and was most welcome to the weary colonists. But the time had not arrived when they could safely remit their vigilance. In 1723 came another outbreak. It was more brief than the earlier wars, ending in two years; but it is stamped more deeply in the memory and imagination of later times, by the heroism and tragic incidents of the Lovewell expedition.

This was preceded, in 1724, by an attack at Dunstable, which Penhallow, in his Indian Wars,¹⁰ describes:—

“September 4th. they fell on Dunstable. and took two in the evening; next morning. Lieut. French with fourteen men went in quest of them; but being way-laid. both he and one half of his company were destroyed. After that. as many more of a fresh company engaged them, but the enemy being much superior in number overpowered them, with the loss of one man and four wounded.”

A muster-roll is preserved,¹¹ dated 1722, July to November, which gives these Billerica names, under command of Sergeant Jonathan Butterfield, of Dunstable: John Farmer, William French, Ebenezer Frost, John Patten, Joseph and Thomas Pollard, William Stickney, and John Whiting. They were probably employed in scouting and guard duty. When the outbreak came, one soldier from Billerica, and no doubt others with him, were employed in more distant service. Thomas Westbrook writes from York, 1724, April 21, that "Lt. John Lane has been so imprudent as to suffer his men to kill sundry Creatures belonging to the people of the County of York." On summons, "he did not deny the fact, and made satisfaction to the people."

A few months later, the government offered a bounty for the scalps of Indians, as a measure of defence. Capt. John Lovewell, of Dunstable, at once raised a company of thirty men and set out on an expedition into the wilderness; struck the Indian trail about forty-four miles above Winnepesaukee, and soon returned with one scalp and a captive boy, for which they received, January 7, £200.

Again he set out, January 30, with a larger company of eighty-eight men, came up with the Indians by the pond which has since borne Lovewell's name, in Wakefield, New Hampshire, killed the whole party of ten, and returned to receive a bounty of £1,000.

The third and more memorable expedition set out with forty-seven men, 1725, April 15. Its story has been often told and can not be repeated here. The swift march into the wilderness, the discovery of the Indians by Lovewell's Pond, the fierce encounter, in which the leader, with Chaplain Frye and nearly a third of his company, lost their lives, at a cost to the savages of their chief, Paugus, and so many of his men, that the tribe never rallied from the blow: sermons and songs, chapters and volumes, have been devoted to the recital.

Beyond the general interest of the Colony in this brave and in fact successful, though costly and sad, enterprise, Billerica had special connections with it. Jonathan Kittridge, who fell with Lovewell, was from this town, as was Solomon Keyes, one of the survivors. Chaplain Jonathan Frye, of Andover, who died of his wounds, and is commemorated in the name of the town of Fryeburg, Maine, was a teacher in Billerica, in 1724. And Lieutenant Seth Wyman, who succeeded to the command when Lovewell was killed, and with as much skill as courage continued the contest and brought off the survivors, had a Billerica wife, Sarah Ross, and was of that Wyman family which lived just east of the Woburn line and was often intimately connected with Billerica history.

This vigorous and telling encounter gave the fathers a peace of twenty years. Then the mazes of European politics involved them again, and a declaration of war between England and France, in 1744, stirred New England with the summons to arms. During the peace, the French had fortified and garrisoned Louisburg. It was a very strong fort, and in hostile hands was a constant and serious menace to the English colonies. Governor Shirley at once instituted a correspondence with the Government and the other colonies, which resulted in an expedition under Sir William Pepperell, who sailed from Boston, 1745, March 24. His entire force consisted of four thousand troops from the various colonies; and he was aided by four war vessels, mounting one hundred and eighty guns. The siege was prosecuted with singular courage and skill, and resulted in the surrender of the stronghold on the sixteenth of June. The whole enterprise was well conceived and bravely executed, and reflected the greatest credit upon the New England yeomanry, whose character it illustrated. "The plan for the reduction of a regularly constructed fortress," it has been well said, "was drawn by a lawyer, to be executed by a merchant, at the head of a body of husbandmen and mechanics."

Billerica was well represented in this expedition. Only scattered and imperfect rolls of this heroic service are preserved;^a but glean- ing from these and ignoring, as we are entitled to do, the lines then recently drawn of Tewksbury and Bedford, we may record these names, most of which certainly and all probably belong to the old town: Captains Josiah Crosby, Peter Hunt, and John Stearns, Lieutenant John Lane, Ensign Samuel Hunt, Corporal Solomon Crosby, and Privates Nathaniel Cumings, Samuel Farmer, Samuel Galusha, John Hill, Francis Kidder, Thomas Richardson, Jr., and David Tarbell; and perhaps William Thompson, as the difference in spelling does not weigh against the identity of this soldier with our William Tompson, so prominent a citizen during the Revolution. Doubtless other names should be added to this roll of honor.

Emboldened by this splendid achievement, Governor Shirley pushed forward plans for an invasion the next year of Canada. France, on the other hand, alarmed by the fall of Louisburg for the safety of her American possessions, sent a powerful fleet under the command of Duke D'Anville. The design was supposed to be the recovery of Louisburg, the desolation of the New England towns, and perhaps the conquest of the Colonies. The alarm was great and not unreasonable, and the troops found service nearer home than Canada, repairing forts and awaiting the dreaded attack. Prayers went up from the churches for the discomfiture of the enemy. And when the glad news came that storms and dissensions had utterly disabled the mighty armament of France, the relief was widely recognized as the interposition of God in answer to prayer, and joyful thanksgivings were offered to him.

In the defensive military operations on the Connecticut River of this period, soldiers from Billerica had a share, and in one disaster were the principal sufferers. Fort Dummer, in Brattleborough, was the earliest post established above Northfield, in 1724, and twenty years later a fort was built at "No. 4," which was the origin of Charlestown. Around these posts very vigilant and useful scouting and some brave fighting were done, under the command of Capt. Josiah Willard and Capt. Phineas Stevens. In the muster-roll of a company which served under Captain Willard from February 10 to October 6, 1748, at Ashuelot, now Hinsdale, New Hampshire, the following Billerica names are found: Josiah Crosby, Jonathan French, John Frost, Samuel Hill, Benjamin Osgood, and Joseph Richardson, and probably Daniel Farmer. Whether William Hill and Reuben Walker were unrecorded sons of the town is not certain.

On June 16, a squad of fourteen men set out from Ashuelot for Fort Dummer by way of Colonel Hinsdale's fort.²² The party was waylaid opposite the mouth of Broad Brook by a large company of Indians. The surprise was complete and disastrous. Three men were killed and scalped, and, by a singular fatality, they were all from Billerica, — Jonathan French, John Frost, and Joseph Richardson. Seven were taken prisoners, of whom one was killed at the first encampment, William Bickford, and his body buried a month later. Four escaped across the river, one of whom, Daniel Farmer, was severely wounded. In response to the great gun from Fort Dummer, a relief party went up the next day from Northfield. They found and buried our Billerica dead, scoured the country and found "great signs of the enemy," showing that a large Indian force had been in ambush around the forts for several days.

Of the captives, Benjamin Osgood, of Billerica, and William Blanchard, of Dunstable, reached home Oct. 15; Henry Stevens, of Chelmsford, November 12, and Joel Johnson, of Woburn, early in October. They all suffered great hardships, were imprisoned till August 29, and Osgood with most of the others had to run the gauntlet. All were feeble and emaciated on their return, and Osgood died soon after from the effect of his sufferings.

²² See History of Northfield, by Rev. J. H. Temple, p. 202.

Josiah Crosby was one of the four who escaped; and of his experience we have an interesting account in a letter from John Farmer to Hon. Nathan Crosby.²³ It differs somewhat from Mr. Temple's narrative outlined above, and on these points is less likely to be accurate.

"In 1748, he was a soldier on Connecticut river. He, with fifteen more, commanded by a lieutenant, was ordered from Fort Dummer to Fort Hinsdale, about four miles, and when they were within one mile of Fort Hinsdale they fell into an ambush of one hundred and twenty Indians and French, who rose and fired. The commanding officer ordered each man to take care of himself. Two men escaped by secreting themselves; one reached Fort Hinsdale. Crosby ran up the river towards Fort Dummer followed by an Indian, who, coming up within a few rods of him, discharged his piece at him. The ball passed near his right ear; he then turned and fired at the Indian, who fell, and he saw no more of him. He pursued his way up the river until he came opposite Fort Dummer, where he attempted to swim the river, but before he could reach the opposite shore his strength failed him, and he sank to the bottom and was taken out by men from the fort." So narrowly escaped the only one of the five sons of Billerica known to have been in that fatal encounter. Few days have brought as deep and sudden sorrow to so many families in our old town; none, perhaps, except those of the Indian massacres in 1692 and 1695.

All these tedious conflicts and trials of the colonists were incidents of the contest between England and France for supremacy in America. The prize was a brilliant one, and for more than fifty years it had been carried on steadily on the fields alternately of diplomacy and war. It reached at last a decision through a contest more general and severe than any which had been before undertaken, extending over seven years, from 1754 to 1761, and involving large armies, extensive expeditions, and incidents discreditable, disheartening, and glorious. The history of this final French and Indian War has never been adequately told, and justice has not been done to many of its actors and incidents. The later war of the Revolution has thrown this in a measure into the background, and Americans today scarcely realize its proportions or significance. Certainly, if France had retained power in the North and West, there would have been no room for the later developments of the Anglo-Saxon in America, and the Revolution with all its fruits would have been precluded. And the cost to the colonists is clearly and impressively brought to view in the list of Billerica's soldiers engaged in it.

The overture of this contest in 1754 finds Washington marching to a disaster in the west, and proposals for a union of the Colonies, which, if not at once successful, were prophetic. In 1755 Braddock appears on the scene, dying bravely but not nobly, while the young Virginia surveyor wins distinction from disaster. To the eastward an expedition of six thousand men takes the forts of Acadia, a success which led to the removal of the French neutral inhabitants, who refused to take the oath of allegiance, from their homes, and their dispersion among the colonists. This war measure, certainly harsh, perhaps necessary, has supplied our great American poet with the material for an epic, by which the memory of it will be perpetuated wherever the language is spoken. In the north the issue of the campaign was less decisive. An army of six thousand troops marched from Albany for Crown Point. Fort Edward was built, and a detachment under Colonel Williams was defeated, with the death of its leader, whose name is perpetuated in the college, the foundation of which he wisely laid. This disaster was compensated by the repulse soon after of a large French army and the death of its commander, the brave Dieskau. Still the enemy held and fortified Ticonderoga; and an expedition from Oswego against Niagara was belated and abandoned.

In 1756 Montcalm led the French against Oswego and held Ticonderoga and Crown Point successfully, the wishes and plans of the Colonies for their capture being frustrated by the incapacity and irresolution of the English leaders. Still darker seemed the English cause in 1757, when the army for the second reduction of Louisburg returned unsuccessful from Halifax, and Fort William Henry was sacrificed by a cowardly surrender to Montcalm. This surrender produced great excitement and alarm in New England, as it opened the way for an invasion. Companies were immediately organized and marched to the rescue, thirty men enlisting from Billerica. But it soon became clear that Montcalm did not intend to push southward, and after a march of forty or fifty miles the troops generally returned to their homes.

A change came in 1758, when the hand of the great Earl of Chatham was laid upon the helm in England. Louisburg capitulated to General Amherst, with an army of fourteen thousand, and Forts Frontenac and Du Quesne were taken. Abercrombie, with an army of sixteen thousand, was repulsed in his expedition to Crown Point, and the death of the accomplished General Howe added to the disaster. Still the result of the campaign inspired new hope and prepared the way for the final and decisive struggle of 1759. To this end the war was carried into Africa, i. e. Canada. One column was to descend the St. Lawrence, another under Amherst was to go down the Champlain, while General Wolfe ascended the great river, the fortress of Quebec being the central point. The campaign proceeded with energy and decisive success. Prideaux assailed Fort Niagara, and although he fell, Colonel Johnson, his successor, soon received its capitulation and held control of the upper St. Lawrence. General Amherst led a force of eleven thousand men towards Lake Champlain, and the French abandoned Ticouderoga and Crown Point without a contest. But he failed to advance with energy and lost the opportunity to share and aid the attack on Quebec. To this, Wolfe came direct from England, with an army of eight thousand men and nearly fifty vessels. He arrived June 26, and pushed the siege with skill and courage until September 13, when he succeeded in gaining the Heights of Abraham, above the city, and compelled the bewildered Montcalm to give battle. He fell victorious, his brave antagonist being also mortally wounded, and the sceptre of France passed away, Amherst receiving the capitulation of Montreal soon after. America was to be English and not French, and the issue of that day was decisive.

In all these years of arduous service the hardy yeomanry of New England bore their full share. Not for the first time, nor the last, they gave proof how successfully they could turn from farm and shop to campaign and battle. In the office of the Secretary of State are ten huge volumes, filled with the mss. rolls and records of the military service of this period. They are replete with the materials for history, and any careful student of them must be surprised at the extent and variety of the service of these yeomen.

Billerica did her part. I give below the names of her soldiers, as far as I have been able to glean them from these military rolls. The list is necessarily imperfect. Of course I have been able to examine but a small part of the whole number, being guided by a general index in selecting such rolls, as by locality or names of known officers were likely to include names of Billerica men. Some of the rolls give the town from which the soldier came, but many do not, and the explorer is left in such cases to cull, if he can, by similarity of names or other circumstances, the men who should be credited to any town. In this process some names will be improperly included, but others will be omitted. In this list the names which are unusual and do not appear, for instance, in the family part of this volume, are given on the specific authority of the rolls. Their number is sufficient to prove that where this authority is wanting, some will of course be missed. I do not doubt that future and more careful inquiry will add names to this record.

For the convenience of students I arrange these names alphabetically, and indicate by an appended letter and explanation in most, but not all, cases, the general date and direction of the service. For the same reason I include the names recorded in the earlier war of 1745-8. The whole period of eighteen years includes thirteen of active hostility. Billerica could hardly have contained at the time more than one thousand inhabitants. It is certainly creditable to the courage and patriotism of her citizens that during this period she furnished more than two hundred men in arms to the service of the State.

The letters refer to the following various services, the (*) indicating death.

(l.) In Louisburg expedition under Pepperell, in 1745.

(e.) Service near the Connecticut, at Northfield, Fort Dummer, and "No. 4," in 1748.

(f.) "Expedition to the Eastward," 1754.

(a.) In the army operating against Crown Point, 1755-6.

(b.) "Army for the reduction of Canada," serving in the same direction, or nearer home, 1757.

(c.) "Relief of Ft. William Henry," 1758. The capture of this fort by Montcalm awakened great alarm of an immediate invasion, and companies were hastily organized all over the State for defence. The Billerica men are found enrolled in two companies. One, commanded by David Green, had Josiah Fassett as ensign, and Joseph Walker sergeant; included seventeen men from this town; and marched "unto y^e town of Marlborough, being about 25 miles." The other, with Capt. Thomas Flint, had Lieut. William Manning and Sergt. Abraham Stickney; included fourteen from Billerica, and went as far as Shrewsbury, "about 34 miles." On information there received they returned home and were disbanded.

(d.) Service towards Crown Point and Lake Champlain, 1758-9. Here Lieut. Simon Godfrey, from Billerica, was killed in a skirmish near Fort William Henry, 1758, July 20, a few days after the death of Lord Howe. Some of these men may have gone down Lake Champlain with General Amherst and been present when Montreal surrendered.

Of the men whose service is not designated, a large number went, in 1762, on an expedition beyond "Albany river," or the Hudson, the object I am not able to give.²⁴ entailed upon Massachusetts a heavy burden, in the care of these homeless strangers. They were distributed to the various towns, and a large family came to Billerica. Their presence appears in the treasurer's accounts for 1755. He is charged with bills exceeding £19. the largest of which was for sundries, to the merchant Nathaniel Davidson. Other citizens are paid for board, pork, rye, meal, meat, beans, and medical care. In 1758, Mr. Davidson agreed to provide for the family one year for £30, and the selectmen presented a bill to the State,²⁵ "for providing for John King, his wife, and seven small children, and Ann King and her child," for the year preceding. The items amounted to £25, 3s., 10½d., including 10s., 4d. for seven months' rent. In 1759, the constable is ordered to receive from the State treasurer £30, 13s., 2d. for the same purpose. In November, 1759, a petition²⁶ from the selectmen recites some of the facts and prays for relief. The family had been sent to Billerica in January, 1755. King had then six children, and Ann his kinswoman had a child born soon after. She afterwards married John Mitchel, who had been quartered at Londonderry, but seems to have joined the family here, where a child was born. King's eldest daughter was also married and had a child, and there were fourteen in the family. King was an old man with a young wife, and all were in a pitiable state of dependence. The selectmen add that the wretched house they had occupied could not be rented longer, and, at that season, they could not build a new one suitable for so large a family. Other towns had been burdened less, and they therefore pray for the removal of the family or for other relief.

The Court granted their prayer, and directed the removal of the family at Billerica's expense to Dunstable, which was to receive and make suitable provision for them.

CHAPTER IX.

RELIGIOUS HISTORY.

THE New England town was not a finished structure until it had a church and a pastor. Charters and grants embodied this condition, and were forfeit if it were not fulfilled in a reasonable period. The Puritans thought "the blessed ordinances of God's word" indispensable to any community, and did not desire to be associated with or responsible for the existence of any town where these were not enjoyed.

In the petition of 1654-5 for the tract of land west of Concord River, mention is made of "Rev^d. Mr. Miller and those that come along with him, who were so ingaged to us, your petitioners, that we are dayly in expectation of their coming." This was the Rev. John Miller, who had been ordained in England, had preached some time in Rowley as assistant of Rev. Ezekiel Rogers, the pastor, and then been for some years pastor of the church in Yarmouth. The negotiation to enlist him in the settlement of Billerica failed, and he remained at Yarmouth until 1662. He then went to Groton with the first settlers of that town, received a grant of a twenty-acre lot, and would have been installed the first pastor in Groton, but his sudden death, 1663, June 12, prevented.

The first pastor of Billerica was to be a young man, who might here put on the harness, and identify his name and influence with the history of the town. Providence held in reserve the man for the place and the place for the man.

Three years pass, during which the number of families increased from ten to twenty-five, and the name of Whiting appears.

"16, 6m., 1658. At a Towne meeting. By vs, the inhabtance of Billirica, these severall propositions were discuste and agreed vpon by vs. (whose Names are hereunto subscribed,) which are hereafter expressed:

..1. Wee do agree to give Mr. Samuel Whiting, Jun^r., (our minister.) that house which is now vpon y^e towneship, comfortably finished, for him, and his heirs. if he continues amongst us during his life. But if he shall remove from amongst us, then the said house with all the acomodations of the same shall retorne againe to the towne, to be at their dispose; or, if Mr. Whiting shall dye with vs, then the towne shall have the refusing of the said house and all other acomodations aforesaid belonging to the same, if Mrs. Whiting do sell y^e same.

..2. We do promise to give to him y^e sume of fourty pounds per year, for his maintenance, for the first two years of his settling with vs, and for the third year fifty pounds, and for the fourth year sixty pounds, and for afterwards we do promise and ingage to better his maintenance as the Lord shall better our estates.

..3. We do Joyntly pmise to cary at o^r owne charge, from year to year, so much of the pay (as doth amounte to twenty pounds) as shall be brought in to him in wheat or in other graine, or porke; to deliver the same either at Mistick mill or at Charlestowne, which Mr. Whiting shall apointe, and to deliver the same at such prizes as such pay shall or doth at such times pass fro man to man, vnless Mr. Whiting and the Towne shall make any other agreement concerning the same.

..4. We do promise to pvide his firewood & to bring it home to his house, from year to year, at our owne charges.

..5. We do promise to fence him in a paster for to keepe his horse in, as convenient as we may.

..ult. for his acomodations, we do promise to lay to y^e said house, a ten-acre lot, for his house-lot, and twelve acres of meadow, with other acomodations convenient to the same, i. e. to grant to him all other divisions of lands and meadows, with other lots of y^e like quantity.

..The persons subscribing to the premises, who were then the inhabitance, were :

..RALPH HILL, Sen ^r .	JOHN PARKER.
WILL ^m . FFRENCH.	JAMES PARKER.
JOHN ROGERS, Sen ^r .	WILL ^m . TAY.
GEORGE FARLEY.	WILL ^m . CHAMBERLINE.
WILL ^m . PATTIN.	JOHN TRULL.
SAM ^l . CHAMNE.	JAMES PATERSON.
JOHN STERNES.	JOHN MARSHALL.
JONATH. DANFORTH.	JOHN SHILDON.
RALPH HILL, Ju ^r .	HENRY JEFFS.
	JOHN BALDWIN.

..Also, at a Towne Meeting of y^e inhabitance, y^e 16. 10^m., 1661.

..It is agreed, That whatever charges Mr. Whiting shall be at, in makeing his house and land more convenient for his comfortable susistence and livelyhood amongst vs, in erecting any more building, fenceing, or breakeing of land, or clearing of meadows, and the like; That in case the providence of god so orders it that afterwards he shall remove from us, and so (by our former agreement) leave all his accomodations to the use of the Towne. the towne do promise that what the whole premises shall be the better. at his leaving it. by reason of his cost and charges upon it, It shall at that time be returned to him by the towne. as it shall be adjudged by men indifferently chosen."

It speaks well for the courage and faith of these founders of the town that, numbering only nineteen men, they were ready to put their hands to such an instrument and assume all its responsibility. It speaks well for the young Harvard graduate, of good birth and sterling ability, that he was ready to identify himself with the rising town and make his home in this wilderness, when not even the little meeting-house of logs and thatch was yet erected.

Where Mr. Whiting preached for the first two years, we can only conjecture; perhaps at John Parker's, where early town meetings were held; perhaps in his own house.

A year later, the following vote appears:—

"It is agreed, by the major prt of the Towne, that Mr. Whiting shall have 30 p. for this year, for his maintenance, and caring down corne, and making a well and hovell for his catell; which is 10 p. more than o' agreement for his yerely maintenance; the caring his corne or other pay downe to towne and getting his firewood included, to be done at Mr. Whiting's own charges."

In the accounts of the town, credit is given to John Baldwin, George Farley, and Ralph Hill, Jr., for "oxen to help fetch Mr. Whiting"; and to Ralph Hill, Sr., Samuel Kemp, John Marshall, James Paterson, and John Rogers, "for John for going for Mr. Whiting." It was no small undertaking to help the minister remove to Billerica, at that day.

When the earliest families had been five and six years in town, when their number had increased to thirty and they had secured a minister, they were at length prepared to grapple with the serious problem of a house of worship.

"09. 9. 59. It is Agreed by the major prt of the Towne, that there shall be a meeting house built this winter folling; thirty foote Longe and twenty and foure foot wide, and twelve foot high; the studs to be 3 foot asunder. the Comittee apoynted to agree with workmen. to bild and finish the said house, are Ralph Hill, Sen^r., George Farley, Jonathan Danforth; it is agreed. also, that the sides and ends shall be covered with bords and the Roof with thatch."

This primitive meeting-house stood south of the centre of the present common, having its length east and west. Probably the inhabitants contributed labor and lumber liberally to its erection, but John Parker was the principal builder, as appears from the following :

“16. 10. 61. The towne doe apoynte Will^m Tay, Will^m Hamblet. & Jonathan Danforth. as a Comitee to examine the acontes about y^e bldinge and finishing the meeting house, and to consider some way to propose to the towne for satisfying John Parker for his disbursements, what they in their judgment shall see meet. and in their best understanding shall conceive ritasly due to him for the work done.”

“6: 11: 61. the comitee abovesaide did meet together with the Townsmen, and examined the aconts, and they make this return followinge: to the Towne, we doe finde that acordinge to his aconts (which we judg to be Just and equall) there is due unto him The Just sume of eighteene pounds, fifteen shillings, three pence, we say. 18: 15: 3, and in consideration of the nature of the pay disbursed by him, exceedinge the quality of the pay received by him from the Towne, we Aprehend that the Towne may do well to make up the former sume full Twenty poundes.

“this was excepted and granted by the Towne.”

How Mr. Parker was paid has already appeared, in the account of the use made by the town of the land-grant of four thousand acres, received from the General Court, in May, 1661. [See p. 47.]

No record remains of the completion or dedication of this house; but we may be sure that the devout fathers of Billerica did not fail to consecrate it to the service of God, with due solemnity and rejoicing. A humble structure, it was in harmony with its surroundings; and worship fervent and true went up to God from its lowly walls.

Provision was made soon after for the usual appendage of a New England meeting-house.

“25. 7. 1660. The towne doe give leave that Ralph Hill, Sen^r., George Farley, Will^m. French, Ralph Hill, Jun^r., and John Parker, and such other persons as make use of their horses to Ride to y^e meetinge, shall have liberty to make sum housing or housings to sett up for horses from time to time, without molestatione; and to sett up y^e saide houseing below the Hill between the meeting house and Goldinge More's barn, or in sum other place convenient for them.”

More's barn was on Paul Hill's land, perhaps as far south as Deacon Lund's place; and the sheds were probably near, or just south of, Mr. Hill's house.

In 1661 the town “appoint Lieut. French, John Parker, Ralph Hill, Sen., and Will. Tay, to sett in the Deacon's seat; and also the town do appoint & impower these four men, joyned with Mr. Whitinge, to appoint the rest of the inhabitants and proprietors belonging to the town, there severall places where they shall sitt in the meeting house, according to their best discretion. * * * Also, it is agreed, if any person or persons be agrieved in their being seated, and they doe make known their grievance to the persons above said; they are to consider of their grievance, and acte as they in their discretion shall see meete, in seating them elsewhere."

No church was yet organized, and the citizens of Billerica sought occasional church privileges with neighboring churches. The Rev. John Fiske, pastor of Chelmsford,¹ mentions such courtesy to Ralph Hill and George Farley, and the case of Jonathan Danforth is given at length. The latter is too interesting an account of the way the fathers felt and acted on such questions to be abbreviated.

" Jonathan Danford. } He. about 7 of 12, '56, proposing himselfe to this ch. for fellowship. It was concluded to answer him as follows: Jonathan Danford, his desire being proposed to this ch., [? 7 of 12], to joyne himself in fellowship wth vs, it was considered of, and agitated, and in fine determined by joynte assent to returne him this answer, in effect as followeth: Namely,

"That in case y^e ch at Cambridge shall graunt him a permission so to doe, yeelding vp what right they have in him vnto this ch, and we shall receive satisfactiōe touching his being meetely qualified for y^e enjoyn^t of all church Priviledges, we shall willingly attend his desire to y^e receiving of him: otherwise we know no Rule of orderly proceeding with him, in this way; he being by vertue of his father's covenant vnder the immediate inspection and charge (as we conceive) of y^e ch. of Cambridge.

"Afterward, y^e Elders of Cambr. Ch., writing to vs as from themselves their apprehensions as to this effect, they conceived we might, notwithstanding, receive y^e said Jonathan without offence to that ch."

"vpon 22 of 1st } 56-57. It was returned thus: Jonathan Damford, his desire being vpon this day a 2th time proposed to this ch, with L^{rs} from y^e Elders of Cambr. Ch. The result of our ch. agitation amounted, in effect, to this, viz: that we, supposing he may be fitt to enjoy all ch. priviledges, can not otherwise but sympathise wth him; and therefore, as y^e case to vs appears at present, we are not apprehensive we are orderly called as yet to satisfy his desire, for our parts, conceiving he belongeth to them whose we think he is, either plainely to disowne him or to dismissee him; and, in case neither of these maybee, we know no rule or reason why he may not firstly joyne himself in personall covenant with that ch, and afterward, as just cause is offered, to be either recommended or dismissed, or both, vnto vs. Or else, if by reason of his distance from that ch, this be refused, whereas yet there are, as we suppose, members of y^e said ch residing nigher to him than any of ours, he seems called, for his owne parte, to sit still a while & wayte till God more fully shew vp his way."

Almost three years pass, and the case is reopened.

"In 7. 59, 11^{mo}, Jonathan Dafford brings L^r. from y^e ch of Cambr., wherein they resign vp all their right in him vnto vs to proceed with him.

"After some long agitation, at 3 several times, and diuers qu. in poynt of order proposed, y^e case at length came to be stated, and y^e case, as touching order vpon several grounds, concluded; and thereupon y^e whole ch. agreed to send a l^r. to y^e Brethren at Billerica, to take off occasion of offence, and to cleere more fully our way, as followeth:

" To L^r to } To o^r Beloved Brethren, &c. at Billerica, &c.:
Billerica. } BEL. BR.

Whereas,

"Jo: Danf: an Inhabitant amongst you. hath, for some time since, proposed himself as desirous to joyne wth vs in ch. fellowship, and hath obteyned Liberty from y^e ch at Cambridge so to doe, as^t by L^r to vs from that ch is manifest to vs. And whereas we have been in some doubt about it since that time, as being hopefully persuaded that y^e longing desires of their soules, after y^e enjoying of y^e Ordinances of X. amongst yourselves, would have set them vpon y^e worke of Gathering a ch and ordeyning an Officer in y^r place; and that y^e experience and observation of y^e said Jonathan would have led you to have encouraged him in his desire after y^e Orclin: in taking him amongst you in y^e s^d worke and vnto the same: or otherwise, in case of personal exception ag^t him, as regularly unmeete for fellowship, to have cleered y^e selves in the matter. But perceiving that neither this nor that is attended by you, so as we, for o^r partes, are ready to apprehend, had we been in yo^r case, it had concerned vs; Therefore, we have thought fitt to write vnto you, to desire you would speedily and with the first oportunity enforme vs of these two things: First, whether indeed you bee, or doe intend soone to bee, in hand wth y^e s^d worke of gathering a ch. and within what space of time there is an intentment or likelyhoode of accomplishing the same? and whether you doe intend to accept of y^e s^d Jonathan amongst you vnto the worke? and, if not this or not that, then, if we maybe so far in yo^r favor, we should look at it as an act of Brotherly Love, to be enformed from you, of the grounds w^{ch}, if we may apprehend Just, you shall have vs (thro' y^e grace of Christ) in a readiness to strengthen yo^r hands in what may concern vs. If otherwise, we shall desire to act o^r owne apprehensions as in what we shall conceive o^r duty, and in particular in reference to s^d Jonathan, without just cause of offense to you, in case you doe not lay before us grounds of conviction to the contrary. How meete we may find him for Fellowship, we can not yet determine. To rob you of him, in case meete, far be it from vs. To receive him, you regularly judging him unmeet, and so to retayne him to vs, when once you have a ch amongst you, be it as far from vs as y^e other. Testimony from amongst you, we doe (in part at least) expect; and on y^e other side, as you will approve yo^rselves faithful to Jesus X., and to the soule of y^e s^d Jonathan, we doe looke you should, and hope you will, orderly remove matters of just offence, if any there be, or seasonably and regularly enforme us.

“Seriously we doe desire you would not slight (as we dare not conclude you will) this, o^r Adresse vnto you. by a silent Answer, or by retarding a returne to vs from you, but that you would let us, within a short time. heare from you. and for the interim we commend you to y^e Guerdance of y^e good Spirit of God and rest. Yo^r &c.

“CHELMSFORD, 29 of 11, '59.”

“12 of 2, '61. Also about Jon: Dafford: when voted that we should proceed to tryal with him, in order to his joining. A Testimony vnder Mr. Whiting's. W^m. French. Jam: Parker's hand being Redd.” A month later.. “12 of 3. '61. On this day Jonath. Dafford joyned in covenant with this ch. promising to attend y^e Rule & order of y^e Gospel, as touching Joyning the ch at Billerica, if once gathered, or else to remove his station to this or some other Towne where a church shall bee.” Mr. Danforth kept his promise and took letters of dismission to the church in Billerica. “15: 11: 63.”

The formation of a church was felt by the fathers of New England to be serious business, not to be lightly or hastily undertaken: and the importance of membership was viewed in the same light. We can not read this record between the lines without suspecting some difference of opinion among these Billerica men, and that the delay of the church organization is partially explained by that fact. To the valuable record of the Chelmsford pastor we are indebted for fuller light on this subject. The church in Billerica was organized, 1663, November 11; but the accounts of the town treasurer² intimate the presence of a council here in the April previous. Of this hitherto mysterious council, its object and result, Mr. Fiske fortunately gives us the full story. His record brings out the fact that Billerica was agitated by the question, so seriously disturbing the churches of the day, respecting the relation of baptized children to the church, and whether they could acquire, by infant baptism alone, the rights of citizenship in the State.

“Billerica's case.

“On 12 of 2^d, 63, we received let^r fro Mr Whiting & y^e Brethⁿ for y^e Pastor & Brethren to joyne with y^e other messengers of X^e in counsell to be given y^m about y^r proceeding to X^e state. The men who were interested in and moved by such questions as these had mental powers of no mean order. It is not easy for us fully to understand their position, but it does not become us to underestimate them or smile at their difficulties. They were dealing at first hand with fundamental problems of church and state, and they had not the light of two hundred and fifty years' experience to guide them. This possible church, outlined by the April council, smacks suspiciously of Presbyterian eldership and authority. It can hardly be the same as the foundation which was actually laid six months later. Again the Chelmsford record aids us:—

“11 of 9, 63. Billerica.

“Messengers fro y^e ch. attended y^e ch. gathering at Billericay where they all made a Relatio of y^e worke of grace & consented in a written profession of faith; & Mr. Whiting ordayned pastor. y^e day comfortable.

The assembling of this council and its proceedings must have formed a notable day in the lives of the fathers. It will help us revive the memory of the scene, if we recall the names of those who were likely to have composed it.

Roxbury was represented certainly by its junior pastor, Samuel Danforth. He was the colleague of John Eliot, the devout and active Indian missionary, whose marvellous translation of the Bible into the language of the Indians was printed that very year. His labors among the natives at Wamesit must often have led him through Billerica, and it is pleasant to think that he also was probably present. Lynn must have sent her pastor, Samuel Whiting, Sen., the father of our candidate. And the mother church at Cambridge would not fail to share with her pastor, Jonathan Mitchel, in the joys of the day. Chelmsford, which had received as settlers a church already organized, with its pastor, John Fiske, gave gladly the hand of fellowship to a nearer sister. Concord, Woburn, and Andover would complete the circle of neighboring churches, and their pastors were Peter Bulkley, the cousin of Mr. Whiting's mother, Thomas Carter, and Francis Dane. The first minister of Boston, John Wilson, may have been present with his church; and Thomas Shepard, who had been Mr. Whiting's classmate at Harvard College, as pastor of Charlestown. Malden, Reading, and Watertown would make up twelve churches, and their pastors were Michael Wigglesworth, the poet, John Brock, the devout, and John Sherman, the eminent mathematician.

Whether all these were present or not, it was a grave and reverend council which convened here on that November day. Our old town perhaps never had a more notable assembly. The candidate was most carefully examined in his doctrine and experience. He would have occasion to exercise all the logical skill acquired in his Harvard training and displayed in his graduating thesis, on the question, "An detur Maximum et Minimum in Natura." There was at least one sermon, and the organization of the church at the same time may have required another; and, if the custom of a later day then obtained, the candidate preached his own ordaining sermon. The possible duration of these public services is suggested in the Woburn experience. There, when the church was organized, Mr. Symmes introduced the services and "continued in prayer and preaching about the space of four or five hours." What would follow such an introduction we may imagine! Whatever the order or length of the services, that little thatched meeting-house was well filled by a congregation too much interested, as well as too devout, to betray weariness or to thank their descendants for sympathy.

It is due to this first and eminent pastor of Billerica that we glance at the home and influences which had aided in moulding his character. They will help us to understand better, not only this man himself, but others of his charge, fathers of the town. Rev. Samuel Whiting, of Lynn, was the father of our Samuel. Like John Cotton, of Boston, he gave the name of the English town in which he was first pastor to his New England home. His father, John Whiting, and two of his brothers were mayors of the English Boston, and warm friends of their pastor, John Cotton, in whose Puritan convictions they shared. Samuel Whiting was born, 1597, November 20, and took the degrees of A. B. and A. M. at Emanuel College, Cambridge, 1616 and 1620. Receiving orders, he was three years a family chaplain, and then installed at Lynn Regis, in Norfolk. Here, after three years, his earnestness and independence made him obnoxious to the Bishop of Norwich, and charges of non-conformity were made against him. But the death of King James relieved him, and "the Bishop was willing to promise his friend the Earl of Lincoln, who interceded for him, that he would no further worry him, in case he would begone out of his diocese where he could not reach him." He therefore removed to Skirbeck, near Boston his old home. Here he labored for some years, not less faithful to his non-conformist principles on account of persecution, until the pressure of the times under Charles drove him forth, as it did Cotton, Hooker, and so many of the noblest and best men and women of England, in search of peace and "freedom to worship God," in America.

While living at Skirbeck Mr. Whiting married, 1629, August 6, his second wife, Elizabeth St. John, and here our Samuel, her eldest child, was born, 1633, March 25. His mother was of a family still older and more notable. She was the daughter of the Right Hon. Oliver St. John, a member of Parliament. Her brother Oliver married a cousin of Oliver Cromwell, and was one of the first lawyers and most progressive men of England. He defended John Hampden in the great case in which he resisted the King, on the question of the payment of ship money, and made that name immortal among the defenders of liberty. Later he became, under Cromwell, the Lord Chief Justice of England.

His sister, Mrs. Whiting, added grace to her name by the beauty of her person and the worth of her character. Her noble and gentle blood proved its true quality, by the faithfulness with which she performed the duty and bore the hardships of her position as the wife of the humble country minister. Her rank and wealth did not bind any fetters around the freedom of their religious convictions; and when the Puritan minister would leave all that must have made England dear, she was ready to face the hardships and perils of the wilderness with him and prove herself his true helpmeet. Coming of such a stock, from such a home, with the best training which the times had to give, the young pastor of Billerica was qualified to magnify his office and make his mark upon the rising town.

No records of the church are in existence until the settlement of the third pastor, in 1747, and on what basis of doctrine or covenant it was organized we know not. A renewal of covenant took place at that time, and it is sufficiently probable that the covenant then used, and found in the first book of the church's records which has been preserved, was identical with that which was adopted by the fathers. It is as follows:—

“The Covenant of the Church of Christ in Billerica.

“We, the Church of Christ in Billerica, hoping it will have a tendency the better to preserve peace and Order among us, and cause us to be more circumspect in our walk and conversation, renewedly to covenant with God and one another, thereby binding ourselves by an act of our own to walk in the way of God's commandments, being sensible of our proneness to backslide; Tho we are unworthy of such a transaction, yet Renouncing all confidence in our Selves and Relying on Christ alone for help, do covenant as follows, viz:

“We believe the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be given by Inspiration of God, and promise by the Help of the Divine Spirit to govern our Selves, both as to faith and practice, according to that perfect

Rule; and we also engage to walk together as a Ch of Christ according to all those holy Rules of the Gospel respecting a particular Church of Christ, so far as God hath or shall reveal to us his mind in that respect.

“We do accordingly Recognize the Covenant of Grace. in which we acknowledge our Selves professrally devoted to the fear and service of God, Our Supreme Lord, and to the Lord Jesus Christ, the High Priest, Prophet, and King of his Church, unto whose Conduct we submit ourselves, on whom alone we wait and hope for Grace and glory, to whom we bind ourselves in an Everlasting Covenant never to be broken.

“We likewise give our Selves up one to another as fellow members of one Body in brotherly Love and holy Watchfulness over one another, for mutual Edification, and to Subject our Selves to all the Holy administrations appointed by him who is the Head of his Church, dispensed according to the Rules of the Gospel, and to give our constant attendance on all the Publick Ordinances of Christ's Institution; Walking orderly as becometh Saints.

“We do likewise acknowledge our Posterity to be included with us in the Gospel Covenant, and, Blessing God for so Rich a favour, do promise to bring them up in the Nurture and admonition of the Lord, with the greatest care; and to acknowledge them in their Covenant Relation according to the Rules of the Gospel.

“Furthermore, we promise to be careful to our utmost to keep up all the Ordinances of the Gospel among us, and to admit to our Communion all Such as shall desire to Join themselves to us, If in a Judgment of Charity we can be satisfied they are qualified therefor. And to walk in all Regular and due Communion with other Churches of our Lord Jesus Christ.

“And now, since we have thus bound ourselves in Covenant to God and to one another, may the good Lord pity us and pardon our frailties; Humble us out of all confidence in our Selves; and may the grace of Christ, which is sufficient for us, be afforded unto us; and he who is the great Shepherd of our souls Lead us into the paths of Truth and Righteousness for his Name's sake, and at the last Receive us all into his heavenly Kingdom. Amen.

“BILLERICA, August 14, 1747.”

“The Church met, having been Regularly notified & warned, & unanimously voted and testified their consent to the aforewritten Covenant, and their Resolution to adhere to and govern themselves by it.

“Test. SAMUELL RUGGLES, Pastor.”

The last clause suggests the influence of the question which early agitated the churches, as to the terms of communion and church membership. At the beginning, in New England, only members of the church could vote or hold office. This fact did not result from the bigotry of the fathers. It would be as reasonable to reproach them for not having invented the steam-engine or discovered the circulation of the blood. Church membership was everywhere the rule of civil privileges. The very occasion of their trouble was, the extension, before unknown, which they were giving to those privileges and the right of suffrage as a factor of their new Commonwealth. In England the practice was to baptize all children in infancy, and regard all as church members who had not been excommunicated. Persons appointed to office, civil or military, must "qualify" by receiving the communion in the church, and many received it for this purpose and neglected it for every other. The fathers had been educated in this school and had no experience in any differing from it. It was to them a large and doubtful assumption that civil privileges in the Christian State they were rearing could be safely extended to non-communicants. But their spiritual enlightenment convinced them that to sprinkle an infant with water did not make him a child of God, and they could not recognize the discipleship of those who gave, in mature years, no "credible evidence of regeneration." They were thus brought into practical difficulty. A generation of baptized children were coming to maturity, many of whom had not united with the churches and were by that fact excluded from rights and duties in which their activity was important to the common welfare. Moreover, the children of these non-communicants were growing up without baptism, which, in the mother country, they would have received. What was to be done? The debates grew earnest and serious, and the result was the calling of a synod by the General Court, consisting of the elders and messengers from all the churches. This was held in 1662, and Samuel Whiting, the father, was a moderator of the body and had much influence in shaping its result. What is known as the Half-Way Covenant was the fruit of these deliberations. Some of the ablest divines in the synod opposed, but the majority decided: "5th. Church members, who were admitted in minority, understanding the doctrine of faith and publicly professing their assent thereto; not scandalous in life and solemnly owning the covenant before the church wherein they give up themselves and their children to the Lord and subject themselves to the government of Christ in the church, their children are to be baptized."

On this compromise the practice of the church in Billerica rested. In fifty years of Dr. Cumings's ministry he admitted one hundred and ninety-nine persons to the Half-Way Covenant and three hundred and seven to full communion. The practice fell into neglect; there is no record of its formal discontinuance.

From the Town Records we glean items illustrative of the religious life of the church and its relations with its pastor.

The first sexton was William Haile.

"12: 12: 62. by order & advise of y^e Townsmen, I did agree [John Parker was clerk and first 'townsman,' or selectman, and speaks in the first person] with Will^m Haill to keep y^e meeting-house clean for 1 year for 2^{ls}. Also he doth ingadge to digg y^e graves for such persons as shall dye in this Town. he being payd for y^e same 18 pr a grave, or more, if it doe apere to be worth more, as the Nater of the digging shall require or the season of the year shall fall out, to hinder him in the work by frost or the like, then the said Will^m is to have a hand to help him if Need require."

This service he continued to discharge until 1668, in which year he died. John Trull succeeded him.

The last name is obscure; it may be Ranalls, but is not found elsewhere. These payments of the minister's rates were often, perhaps commonly, made directly to the minister and his receipt taken; a practice which might easily produce some confusion in the accounts of the town with him. When persons fell into arrears, in "clearing with Mr. Whiting," the case would be reported to the selectmen, as thus appears:—

"19. 9m 60. The selectmen do order and impower the constable to collect of severall y^e inhabitaunce & proprietors amongst us those severall sumes of money, due to Mr. Whiting, our minister, according to a bill given in to the selectmen under Mr. Whiting's hand, for his yearly maintenance; and in case any person shall neglect or refuse to pay in y^e same, according to order to Mr. Whiting, then the constable shall distraine such persons for their arrears, according to law."

"29: 11m 67. In town meeting it was agreed that for the futer Mr. Whiting shall have all his corne paid in to him at such prises as the court shall set for y^e country rate annually. Also it was farther declared that the towne had formerly agreed to give Mr. Whiting one pound of butter upon every milch cow. annually, in part of pay."

1670. "It is agreed that y^e minister's rate should annually be comitted to the constable's care, as y^e other town rates are."

In 1674, the town voted:—

"That in case y^e constables be forced to distraine any pson or psons for their dues to Mr. Whiting." * * they "shall not take any lands or horse flesh, or anything that is not equivalent to wheat or other graine or porke at the country rate prise, both for the supply of Mr. Whiting's family and for the market, which is the specia mentioned in the towne covenant with Mr. Whiting * * to be delivered at Mr. Whiting's house at their charge who are distrained.

"Also, Job Laine's proposition to abate him, annually, part of his dues to Mr. Whiting was propounded to the town, but not accepted."

The matter of arrears in salary occurs in the Records every three or four years, the constables receiving charge to see that delinquents "cleared with Mr. Whiting." In 1685, a list is given of forty persons whose arrears amount to £32, 18s., 10d.

At the town meeting, 1692-3, March 6:—

"The Reverend Mr. Whiting propounded that the one part of the Covenant on the town's part with him had not in his apprehension been fulfilled, the town having engaged above the seventy pound per annum for to better our pastour's maintenance as god should better our estates, which had not yet bene done by any town act: for altho there had frequently bene over plus in the Rates, it had bene disposed of by the Towne for the payment of what annually could not be gotten; y^e Reverend Mr. Whiting at the same time declared his readiness to comply with anything which was Rationall, and the town at the same time manifesting their thankful acknowledgement unto Mr. Whiting that had so far accepted what this pore place had been capable of doing for him," etc. * * * "The town do agre to make good the severall Rates that have bene comitted unto the Reverend Mr. Samuell Whiting, in the severall sums as they have bene comitted unto him, ever since the begiuning of eighty four, & to see that they are paid in unto Mr. Whiting upon the account of making good the other part of the covenant above or besides the seaventy pounds; & for the future we do engage to allow Mr. Whiting his firewood, annually, above his seventy pound, in the same specie as before.

"the above said voat sent unto the Reverend Mr. Whiting by two of the inhabtance, to propound unto his consideration, & was Readily accepted unto the great satisfaction of the inhabtance."

In 1698, December, the arrears due Mr. Whiting were found to amount to £64, 15s., 4d., almost a year's salary. The pastor desired that if any one claimed to have paid what had not been credited to him, it should be allowed. The constables and selectmen were enjoined at length to secure the payments due; and, in case of their failure, the town promised "to satisfie rationally the person or persons that shall bring this discharge" from Mr. Whiting.

Four years previously, when the second meeting-house was built, Mr. Whiting had made an offer to the town "either to give fiveteene pound to the Town in desprat debts, such as he should point out unto them, or ten pound in the undertaker's [builder's] hand, or six pound in sillver toward the purchasing of a bell"; in return for which he was to have "a seat for his family for his propriety." The town accepted the first offer, and in 1698 voted to "grant unto the Reverend Mr. Samuel Whiting that pue that his family now sits in, so long as he continues our minister. * * And in case an after minister should request that one, rather than another, then the town do engage to build another of the same demencion and workmanship, and to confirm it unto Mr. Whiting as his propriety forever." • Whereupon Mr. Whiting "did discount fiveteene pound of the debts given in to the Town this day."

With the growth of the town the primitive meeting-house became too small, and, in 1679-80, it was shingled and a gallery put in. Samuel Frost covenanted to build the gallery for 20 shillings in silver, and 6 pounds, 10 shillings "in this present town rate." He was to erect it

"upon the beames; * * to make one seat in front, & to floor it on the backside to the rooffe of the house. & set a bench behind it, such an one as that place will admit of. And two seats on each side, upon the beames, the foremost of each seat to come down as low as the under side of the beames, that is. the under side of the joyce to be even with the chamfering of the beames, & so all three fore seats to be even at y^e bottom. The seats of the fore side seats shall be over the beames, and but a little above them. The hindmost side seats shall be behind and above the beames, each seat to be comely closed with rails and boords, as is usall in such work, the fore seat with ballisters. The floors made comely and close joynted, to preserve the dirt from falling downe. All the seats to be finished comely, according to the usall maner of such worke, with a sufficient paire of staires to them, and a floor to cary to the seats, the hind seat at the west end to reach from rooffe to rooffe. And to make a casement window of two foot square in the cleare, and put it up at y^e east end of the house above the collarbeame. To find all the stuffe and nails and boords and carting at his owne charges; all the timber to be sound and good, and the work all well wrought, workmanlike, according to y^e nature of such worke (glass exempted), and the work to be done by y^e last of March next."

With this improvement the house served the fathers for worship fourteen years longer, when the following record is found:—

"8. 10^{mo}. 1603. In reference to a new Meeting house, the town voted their willingness, and desire that Capt. Hill, Mr. Crosbey, Leift. Willson, and Sergt. Richison should undertake the same, to begin and finish. Redding Meeting house to be the pattern in most respects; also, they are willing to give three hundred pounds, one quarter of it in money and y^e seats of y^e old meetinghouse what may be of use, according to discours about it. The Town Appoint Capt. Danforth, Leift. Tomson, Cornit Starns, and Joseph Walker, Sen., to draw up a bargain with the aforesaid undertakers; to order when the said house shall be finished and when the money shall be paid, and in what and at what tearmes the inhabitants shall be imployed about it. Also, they order that when y^e Court shall have approved our Town orders, a list of every man's estate shall be taken according to former agreement, and y^e charges of said house assessed and to be collected according to agreement with the undertakers."

July 9, 1694. Provision was made for staging for raising the meeting-house. Sundry inhabitants were appointed to provide posts and others to dig holes for them; "the next second day, being the 16 of July," was appointed, and "all persons capable of labor" were "to appear by seven o'clock in the morning at the second beat of the drumb." The clerk, good Deacon Tompson, completes his account:—

"The service was attended upon the day appointed by about forty and five hands of our towne the first day, and the towne generally came together the second day, and many other out of other Towns, sum that came to inspect us and several that were helpful to us of other Towns; and the third day we concluded our worke with our own Town's help; pertikuler persons provided for them selves and friends; no considerable harm done, not a bone broken; we had the helpe of our Reverend pastour to desire god's blessing and protection, and when we had finished our work we concluded with a psalm of praise and returning thanks unto god by our Reverend pastour."

In December it was voted that there should be two pairs of stairs, not four, to the gallery; and a proposition was rejected to have the pulpit set forward far enough to have one seat behind it.

The matter of seating persons in the meeting-house cost the fathers no little anxiety. As early as 1661 this appears in the record, already given:¹ "25, 11^m, 1665," it was ordered, "That the Towns men in being shall order the seating of persons in y^e meetinghouse which are not seated at the p'sent, and to remove, alter, and change prsons already seated, according to their best discretion." After this a special committee is appointed occasionally, once in two or three years, to discharge this duty, until in 1679 it was again committed to the selectmen. Rank, wealth, and social standing were the factors in determining the place where persons should sit, and there was ample room for jealousy and trouble, even among the plain yeomanry of Billerica, on this subject. "Mr. Richard Daniel, Gentleman," whose wife was a daughter of a knight in England, had, it is safe to say, one of the best seats.

On the completion of the new meeting-house the question of "seats" gained fresh importance and a larger committee was appointed. "Namely, Capt. John Lane, Corpⁿ Jonathan Hill, Mr. Simon Crosbey, Serjt. Jacob French, Serjt. Samuel Mauning. Mr. Edward Farmer, Mr. Joseph Walker, John Shead." • "At the same meetng the Town apointed Capt. Jonathan Danforth & Lt. John Sternes and Joseph Tomson, to apoint such persons where they should have their places in y^e meeting house and their wives, who were appointed to place the other inhabitants." Which of these committees was first to assign the other their seats is not clear; but it is to be hoped that they knew and had no heart-burnings about it. The result of their labors gave so little satisfaction that it was voted a nullity the next year, and a new committee of five was to be appointed. But no record was made of the appointment or action of a second committee, and probably the effort to improve the previous arrangement did not succeed.

The material for the spiritual history of the town is very meagre. For the first century we have almost nothing, except hints of the town record relating to the pastor and the successive meeting-houses. Of Mr. Whiting's personality we have no glimpse, nor of the quality of his preaching. The collection of his mss. sermons, once in possession of the late Rev. C. B. Thomas, of Concord, New Hampshire, which was taken by him to Missouri, would give light on this point, but has probably gone the way of the Alexandrian Library. That he was a faithful minister, worthy of the respect and love accorded to him by two generations here, can not be questioned. He brought the earnestness of a Puritan and the culture of Harvard to his long and self-denying labors; and the absence of any hint of doubt or disaffection in all the years of his ministry bears testimony to the wisdom with which he filled his high office. His house was the "main garrison" of all the dark war days; and he was the trusted counsellor of Danforth, Tompson, and others, in all their important and trying secular matters, as well as spiritual. The wisdom of this world was combined with that from above to a degree rarely equalled in the early New England ministers, and Mr. Whiting held an honorable place among them.

That he had opinions and convictions far in advance of his century is pleasantly shown in this record, 30 October, 1693: "At this meeting our Reverend Paster, Mr. Sam^l. Whiting, did set at liberty and free from his service, Simon Negro, who hath been his servant about thirty and one years, being now about forty years old. The which said Simon Negro the town of Billerica doth accept as an inhabitant amongst themselves." Does the country afford an earlier prophecy of the great Emancipation Proclamation! This faithful servant, it may be added, received, in 1709, a grant of seventeen acres of land; and, in his will, which bears date a few days after Mr. Whiting's death, "in consideration of the respect which I have and do bear to my Master's family," he gives them his homestead and the land west of Concord River, granted as above. In the recital of Mr. Whiting's children he names "Samuel, of Dunstable, now in captivity."

But the labors and hardships of his ministry began to show their effect, after more than forty years. A hint of this has been given from Judge Sewall's Diary;³ and the coincidence, even of language, is curious, that Mr. Tompson makes this record two months earlier than Judge Sewall's call. A town meeting was to be held "August 10, 1702, to agree about providing of help to supply the Reverend Mr. Samuell Whiting's place, being in a weak & languishing condition." The action taken was as follows: "They do agree to make a free Contribution to gratify persons imployed by us, to the vallue of ten or twelve shillings pr. day, to be given unto him by the Deacon out of such contribution; who, with the Asistance of Mr. Simon Crosby, are desired both to receive the Contribution & to take speciall care that we be suplied with a minister from Day to day, untill further order, or that our Reverend pastor is sum what able to snply as formerly."

Another meeting was held, October 12, and committee sent to consult with Mr. Whiting "whether we should call one at present, in order to a settlement among us, or to desire some help onely for this winter season." The result was that a temporary supply was deemed expedient. Mr. Whiting proposed, if his salary were made up in full, to "diet the minister that might come to help." There was much discourse about the matter, but on account of his weakness, naturally several were "averse unto it." "After much debate it seemed no help that could be procured to suply in the ministry at present, except that it was done out of that which we had usuly & annually granted unto the Reverend Mr. Samuell Whiteing. A matter very grievous unto severall amongst us."

A committee was appointed to seek help until spring. "Mr. John Fox was desired and Mr. John Whiting next to him." Mr. Fox proposed to supply until May, for fifteen shillings per Sabbath, in silver, and his expenses. The town proposed that he should "find himself," and he, it seems, consented, as he was paid for eighteen Sabbaths, £13, 10s. Mr. Fox was the son of the pastor at Woburn. His father died while he was preaching in Billerica, and in November he was himself settled in Woburn, remaining pastor until his death, in 1756. Mr. John Whiting, above named, was the son of Rev. Joseph Whiting, brother of the pastor here. He was settled at Concord, in 1712, and for many years was pastor there. We may infer that Mr. Whiting was able to resume his labors in May, and we know that "he did not see his way clear at present to abate of his salary for the encouragement of another."⁶ He continued to discharge his ministry five years longer, when his disability, by reason of age or infirmity, became such that the town proceeded to employ a colleague.

"At a general Town meeting, July 7, 1707, the inhabitants of the Town made choyce of Mr. Samuel Ruggles, of Roxbury, to help Mr. Whiting in the work of the ministry, for one year next ensuing, in case the Town & Mr. Ruggles can agree upon terms." Captain Tompson and Captain Lane were appointed to treat with Mr. Ruggles. Mr. Whiting proposed to abate £20 of his salary if the remaining £50 were paid him, and the town voted to pay Mr. Ruggles £40 per year while Mr. Whiting was able to assist him, and £80 for a settlement. The latter was increased to £100. They also voted that "four or five acres, or as much as can be conveniently spared, of the common land, westward of the meeting house and Rubish meadow, shall be sold to help pay the hundred pounds to Mr. Ruggles, he to have the refusal of said land." And it was finally stipulated that "after Mr. Whiting's decease the Town will make Mr. Ruggles his sallery as good as ever Mr. Whiting's sallery was befour Mr. Ruggles came to Town."

September 8, 1707, the town granted him "eight acres of land, for four pounds an acre, on the common westward of the meeting house, bounded by Enoch Kidder west, by Rogers south, by a highway north, and east by a streight line from the southeast corner of Capt. Danforth his paster to the northeast corner of Rogers his orchard, by the pound." This was the familiar corner on which now stand Mrs. Osborn's house, the Bennett Library, and the First Church. It may have included the site of Mr. Morey's store and the Post Office. Here Mr. Ruggles built his home and lived for forty years.

The formal agreement embodying these stipulations is recorded, (Vol. II, p. 267). It was also agreed that he should receive ten pounds annually and provide his own firewood; and that, if he removed without the consent of the major part of the town, he should return the hundred pounds "settlement." The fact is noteworthy, that we have no hint of the church being consulted or having any voice, as distinct from the town, in all these negotiations. In fact the town and the church were felt to be one, and no distinction occurred to these good men. Sixty years later, when Dr. Cumings was settled, they had reached the stage of a separate consciousness. The employment of Mr. Ruggles for a year was evidently at first as a candidate only; but the result being favorable, he was ordained, 1708, May 19.

The venerable senior pastor was spared for five years longer, rounding out, in serene age, one of those pastorates which constitute an epoch in the history of any community. His parish was wide, extending with the town from Concord and the modern Acton to the Merrimack and Andover. For fifty-six years he preached the gospel to hearers who came five and six miles to listen. They heard two sermons, and we may be sure they were not short ones. The modern demand for a sermon not over half-an-hour long would have surprised these fathers as much as would the railroad, the telegraph, or a daily newspaper. They sought at church not merely spiritual food, but much of the intellectual and social stimulus which their children draw from other sources, and hence would listen without weariness and eagerly, and go home to discuss sermons which a modern audience would not tolerate. The demands of such a ministry Mr. Whiting satisfied with honor to himself, "holding forth the word of life," and winning souls to his divine Master. He baptized the children and buried the dead; but he did not always, probably not often, perform the marriage service. The fathers thought that it smacked of popery for the minister to marry them, and went to the magistrate instead.

Casting in his lot with the young town, and meeting patiently and bravely the hardships it involved, he reaped his reward in the respect and affection which surrounded his old age. His influence was stamped upon the character and history of the town. At last his work was done. Jonathan Danforth, companion and friend of many years, died in September, 1712. Then, on February 15, the dearer companion of all his joys and sorrows was taken away. Without her the good man could not live, and death separated them but thirteen days. On the last day of February, 1712-3, the faithful shepherd went to his rest. Cotton Mather tells us, and we may thank him for the item, that he died "an hour before Sunset." And, not for their poetry but their truth, we may repeat the lines:

"Whiting, we here behold, a starry light,
 Burning in Christ's right hand, and shining bright;
 Years seven times seven sent forth his precious rays, Unto the Gospel's profit and Jehovah's praise."

The pastorate of Mr. Ruggles continued a few months more than forty years, and was terminated by his death, 1748-9, March 1. Little is known of his ministry and character, and the family history given elsewhere includes nearly all that can be said of him. The rapidity with which oblivion covers the lives and deeds of men has a striking illustration in the scantiness of our knowledge of Billerica's second pastor. For more than a generation this gentleman lived and labored, a foremost figure in the life of the town, preaching the gospel from week to week in the pulpit and by the way, satisfying so well the lofty Puritan ideal of a pastor that no whisper of dissatisfaction is preserved. Yet what manner of man he was, or what were the characteristics of his ministry, we have no hint. But lives happy and useful are often quiet, sounding no trumpets, and this is the just account of many a rural pastor whose record is on high.

A negative inference is suggested by the absence of Mr. Ruggles' name from all the narratives and testimonies which, in his later years, grew out of the presence of Whitefield in New England, and the controversies which accompanied him. Jonathan Edwards was settled at Northampton in 1727. With the insight of a master mind he detected currents in the life of the churches of perilous tendency. The old Half-Way Covenant was filling them with members who gave "no credible evidence of regeneration," and even opening the pulpits to men of the same class, while the duty of communion as a "means of grace" was urged upon unconverted men. Edwards, and after him Whitefield, brought all their great powers to bear against these errors, and no small stir was the natural consequence. If the churches accepted the revolutionary doctrines, many feared the loss of civil privileges along with those of communion. Edwards was driven from Northampton to the wilds of Stockbridge, and Whitefield was assailed with bitter opposition. He was not the first or last reformer not always temperate or wise, and good men were divided in opinion. Testimonies and counter-testimonies multiplied and the lines were tightly drawn on every hand. There were few of the ministers whose names do not appear and whose position was not recorded on one side or the other. Mr. Ruggles was one of the few. This may be partially explained by the fact that the infirmity of age began to tell upon him early. Yet the suspicion is natural that he sympathized with the position of his son-in-law, Mr. Morrill, of Wilmington, of whom tradition relates, that when Mr. Whitefield had an appointment to preach there, he rode all over town and warned his people not to attend the service. The result was natural; a first-rate notice and a great congregation.

The building of the third meeting-house occurred during Mr. Ruggles' pastorate. The vote to build was passed, 1737, September 15th, and a building committee was appointed in November, consisting of Dea. Samuel Hill, Benjamin Tompson, Esq., Joshua Abbott, Esq. Benjamin Shed, and Sergt. Benjamin Frost. Timber was to be made ready for building the next summer. The size of the house was to be 60×40, and 26 feet "between joyns." It was to be thirty feet north of the former house, and must have stood near the present Soldiers' Monument. The raising took place, 1738, May 24th, and March 6th following, the town voted, "after large debate," to "sell the pue ground in our new meeting house, under such Restrictions and Regulations as the town shall hereafter see best, which money coming by the sale of the pnes shall be improved towards the finishing our new meeting house." In May, it was voted, "that when any pue is granted to any man, in our new meeting house, that the man and his family shall sit in said pue, if there be conveniency of room in said pue." In the earlier meeting-houses pews had been few. The first mention of one is in 1670, December, when Mr. Daniel had "liberty to make a pue in the east end of y^e meeting house, where he did desire it"; and Mr. Whiting had a pew in the new house in 1694. If there were any other pews before 1712, they are not alluded to. But, 1711, November 16, the town granted "liberty to build pucs in the vacant places in y^e meeting house, and to cut of two or three feet of the deacon's seat." March 17, it was "voted, that those persons that had the grant of pucs in the meeting house shall be at the whol charge of building them, and that those two persons that shall Joyne upon that place that is granted for Mr. Whiting's pue shall be at the charge to finish that pue. Also, that every man that shall have the grant of a pue shall be oblidge himself and his wife to sit there, and to keep it filled with such a convenient number as shall be judged fit by the committee that shall be appointed to Regulate that affair. Also, it was voted, that there should be liberty to build pues behind the body of seats below, taking away the hind seat, and so taking as much of the Alley as is convenient, and not to streighten the passages." Simon Crosby was granted a place "on the North side, between Mr. Whiting's pue and the old pue at the east end of the pulpit"; Captain Tompson, "between Mr. Whiting's pue and the East door"; Lieut. Samuel Hill, "between Mr. Ruggles' pue and the West door, Mr. Ruggles his pue to be taken in to the middle of the window"; Enoch Kidder and Simon Crosby "ters, that place between the west door and the stay"; Quarter. Nathaniel Page and Job Lane, Junr., "that place behind the body of seats, at the upper end of the men's seats"; Joseph Crosby, "behind the women's seats, joining to Mr. Page and Job Lane"; Dea. Samuel Hunt, "behind the men's body of seats, joining to Mr. Page." It was also voted, that the west door should be cut and hung to open at the middle; and the three deacons, with Major Lane and Oliver Whiting, were appointed a committee to regulate the matter of the pews. The deacons were Joseph Tompson and, probably, Joseph Foster and John Sheldon.

From this record it seems that ten pews were built in the old church before and behind the two rows of long seats or benches on which the men and women sat, separated by the central passage. In the new church, the committee chosen to "order who shall have the pues" were instructed, "so far as they have respect to pay, to govern themselves only by real and personal estate." But the town was not pleased with the result and appointed another committee "to assess the value of the pue ground." Their report assesses twenty-two choices at sums from £15, 18s., to £5, 12s., reaching a total of £254. It was then voted, 1739-40, March 4, that "the highest payers of the two Rates that was granted for the building our new meeting house shall have the offer successively of the pue ground at the price set on them," and the next Monday a meeting was held, at which "the heirs of the pue ground" were to declare their "acceptance or refusal of their right." The twenty-two tax-payers who would be entitled, on this condition, to the pues, if all accepted their right, were in order as follows: John Stearns, Simon Crosby, William Stickney, Jonathan Bowers, Elizabeth Osgood, Benjamin Thompson, Andrew Richardson, William French, Seth Ross, Joseph Farley, John Shed, Joseph Davis, Samuel Sheldon, John Needham, Oliver Farmer, Joshua Abbott, Benjamin Shed, William Crosby, John Hill, Nathaniel Richardson, Thomas Ross, and Jacob Walker. These pews were placed doubtless around by the walls, leaving the centre to be filled with long seats, where those not provided for in the pews would find a place.

The old house was sold for £40, the town "reserving such seats as they had occasion for in finishing the new, and the glass of the pue in the south front galerie, provided by the proprietors of the said pue, and the window that Mr. Samuel Danforth provided." It would be interesting if we had a sight or intelligible description of this reserved glass and window. The cost of the house was provided for by one rate of £500, two of £250 each, and by the sale of the pews for £250, making a total of £1250. Whoever is curious to do so, can trace minute details of the expenditures as they are recorded, (Vol. III, pp. 101-2, 137-38). For "framing," Ens. Benjamin Shed, Sergt. Benjamin Frost, and John Dutton were paid "13 - 06 - 08," each, and a large proportion of the names of citizens appear, credited with labor, lumber, nails, or other items. This house served the town for sixty years, when the present First Church was built, in 1797. The old house was then sold to the contractor for building a town- and school-house and reconstructed, with reduced dimensions, on the east side of Main Street near. There it was so used for a generation, and many of the older people of to-day attended school in this venerable building. It then passed into private hands and was used as a hall and store until 1876, when it was burned with the adjoining hotel, which stood on the corner of Andover Street.

The early years of Mr. Ruggles' ministry were signalized by the appearance of a bell. At a meeting, 1710-11, March 9th, it was voted, "that the money that the land was sold for to Capt. Reed, on the west of Concord River, shall be laid out, to buy a bell for the meeting house." Captain Lane and Lieutenant John Stearns were appointed "a committy to provide a Bell for the Town, not exceeding sixty pounds prise." The land sold to Captain Reed was a tract remaining after the land divisions of 1708-10, and consisted of five hundred and sixty acres, bounded "southwest by Concord, one mile; and on the Nor west by the Major's farme, upon a streight line about 384 poles, and partly by Verginia meadows; on the north east by the land of Kendal Patten about 323 poles; and south east by the Bloods' land, in a crooked line, about 292 poles." Previous grants of meadow were excepted. The price is not stated, but was probably £50, as more than that sum is said to be in bank, and the balance of the £60 was to be raised if necessary by a town rate. For the hanging of the bell, the town agreed, 1713-14, January 18, with James Hosley and Ben. Frost. They were to do all the wood work, make the stairs, platform, and door, and provide the "Irone work of good Irone," for which they were to have pay, and hang the bell "fit to ring"; for all which they were to receive £4 and aid in raising the bell.

This bell was used until 1753, January 23, when a committee was appointed "to take down the bell and convey it to Boston and dispose of it in the best way they can towards the procuring another; and indent with some Gentleman for another, * and to Run the hassard of said Bell from England to Boston; the bell to be procured by said committee is not to exceed five hundred pounds in weight." At the same time the town voted to sell "so much of the hind seats on the lower floor on the south side of our meeting house, on each side the middle or broad alley, as will be convenient for six pues, three on a side, to be sold to the highest bidder, * in order to purchase a meeting house bell."

This second bell, it appears, came from England, and was probably the same which was "cracked" by violent ringing on July 4th, 1842. The memory of our older citizens recalls the fact that it bore an inscription including the name "Billericay," a form of the word which English workmen would be very likely to use. But the facts disprove the pleasant tradition that the first bell in town was a gift, suitably inscribed, from the English Billericay. And it is hardly possible that such an incident could have occurred at any later date and left no trace in the Records of either town.

Of the congregation in Mr. Ruggles' day we have an interesting glimpse in a seating list, which has been fortunately preserved. It is without date, but must belong to the old meeting-house, and after 1733. If we assume its date as 1736, we can not be far from the fact. The occupants of the ten pews are, of course, not included, and, if two families occupied each pew, these would add twenty names to the one hundred and fifty of this list. But about thirty of the young men seated in the side gallery were not married, and the number of families in the congregation, judging from this record, must have been near one hundred and forty. The deacons were seated in front of the pulpit, and their wives with the widows, and two other ladies are specially provided for. In the two front seats we see the twenty men who are dignified with the title of "Mr." Of the first ten, Mr. Richardson, aged fifty-six, was the youngest.

The question of a colleague for the pastor came before the town, 1746-7, March 3, and a committee, Benjamin Tompson, Esq., Capt. Thomas Kidder, and Dea. Joshua Abbott, was appointed, to confer with Mr. Ruggles. They reported that he was "very free," and "desired that the town would proceed in that affaire." Another committee, of seven, was then directed to "desire Mr. Ruggles to assis with them in calling in some of the neighboring ministers to keep a Day of prayer, to seek divine direction in that affaire." On the report of this committee, April 6, the question arose, whether "the Town would proceed to hear any Gen^l to preach upon probation," and "it passed in the negative by a great majority." Plainly the mind of the town was made up as to the call to be given, and a young Harvard graduate, who taught the school in 1746, had won their hearts. It is not in evidence that the proposed "Day of prayer" was held. The church waived its legal right to the first vote in the choice of a pastor, and, "at a General Town Meeting," April 28: "The church and town unanimously voted and made choyce of M^r. John Chandler, of Andover, to settle in the work of the ministry amongst us, with the Rev^d. Mr. Samuel Ruggles, our aged Pastor." They promise him, "in a Reasonable time," £600, old tenor, as a settlement, and a salary of £200 while Mr. Ruggles was able to carry on a part of the work, and to add £100 more after Mr. Ruggles' death. The answer of Mr. Chandler was delayed for farther negotiations. He asked that the settlement be paid in two years, and, if he outlived Mr. Ruggles, that the ministry land, which was west of Concord River, might be sold, and "laid out either for mowing or pasturing within half a mile of the meeting house," he to have the improvement of it, during his ministry, in either location. The town consented. But the uncertain value of the currency still embarrassed them. To meet the difficulty the town voted that the salary should be at a standard of twelve shillings a bushel for Indian corn and sixteen shillings for rye. Mr. Chandler proposed instead, that the standard be between ten and twelve shillings for corn and thirteen and fifteen for rye, and to this the town assented. They also offered him £20 a year for "fuel for his fire," but, "it appearing that it was more accommodating to Mr. Chandler to have wood in the stead of it," they promised him twenty cords of wood annually. The salary was payable semi-annually.

When these engagements were embodied in a formal covenant, the way was prepared for Mr. Chandler's ordination, which occurred, 1747, October 21. "Eight churches came together to carry on the solemnity. The Rev^d. Mr. Rogers, of Littleton, began with prayer; the Rev^d Mr James Chandler, of Rowley, [brother of the candidate,] preached, from John, iii:11; the Rev^d Mr. Phillips, of Andover, gave the charge and also added an exhortation to the people, wherein he pressed upon 'em the particular duties of a people towards their minister; and the Rev^d. Mr. Bowes, of Bedford, gave the Right hand of fellowship. No objections were laid in against their proceeding in the ordination by any person whatsoever."

An ordination was a great event in those days. In preparation for this the town appointed a committee to "make suitable and descent provition, at the Town's cost, for Mr. Chandler's ordination, at one or two places, for all the ministers and messengers, and Mr. Chandler's Relations, and for steudants of harvard Colledg, according to their best prudance." They also reserved the front seats for members of the council, and the front seats in the gallery for the church members.

Mr. Ruggles' work was nearly done, and his colleague and successor was installed none too soon. He died, 1749, March 21; and the town voted £150, old tenor, for the expenses of his funeral.

A formal and solemn renewal of covenant was made soon after Mr. Chandler was ordained. The articles of faith then used and recorded have been given above. Whether this was the first form of confession, or an earlier confession was then repeated, and, if so, whether with or without change, we are not told.

The pastorate of Mr. Chandler began under bright auspices, and for eleven years was prosperous. He was a man of good ability, and the church was united and happy in his ministry. But a cloud arose, and the end came soon and in trouble. It is due to the truth of history that the facts, condensed from many pages of the church record, be stated. Mr. Chandler's wife died, 1757, June 28. It is charitable to suppose that grief for her loss and the absence of her good influence may have prepared the way for a measure of indulgence in "spiritual" consolations which were not from above. That he kept the means for such indulgence the contents of his cellar, as shown by his inventory, reveal, though it is doubtful if he had more than the best of his neighbors. He was married, 1759, January 18, to Elizabeth White, of Haverhill, a cousin of his first wife. Soon after the church record tells us: "Feb. 18. The Sac^t. omitted, by reason of some being dissatisfied at y^e chearful behavior of y^e pastor at y^e bringing of a second Wife into his house, when a large concourse of people assembled. The Pastor stayed the church after services and gave leave for the congregation to stop also; and represented his case to 'em in what he then apprehended its just light, upon which they voted to pass over the offense, sit down satisfied, and that the Sac^t should be administered to 'em by the Pastor the next Lords Day." This record, like the long account of following troubles, stands in the very neat handwriting of Mr. Chandler himself, who shows throughout a frankness and apparent honesty which wins respect and sympathy for his weakness.

The trouble, however, continued, and was too deep to be so easily disposed of; and, in August, articles of complaint were laid before a Council, with specifications of four cases in which the pastor's weakness had been manifested. The Council met, September 18, consisting of the First and Second Churches in Cambridge and that in Chelmsford. They found three of the charges sustained; but, in view of a confession, to be read to the church and congregation, they recommended its acceptance, and that "whatever hath been grievous and offensive in y^e Pastor" be overlooked. They proceed to a frank and faithful statement to Mr. Chandler, and appeal to him tenderly to free himself from reproach by a sober and godly life, and remind the church of the good character he has maintained among them "till of late," and that "the sin which he has fallen into is what you have not * so much as suspected him of till y^e last winter"; for which reason they urge the members of the church to pray and strive together for the recovery and usefulness among them of one who might be so good a pastor. But the evil could not be exorcised, and, 1760, June 5th, another Council convened and the church with them, when a show of hands so "discouraged the pastor as to tarrying," that by advice of the Council he tendered his resignation and it was accepted. Two years later Mr. Chandler died here, at the early age of thirty-eight.

This sad story does not stand alone. Concord had a similar experience. Nor need the occasional lapse in this way of a minister surprise us. When every cellar was stored with cider, and good Deacon Abbott would be as sure as any other to invite the minister to drink whenever he called, the wonder would be if here and there one did not stumble. But, while we give sympathy to the unfortunate young pastor, the bright morning of whose ministry was so soon and sadly overcast, we may also with joy set up a waymark of progress, and deny that "the former days were better than these."

CHAPTER X.

GLEANINGS FROM THE RECORDS.

THE limits of this volume permit but meagre use of the early Records; and beyond the selections on special topics, in other chapters, we can only glean items here and there. The following explains the origin of our first and admirable "Book of Grants": "12, 10, 1665. The Town did agree with Jonathan Danforth, to collect and transcribe all former grants and records of lands, granted to perticular persons by the Towne of Billerica, into another booke, so farre as perticular persons interested therein shall desire it; and they agree that the said Jonathan shall for his laboure have fourpence for every perticular grant or record that shall be thus transcribed by him." In making this transcript he was authorized, conferring with the selectmen and proprietors concerned, to "put an eshew to all difficult things," or adjust questions and conflicts of lines and bounds. When the work was done, "27, 9^m, 1666, The Townsmen, with much pains and care having examined the same, comparing them with the originall copies, The Towne, by this deliberate act of theirs, allow, approue, owne, confirme, & establish y^e same, to stand and remaine as. legall and ethentic. And, by this act of theirs, do disallow, disowne, and make a nullity of whatever record or grant has been recorded in y^e old towne booke, or in any other scroule or paper, so farre (and no farther) as they are in any wise repugnant and contrary to what is recorded in y^e new towne booke."

The Restoration of Charles II, in 1660, in England, displacing the Commonwealth, gave much anxiety to the Puritan Commonwealth here, and its enemies used the opportunity, striving to produce embarrassment and trouble. It was represented that the people were dissatisfied; and, to repel this charge, many of the towns presented addresses to the General Court. The following is that of Billerica:—

*To the Honard Generall Court, held at Boston, October 19, 1664:*¹

“The Humble Representation of the Inhabitants, both freemen and others, of the Town of Billerica, Humbly Sheweth: That whereas we have understood that there have bin complaints made vnto our Sovereigne Lord the king concerning our dissatisfaction in this collony with the present Government, we whose Names are subscribed, the Inhabitants of the Towne above mentioned, being not a little Sensible what occation of Discouragement would be laid upon you, and what reproach and blame would Justly fall vpon vs, if such complaints should be true, have thought it our duty (both for the vindkating of our owne Innocency and for the promoting of anything, in an orderly way, which may tend to the incouraging of your hearts and strengthening of your hands, in the discharge of your great trust) to testify vnauinously that we doe Rest Satisfied in the present Government, and that we have cause to bless God for our past and present pretious and peaceable enjoyments, desiring that God would make you farther Instrumental for the continuing of our merjes and priveleges, both civil and ecclesiasticall, to his honour and the good of vs and our posterity. And we doe reingage ourselves and promise (by the help of God) to be faithful, obedient, and servicable (to our utmost power) to the present Authority (so long and orderly established by patent amongst vs) in all things, according to God, as by duty, equity, or oath wee are bound therevnto; thus hoping that this our Aplycation vnto your selves shall be accepted as a testimony of our vnfeigned fidelity and sincere Affection to y^r selves and to the good of this common wealth, wee comitt you to him who is Able to direct you in all the weighty matters you have in hand and remaine y^rs in all humble observance.

If these signatures were autographs this paper would have added interest, but nearly all are in the handwriting of Parker or Danforth. Those of Ralph Hill and the Brackets are probably exceptions, and possibly one or two others.

The town guarded carefully the disposition of “rights,” held by individuals, in the common land. Its consent was necessary, by agreement December, 1666, to any sale or gift to a person not an inhabitant, or even to a resident, except that a person holding more than a ten-acre right might so transfer a five-acre right or less. And parents could give rights to their children if the town on request declined to do so. Timber cut on the "commons" was after a short time to be free to any person, "in case such timber be not hewen, or riven, or fter wood cut fit for carting"; and, in 1666, all were forbidden "to cut any green trees upon y^e comans for fter wood for the space of two years," upon penalty of two shillings per tree, large or small.

"24, 4^m, 67. The selectmen, meeting at shawshin house, did there receive of the towne stock which was in sarg^m Parker's hand": 68 lbs. of powder, at £6, 16s., bullets and lead, 58 lbs., and match, 50 lbs. This was ten days after Mr. Parker's death, and the place was of course at his residence, and this record proves, in comparison with early usage (see ante p. 7), that more than one place was known as Shawshin House.

"26, 6^m, 69. The town did order & impower the selectmen in being to procure a fat beast (with some of the townes land) and send it to Mr. Davie as from the towne, by way of thankfulness for his good service for the towne." The gentleman thus rewarded was Mr. Humphrey Davy, of Boston, who had represented the town in the General Court, 1666-69. Two months later: "By vertue of y^e former order, The selectmen bought a fatt beast of John Dunkin & agreed with him to give him land for it." He was to drive the animal to Boston and present it to Mr. Davy, and was to receive twenty acres, if he had choice of location, or twenty-five acres, if the selectmen laid it, "as they Judge may be most advantage for y^e town." The result is given in the grant to Dunkin elsewhere.

The following gives an idea of the early life here: "11, 9, 70. Thomas Richardson, being convicted of taking two loads of cedar from our swamps and transporting y^e same out of town contrary to our towne orders," is fined thirty shillings, which Thomas Foster paid for him, he agreeing to build twenty-two poles of "four-raile fence" for Foster. Benjamin Parker and Samuel Manning incurred similar fines, as did John Tidd and Robert Eames, of Woburn. The latter promised to pay his fine "in shoes at James foules at Woburn," and the former in "cooper's ware." Plainly currency was scarce in those days, and barter in some form the condition of most payments. March 27, 1671, "Mr. Whiting is granted liberty to take in a peece of conion land by Thomas Dutton's fence, by y^e swamp side, to make a garden of for several yeers, but not for propriety." In 1670 one share of the minister's rate of John Stearns, who had died, was laid upon Thomas Dutton, and we may infer that Mr. Dutton had purchased Mr. Stearns' land.

The question of the basis of rates was now seriously agitating the town. The early method (see p. 55) was to lay assessments upon the "rights" or fractional parts thereof. But progress and changes, as some prospered and others did not, would make this basis very unequal. The subject was debated in 1668, but a change required substantial unanimity, to which some were not ready to consent. In 1671 the town voted, that all public charges for the future should be borne by persons and estates, and divisions of land be made, one-half in the same way, the other half by "rights," as formerly. But the agitation was not ended, and, "4, 10, 72. It was agreed to desire the help of Lieut. Hinchman, Sargent James Parker, & Mr. Jn^o. Smedley, to give us their advice in these our difficulties." This committee came as requested December 19, and the next day the town was called together, and every person present, thirty-five in all, signed an "order" for the future.² They recite the agitation and great difficulty which lay "in either peaceably maintaining our way of raising our publick charges, agreed upon in our first foundation order; or getting in to another way with such a unanimous consent as might tend to righteousness and peace"; and refer to meetings held, and propositions of a "major part" to which some would not assent. The "order" proceeds: "That whereas, according to our first agreement in giving out our accommodations, all publick charges was laid vpon euery alotment according to the proportion of their grants, whither a ten, eight, six, five, or three acre lots, and that whither persons were resident in the town or not.

* Now, for y^e easing some persons amongst us and proprietors with us (tho not inhabitants at p^rsent), who complain of their burthen in y^e former way, The Town do agree that for the space of three years next ensuing, from y^e first of May last past, we will lay two third parts of our publick charges in the town, both civill & ecclesiastical, vpon persons & estates in the town according to the vallation of y^e country rate, and the other third part vpon y^e alotments or first grants, according to y^e first foundation order, whither persons be resident or not; and that after these three years be expired, the major part of the inhabitants, agreeing, may alter this way, which being orderly done and entered in their town book, this agreement shall be nullified; otherwise the town shall continue in this way." The names of Hamlet and Kemp are not signed to this order. In November, 1685, the town agreed, "that from this day forward all priviledges shall cease to pay Towne charges."

The Cambridge "rights" to land in Billerica were not yet all purchased, and money received by the town was occasionally appropriated for this purpose. In 1672 a rate for the same object was levied equal to half the minister's rate. For the "encouragement" of those who paid this tax leave was given to take cedar for a thousand shingles for each ten shillings paid, while those who refused were to be "abated" so much in the next division of land. As a farther measure of relief from the burden of Cambridge claims the selectmen were ordered, "29, 10^m, 1673," in case they have any encouragement, "to petition y^e generall Court for a further grant of lands, to help us cleare those entanglements." This they did in May, 1674, asking for one thousand acres in the wilderness, but receiving a negative. The petition was repeated the next year and encouragement given, as they had liberty "to find out a parcel of waste land and present to the next session of y^e Courte, who will be ready to accommodate them so farr as may be done." But the disturbances of "Phillips War" probably delayed the matter, and it was not until 1681, October, that Billerica appears again at Court, describing "two parcels, one on the Souhegan and another next Nathaniel Walker's farm, north-west of Groaten," as suiting their needs. The magistrates "consent," but "the deputies consent not," and the town failed to obtain the aid it sought." Forty years later, 1716, November 12, the town voted, that "a petition be preferred to the General Court for the land that was asked for in the year 1676"; but the Court was still deaf to their appeal.

A record is found, "27, 11, 72," like many of similar tenor afterwards: "Simon Crosbee is chosen to keep a house of public entertainment." The price of corn was fixed, in 1672, thus: "the towne do order, that y^e prise of corne for y^e rates to be paid at this year (the court not having set y^e same) shall be paid at: indian corne three shillings p bushell, and other graine at y^e prise y^e Court set it at last year; only in case that afterward it shall appear that indian corne is not worth four pence p bushell more than it was y^r last year, in y^r market in generall, then every man shall be responsible to their severall rates four pence p bush: and have it added to each man his just proportion y^r next year."

The brothers Champney had returned, after a few years' residence here, to Cambridge, and serious differences had arisen with them about taxes, the arrears amounting to £8. These were adjusted in 1673, the town accepting an offer from Daniel Champney, who "did tender to resigne up all future claims of priviledg in reference to what was granted to his father by our towne upon y^r resignation of his lot of three hundred and fifty acres, sealed in our great deed, and to give y^r towne a full title to that fifty acre lot that was by Cambridg granted to Thomas Bridge, and to pay y^r towne in hand twenty shillings by Simon Crosbee & so quitt scores."

The "swineyards" were important officers in the early life of the town, and in 1674 a full page of record is devoted to rules by which they were to be governed. Yokes, to be sufficient, must be "in length perpendicular, three inches below the bottom sole and six inches above the cratch or upper sole, and three inches wide outside on each side of y^r crosse peices." And every swine was to be "ringed in the Nose, either with one sufficient ring in y^r middle of y^r nose or else with two rings within half an inch one of y^r other." The penalty for neglect was to be sixpence each, one-half of which the officer had for his trouble, and if he could not find the owner the animal was to be impounded and the officer had the whole fine.

Items concerning the "diet" and care of "old Stephen Fisher" recur often from 1668 to 1682; and aid was occasionally given to others. "17, 9^m, 76. John Durrant's family being in an afflicted condition, it is agreed that they shall have some relief from the town, & do desire & order Samuel Manning to see to their necessities & relieve their extremities, so farr as he can obtain anything suitable of y^r neighbours," and those contributing were to receive an allowance in the next town rate.

The first record of tithing-men appears;—

"8. 8^m, 77. Acording to y^r order of y^r generall Court, The Towne was divided in severall parts and tithing men appointed acording to law.

		and their families."

These groups of families are by neighborhood ; the first southeast of the village, the second southwest, the third east of and partly in the centre, the fourth in the centre, and the last north. The omission of Carrier, Daniel, Farmer, and Toothaker is worthy of note. Mr. Daniel had probably returned to England, and Mr. Farmer was in Woburn. Another list is given in 1679 in which Simon Crosby takes the place of Joseph Tompson and John Sheldon that of Richard Hassell, as tithing-men, and the names appear of James Butler, Edward Farmer, Peter Fassitt, George Grimes, Daniel Mackginnis, David Meades, John Stearns, Roger Toothaker, and John Whitticur. In 1682 the last list is given. James Frost and Jacob French take the place of the two last-named tithing-men ; and new names are those of Thomas Carrier, Benjamin Muzzy, and John Wilson. Tithing-men are mentioned occasionally, but their appointment and lists of families are not recorded.

An important early custom was the annual summons to brush-cutting by the highways. In 1677 the record mentions the summons by squadrons, the work being in charge of Sergeant Hill, Sergeant Foster, Corporal French, Sergeant Tompson, Jonathan Danforth, and Samuel Manning. Some names appear in this, but not in the tithing-men's list of same date, as Thomas Carrier and "his man John Levistone," Edmund Chamberline, Simon Black, Daniel Bly,

Isaac and Samuel Stearns. The east squadron was to work one day at home and "y^e 2nd day up at towne." And the condition of things "at towne" is more vividly suggested by the fact that Danforth's men were to do their work "between his house and y^e meeting house."

The following explains itself:—

..19. 1. 1671 we received an order from y^e selectmen of Cambridg to run y^e bounds between us. on y^e 29 day instant. The selectmen sent their order back again. and underwrit the same as followeth:

"Gent^l. if this your order had come to our hand one day sooner, our towne might have had y^e cognizance of it & have impowered us to have acted in it. All that we can say at present is this: That this time six years your selves sent to us to come down to you, to come to an agreement about it. We attended your order, and made two Journeys to you about it. We offered to chuse a committee of indifferent men to determine it (which was according to our artickles of agreement), but you refused to act, for want of power from your towne. Wee have heard nothing from you since that time, tho we have expected it; for us to send to meet at y^e line according to your order is but loss of time, untill we come to an agreement what to do and where to run. We are yet ready to wait upon you for an agreement about it. as soon as you please; in y^e mean time we remain your Selectm. of Billerica.

“Pray let us know your mind by a line or two from your selves.”

The place which Harvard College had in the hearts and plans of the Colony is shown in a record, “20, 10th, 1678. Simon Crosbee was appointed to collect w^h was yet behind to y^e colledg contribution & to transmit it to y^e colledg ouer seers, according to y^e order of y^e gen^l. Court.” A letter,³ dated “14, 8, 1678,” illustrates the subject more fully:—

“Mr. Iaine: This day Mr. Whiting and the Selectmen made choise of yourself to returne an answe^r to y^e Honrd generall Court, vpon y^e 18th day of this instant, (whk^h is according to their order,) in reference to our contribution to y^e colledge; and our Answer which we desire your self to returne is this: Wee have bin very diligent to gather what is at present to be had, and sent it into Mr. Manning. of Cambridg, according to y^e court order; and there yet remaines about six pound, 8 shill, 10 p; y^e most of it we hope we shall get as soon as corne is marchantable; we have faire promises for it; but some psons that did contribute with us are gone to England and left no order for y^e payment of it, therefore we question whither we shall ever get it; for those that yet are in this country (tho removed out of our towne), we shall do our utmost indeauor to gather y^e same speedily as maybee; not further to add but o^r Humble service psented to y^e Honrd Court, we take leave, earnestly praying for y^e Lord's presence & blessing to bee with you in all yo^r weighty affairs.

“In y^e name and by y^e order of y^e Reverend [Mr.] Samuel Whiting & y^e rest of y^e selectmen.

“JONATHAN DANFORTH.”

It cost these plain farmers of Billerica something in their poverty to raise such a sum for the College. But they understood its importance to them and their children, and cheerfully taxed themselves to do their part.

³ Loaned by George M. Elliott, of Lowell.

In 1679 the government called upon the towns for a general statement of their condition. Billerica answered:—

“In observance of a warrant from y^e Hon^d Deputy Gouv^r. bearing date the 30th. 10^m. 1679. our answer is as followeth:

“As to a list of the number of males & rateable estate in our towne, we have sent the list that was taken the last August. and returned from the commissioners meeting. As to the number of families, there is about fifty that are able to bare vp publick charges; there is more of the aged, that are helpless, y^e widdows & poor persons, that want releife, ten in number. which is all.

“As to y^e annual allowance to our reverend paster, our agreement is seventy pounds p anni. in Country pay. as for schools. we have no gramer schooles; ensigne Tompson is appointed to teach those to write & read that will come to him; also severall School Dames. As for tithing men, we have five in number; their names are [as above], and all sworne to the faithful discharge of their service according to law. As for young peons and inmates, we know of none amongst us but are orderly. And Ensign Joseph Tompson is chosen to attend the Honourd Court. according to said warrant.”

These lists afford interesting information and comparisons. The first includes forty-seven names and forty-five polls; the later, seventy-three names and one hundred and three polls, marking the comparatively rapid progress of nine years. In 1679 it surprises us to find that, next to Mr. Lane and Captain Danforth, Thomas Carrier has the highest list. At that time Mr. Lane is the only person who pays more than half-a-pound; in 1688 Mr. Patten is highest, and there are eight who pay more than half-a-pound. The absence from the list, in 1679, of the names of Baldwin, Kittredge, and Stearns is observable, while that of 1688 adds, among others, Ditson, Dunkin, Dutton, Farmer, Grimes, Page, and Wilson.

In May, 1680, the selectmen order the constable to "forbare sitting y^e watch at y^e present, and vntill there appeared more danger."

In November, 1680, Samuel Manning was granted six acres of swamp, on condition of his building "a good and sufficient Damm or Damms, to drowne that swamp commonly called the mill swamp." He was to raise the water "one foot higher than at present," and "to keep the said swamp vnder water two years together from the time of the first finishing of the same, and to maintain the wholl worke of damms, slewces, and water courses, for the space of seven years from y^e first finishing, as aforesaid; and to keep the same vnder water all the winter seasons," and to leave all in good repair at the end. This Mill Swamp was on Content Brook toward the outlet of Long Pond.

Another side of the life of those days is seen in the record, "16, 1, 1681," when James Speen, Indian, received £8 for four wolves' heads, brought to Constable Sheldon.

The following curious record occurs: "8, 11^m, 82. The selectmen at the same time did order, that whereas Edmond Chamberlain, by order of y^e County Court, * was ordered to submitt himselfe to y^e gouernment of y^e select of this towne, they do order him, y^e said Edmond Chamberlain, to live with his master, Joseph Walker, for y^e space of six moneths next ensuing, after the manner of a Journeyman, to attend family orders and gouernment therein acording to law. Also, not to make any bargain with any man without his master's approbation; and at the end of six moneths, as aforesaid, to declare to the selectmen where he intends to reside and what courses of life he intends to lead, and his said master engageth to have a speciall inspection unto his s^d seruant in y^e interim, and to inform y^e selectmen in case he cannot keep him to good order and diligence." We may hope that Chamberlain profited by such care.

In 1684 a measurement of Captain Gookin's farm proved that it contained one hundred and fifty acres more than the grant, which was five hundred acres. It was then owned by Robert Thompson, Esq., and the town sold him the excess on payment in his behalf, by William Stoughton, Esq., of £23 in silver. "18, 10^m, 1684. Lt. Thompson laid out in money at Boston eighteen shillings. 6^p, for Roger Toothakar's family, for which hee bought 4 pair of shoes, one pound whalebone, 1 yard farrindine for caps, and one blue Apron."

In 1686, "Simon Crosbee, who formerly hath kept a house of publick entertainment, doth now refuse to hold it any longer, & Nathaniel Tay being desirous to take it up is allowed, by authority" of the selectmen, to do so. But Mr. Crosby did not long refuse to entertain the public, and in 1688 the selectmen at their meetings had "victuals and Drink" of him. His license as innkeeper is preserved at Cambridge, and he was commonly the early landlord of the town. The charges for which he received pay are now amusing and remind us of Falstaff's "intolerable deal of sack," including such items as "cydar 14^p, liquour 2^p"; "four suppers 16^p, drink 8^p"; "2 potts of cydar"; "a pot of rosted cyder"; "half a pint of rhum," and many like these. In January, 1692-3, a meeting was held with the County Commissioners, Major Thomas Henchman and Mr. Mather Johnson, for the inspection of the list. One day they had "eight diners, besides our drink, 00-04-00." Another day: "we had drink before dinner, a pynt of rum, 00-01; a pot of cyder and jill of Rhum, 00-00-05, and six pots of cider, 00-01-00; and a dinner for eight persons, 8 pence per man, 00-05-04; and eight pots of cider, 00-01-02." The list made up at this meeting included 111 oxen, valued at £2 per ox; 220 cows, valued £1, 10s., per cow; 77 horses, at 40s. per horse, and 280 sheep, at £4 per score. The number of polls, besides the superannuated, was 92, assessed 10s. each; and "situations & stock" were assessed "21, 05, 02."

This was the period of the witchcraft troubles and trials, to which, however, the Billerica Records make no allusion. The aid given to Toothaker's family betrays his neglect of them while engaged in the Salem fooleries; and the deaths of Mrs. Rebecca Chamberline and John Durrent, "in y^e prison at Cambridge," in September and October, 1692, suggest the inference of Mr. Farmer, that the charge on which they were imprisoned was probably witchcraft. A Billerica woman, whose later residence had been Andover, Mrs. Martha Carrier, became one of the most notable of the sufferers, being executed at the same time with the Rev. George Burroughs. Her bearing at the trial is distinguished by courage and good sense, and must challenge the admiration of those who examine the dreary literature of this terrible delusion. Her own child of eight testified, that her mother made her "touch the book; it was in Andrew Fuller's pasture, Elizabeth Johnson was there * her Aunt Toothaker and cousin, when she was baptized"; and Roger Toothaker bore swift witness in language too filthy for quotation.⁶ That good men could trust such testimony, and rest such action upon it, is an unexplained marvel of human credulity.

The following official document belongs to this period:—⁷

"To y^e Constable of Billerica. Greeting:

"Wee command you to warn & give notice unto Capt. Danforth, John Rogers, [and others], that they and every one of them be and personally appear at y^e Court of Oyer & Terminer, to be held by adjournment at Salem, on Tuesday next, at Ten of y^e Clock in y^e morning, there to testify y^e truth, to the best of their knowledge, on certain Indictments to be exhibited against Martha Carrier, of Andover. And hereof they nor you are to fail at your utmost peril, making return hereof vnder your hand. Dated in Salem, July 30, 1692. & in y^e fourth year of our Reign.

"STEPHEN SEWALL, Ck."

James Paterson was the constable, and endorses this return: "According to this warrant I have showed it to Capt. Danforth, and his answer is, that he can say nothing in y^e case that is worth mentioning. I have warned John Rogers & he saith he will attend, if his garrison may [be] guarded in his absence. Billerica, August 1st, 92." Mr. Rogers had been near neighbor to Mrs. Carrier, who lived on the road to Wamesit, at North Billerica, but he does not seem to have been anxious to testify against her, and did not; and it is a pleasure to find that, unlike so many others, Mr. Danforth could "say nothing" in this case. This sad record is revived in 1710, when Mr. Carrier appealed to the authorities for payment of expenses he had incurred. At the demand of the sheriff he paid fifty shillings, and prison fees to the keeper, for his wife and four children. £4, 16s. His "humble request" is that the Attainder may be taken off," and that he may be paid the loss sustained, £7, 6s. He adds: "I found my wife and children provisions during their imprisonment."

In February, 1692-3, the question arose of "dismissing one their deputies, whereas the Town had hither unto sent down two," and the town did dismiss Joseph Tompson and continued Capt. Ralph Hill "in that service." Records of the annual election of a deputy are not always found, and none appears for ten years after 1680. Perhaps a deputy once chosen was expected to hold the office until the election of his successor; or, as the towns then paid the charges of their representatives, they may have omitted to send occasionally and saved the expense. In 1693 the town, to prevent so much loss of time as was generally spent without profit at the town meeting, agreed that distinct notice be given of the hour of meeting, and "that the town clerk shall constantly attend at that time, and that any vote or grant passed by the inhabitants orderly within one hour after the time set * shall be always accounted vallid, although there may want many of the inhabitants; and that no vote passed at any time after y^e sun is set shall be * vallid; and the town clerk (in cloudy weather) shall delare when the sun is set."

The preservation of shade trees received attention, and a committee was appointed, "15, 12, 93, to mark with the letter T so many trees as they shall judge needful upon y^e Country roads and town Comons * from the house of Joseph Walker to the house of Capt. Brackit, and from Capt. Hill's to y^e Brow of Rockie Hill, leading to Andover." This included for several miles the two main highways, which crossed each other in the village.

The instructions to the selectmen (see p. 61) were annually repeated, with slight variations. They were usually read in public, and sometimes recorded anew. But, after the reading in 1694, March 23, the clerk adds: "answered by the Town, that the law hath provided for what was contained in the instructions; our instructions laid aside for the year"; and they do not reappear.

A committee, in 1694, April, was directed "to lay out a suphicient highway from Mr. Michael's farm through Mrs. Page's land to Shawshin River; and over Shawshin River unto Lt. John Willson's mill, and to Cambridge line; and from the same road to lay out a suphicient highway through Mrs. Page's land unto the land of Patrick Fassit, unto the house of Patrick Fassit; and from thence to state the highway in the most convenient place from Patrick Fassitt's house, leading up to Concord Road, and from there to Mr. Laine's." Mr. Fasset lived near the residence of Mrs. Lane, on the main street, a half-mile east of Bedford; but this description can hardly belong to the present Bedford Street, for if that had been laid out before 1708, it must have been mentioned in describing the grants then made to Hill and Fasset, which were separated by it not long after. Probably this record belongs to the "pine-hill road," alluded to above (p. 95).

May 6, 1694, the town appointed John Wilson, Sen., and Joseph Tompson "to search the Country Records to find both the grant & the returne of Mr. Winthrop's farm, that lyeth on the mouth of Concord Riuer"; and the selectmen, with Captain Danforth, were directed "to prosecute the Town's interest in wemessek land to effect, and the town doth engadge to stand by them in the same." This record may explain one which follows soon after. The town "had enformation that sum persons have eregularly marked out Land in our Towne coñions, without our knowledge and approbation"; and Thomas Richardson, Edward Farmer, and Joseph Walker, Sen., were sent "to deface & extinguish & abolish all such marks, & to pluck up all such stakes or boundes of land so bounded or marked; in as much as in them lyeth to make all such markes and stakes to be a nulity."

The various expenses of the town from year to year are recorded. From these we gather that the deputy to the General Court had three shillings per day; that the widow Ruth Shead had sometimes £1 and sometimes twenty-five shillings for "sweeping the meeting house"; that, in 1694, £12 was paid for ammunition; in 1696 seven shillings was paid for transporting two impotent persons "to ohorn, by order" of Major Henchman; that the cost of the land controversy west of Concord River, in 1696, was about £8; and that the clerk, Mr. Tompson, received £2, 5s., for keeping the records and making five town rates. A town meeting was held, 1695, December 3, at Mr. Farmer's, and the town clerk adds, "Terible cold." July 17th, "our inhabitance (being warned before by a warrant, given to the constables) sware alegiance unto King William before Major tinge."

The primitive method of aiding the poor appears from a record, 14 January, 1696-7, which was "a day of humiliation," and a contribution was taken, amounting to thirty-two shillings and eightpence, for Thomas Stearns. In February, another "collection in public" was taken of fourteen shillings and sixpence; and three persons appearing before the selectmen, "it being a low time with them," it was agreed "to divide that small matter equally between them," and to give each a bushel of Indian corn.

The arrears in minister's rates were a constant source of trouble. In February, 1696-7, an obligation was presented for subscriptions by persons who would promise to pay their arrears before May 20; "otherwise the constable to make distraint forthwith upon such as shall refuse." In November these prices were fixed for payments of minister's rates: corn at three shillings and fourpence, rye at four shillings and sixpence, and wheat at five shillings and eightpence per bushel; pork at fourpence per pound, if merchantable. Whoever paid in money might have an abatement of one-seventh. The next year the prices fixed were less.

At this period Mr. Farmer's house seems to have been the tavern and place where the selectmen met. In 1699, Samuel Hunt also is approved of by the selectmen to sell victuals and drink "only three months in y^e year," April, May, and June; and Jonathan Bacon received the same license, not limited to three months.

Clocks and watches were few, and in 1697 Captain Danforth was paid for an hour-glass and for repairing the horse-block, six shillings and twopence. The town also voted, that "every Tythingman bring his staff at our next annual choice of Town officers; otherwise to continue in that place if the Town do so meet."

1703, May: "Complaint being made of the want of a watch house," a committee was appointed "to view the old meeting house," who reported that it might be made feasible and comfortable "to answer the end of the same." The report was approved.

A careful account was taken of the stock of ammunition in the hands of Captain Danforth; and, in August, "there did appear so great danger of the inemy, and many of our inhabitants being in great want of Ammunition," a distribution was made to Thomas Dutton, Samuel Rogers, John Dunken, Daniel Shead, Corp. John French, Samuel Hunt, Nathan Crosby, Samuel Fasset, Captain Tomson, Dr. Samuel Frost, and John Chamberlin. After this military use of the old meeting-house, it stood until 1708 and was disposed of. The following pecuniary record will not only be of interest for itself, but as an illustration of the method annually pursued.

"At a meeting of the selectmen, Decem. 9, 1714. Mr. Ruggles his salary Rate and the Town Rate was made. Mr. Ruggles his rate was made 81 - 13 - 08 the town Rate was made 10 - 16 - 10

In 1721, the State, as a measure of relief for extensive financial embarrassments, established a Loan Fund, which was distributed proportionally to the various towns, and under the charge of trustees loaned to citizens. The share of Billerica was £396, and her trustees, appointed November 6th, were Ebenezer Farley, Joshua Abbott, and John Needham. They were ordered "to let out the said money to Interest at five per cent. for the use of the town, to be disposed of as the town shall order from year to year, until the time set in the act be expired, taking good Personal security for said money. no person to have above ten pounds nor under five; also, it was voted, that the said Trustees shall have twenty shillings apiece, given them out of the whole principal of said money, and a fifth part of the Interest of the said money for their services as trustees from year to year, for letting out and taking care of said money." Persons borrowing from this fund gave mortgages to the Loan Commissioners, and many of these mortgage deeds are on record at the Middlesex Registry. The interest for the first year was appropriated towards the town charges. The loan was repaid to the State in five annual instalments, 1726-30. But the process was found so agreeable that it was repeated, and, in April, 1725, the town voted to "Receive their proportion of the £60,000 Loan," and chose Joshua Abbott, Benjamin Tompson, and Dea. William Patten, Trustees. The part of Billerica in this second loan was £496, 5s. It ran for ten years instead of five, the first payment of one-fifth part to the State being made in 1734.

In 1733, the clerk, then Joshua Abbot, began to enter the tax-lists in the Records, and from that date these valuable lists are found regularly. The tax-payers were divided into two lists, the line of division being Long Street or the Woburn and Chelmsford Road; designated North and South Lists at first, but after 1735 as East and West. In 1733 the Province tax was £54, 10s., 8d., the minister's rate £143, 11s., 11d., and the town rate £104, 10s., making a total of over £300, old tenor. The list follows, recast alphabetically, giving only the minister's rate and designating by the letters "N" and "S" the list, North or South, on which the name occurs.

A PREVIOUS chapter gives account of the early distribution of lands. Small grants were of course often made, but there was no general division again until 1685, November 19, and this was only of some remaining meadows, amounting to $287\frac{1}{2}$ acres, in various places. The allotments were to be laid out by Jonathan Danforth; and Ensign Hill and Sergeant Manning were to aid him, as a committee, "fully empowered to determine all matters of difficulty." They were "to begin at flag meadow beyond Nuttin's pond: Then over Concord river upon y^e spangs beginning at brook meadow cove: • Then in y^e great swamp • by Gilson's hill. Then that peece over Shawshin river below Strongwater brook. Then sace meadow. beginning next y^e great swamp • to the dam place appointed above the pond. Then, by y^e sides of y^e great pond, beginuing at y^e upper end. Then in y^e mill swamp that was drowned. • Then on the north side fox brook. • Then below Sergt Manning's meadow. upon the great brook." A list follows, giving all the original rights, with the changes which had been made. Another list gives the names in the order of drawing, the amount of each man's "privilege," and the number of acres drawn. This second list follows, omitting the last item, and arranging the names alphabetically: —

This list includes sixty-five lots; but for some reason the last three are not numbered. The total amounts to forty-seven ten-acre lots. Bacon, Lane, and some others did not share in this allotment. They represented rights acquired by original purchase of early grants, and not town grants, and no claim on their part to share in the common lands was recognized. But the lapse of years gave force to such a claim. After they had shared for a generation in the common burdens and sacrifices which the settlement had involved, the distinction as to the origin of their titles lost much of its force, and it was natural that they should claim a share in the lands which remained to be divided. The early proprietors, however, and their successors of course questioned this claim.

The adjustment of the lines west of Concord River was made by the committee of the General Court, in 1701, [see p. 81 above]. A meeting was held, 1702, April 6, "to consider of the most righteous way for the diuideing of our undeuided lands." The ownership of the various "rights" was canvassed and recorded with changes which had taken place.¹ The question was carefully debated, whether the division should be by "priveledges" only, or one-half on this basis and the other half by "stock and state." The majority, both of proprietors and of "rights," favored the latter basis. But the question whether Lane, Bacon, and other citizens should share with the proprietors, was undecided, and action was delayed no doubt for this reason. It resulted after three years in an appeal to the General Court. The petition,² 1705, May 30, is signed by John Lane, John Wilson, Thomas Frost, Jonathan Bacon, and Thomas Richardson, Jun., in behalf of themselves and others. They represent that they have been many years inhabitants and paid their full proportion of rates, taxes, and charges, with their neighbors, who were the first proprietors, and that now they are to be excluded from sharing in a division of the common lands. This course seems to the petitioners "against all Justice and Equity," and they "pray for an order which shall stop the proceeding until the matter can be freely heard and determined." This petition was not limited to those who had no share; but some, like Mr. Richardson, who had similar claim to more than the small "right" they had acquired, joined in it. It was ordered that a "stay be put to the Division, till a hearing be had before this Court"; and, after a postponement, decision was reached, November 16, 1705, "that Capt. John Lane and others, the Petitioners that are Freholders and Inhabitants of the said town of Bilrica, be Intituled to and have a proportionable share with others, the Common Proprietors and Inhabitants of the s^d Town, in all future Divisions of all undivided and Waste lands belonging to the s^d Town, according to the proportion to the Town Charges, for the space of seven years past." And the town, 1707-8, January 29, granted to the purchasers of Cambridge Church Farm a ten-acre right, "to promote and maintain peas and quietness among us," this grant to be a final issue of differences between them.

This important point being settled, the town was ready to proceed to the allotment of the extensive tracts of land which still remained common. The "commons," as they were familiarly known, still included sections in various parts of the town. The largest was west of Concord River, embracing about five thousand acres, or most of that part of the town. Nearly as much was towards Andover, in the Great Swamp and vicinity, by Strongwater Brook, and between and around the ponds. Six hundred acres were between Captain Lane's farm and the Shawshin Farms, taking in most of the present village of Bedford. Another section was near Nutting's Pond; and lastly, Fox Hill, between the Andover and Long Pond roads, still was held in common. In all, not less than twelve thousand acres remained for distribution, or not much less than two hundred and fifty acres for each ten-acre privilege. Captain Lane and others who had gained the right to share from the General Court seem to have received their entire portion west of Concord River.

The first step was taken, 1705, June 11, a few days later than the petition of Captain Lane and others, and before a decision was reached upon it. The agreement then made was to divide some of the smaller parcels of "commons" among groups of proprietors who would be best accommodated by them. The process was, however, suspended for two years, and the division was not made until 1707.

The "North part of the Center Squadron"³ included John Baldwin, Samuel Danforth, John Durant, Thomas Dutton, Edward Farmer, John Jeffs, Samuel Manning, William Patten, David Rogers, and John Wilson, who seems to have acquired the right of the Widow Paterson. The section granted them was east of Long Street, beyond the lots already granted, and extending from John Trull's land to Samuel Danforth's, beyond the old Corner Burying-Ground, which was reserved and appropriated to this use, 1707, April 4.

The "Middle part of the scenter squadron" received grants as follows: John Dutton and Ebenezer Farley had "all the land on the Northwest of the highway leading to Joseph Davis"; Nathaniel Rogers and Enoch Kidder received the angle on the south of the Rocky Hill Road; and north of that road ran the lots of Captain Danforth and his son Jonathan, Nathan Shed, Mr. Whiting, and Dr. Frost. Captain Danforth's lot was twenty-three and one-half acres, "on the north side of the Road downe Stoney Hill: it is bounded on the South by said Road about 206 pole, * east by fox hill about 30 pole, * west, by the Road leading to Joseph Davis', about 54 pole & a half."

One reason why Fox Hill was so long "common" may be found in this record,⁴ which is probably of date 1659: "The Mineral company are granted all such mines as shall be by them or their Assignes found in the sircomfrance of one hundred acors of land on fox hill, the south eande thereof, the Hill beinge devided; as also they have free Liberty for wood and Timber for theare use as there need shall require, to improove about the said mine untill it doe appear they doe find metell and no Longer." Traditions or suspicions of mineral wealth to be found in this locality have always existed; but it has never been developed and is probably a myth.

The "Pond Squadron" received "all the land upon Bare hill to Bacon's farme and between Nutten's pond and Oakes' farme," and included John Blanchard, Peter Bracket, John Chamberlain, Joseph, Nathan, Simon, and Thomas Crosby, Timothy Farley, Joseph Foster, James Frost, John Needham, Benjamin Parker, John and Zachariah Shed, Isaac Stearns, heirs of Thomas Stearns, and Joseph Tompson.

The "Squadron on the South of Oaks' farme" received the tract of six hundred acres between the "Winthrop farm," Concord, the Shawshin Farms and Winthrop's "great meadow," and the Oakes Farm (see p. 41 above). The first lot was granted to Lieut. Samuel Hill, including seventy-six acres bounded two hundred and forty rods on Concord and sixty-four rods on Winthrop Farm. The main street in Bedford was afterwards laid on the north line of this lot, and the "old line" of Concord is now to be traced sixty-four rods south of that street and parallel with it. The second lot of twenty-three acres was Fassett's, and became the property of Israel Putnam, as did the third, granted to Joseph Hill. The fourth lot was ninety-one acres, laid out to Jonathan Hill, next to Oakes Farm; and others following southerly were Nathaniel Hill, Joseph Farley, Daniel Hill, John Stearns, Henry Jests, John Parker, and Job Lane, the last reaching Mr. Page's farm.

Near East Street a range of lots was granted "from Serg^t. Richardson's to the north end of Serg^t. French's paster." Mr. French, living near the foot of "rocky hill," had that "pies of land between the three paths." Others who shared here were Jacob and John French, Ephraim Kidder, John Marshall, Nathaniel Patten, Thomas Richardson, Thomas Ross, and John Sheldon. John Wilson had a lot near his mill pond; John Farmer and Thomas Pollard had lots near Mr. Pollard's; Dr. John Kittredge had his two divisions beyond Strongwater Brook near the Shawshin; and John Sanders, John Dunkin, Timothy Farley, John Levistone, Samuel and Thomas Rogers, and Roger Toothaker had "their diuision between John Sanders his lott & Mr. Winthrop's farme."

The second division was made in the spring of 1708, and embraced lands in the Tewksbury part of the town.⁵ The largest section was along Andover line, and a rangeway was run parallel with that line and about eighty rods distant, dividing two rows of lots which were laid laid between Andover and the Great Swamp. East of this double row of lots apparently was another, extending from Andover line southerly to the Shawshin meadows; a third was between the latter and Strongwater Brook, and a fourth in the same vicinity. A fifth range was beyond the Shawshin, and a sixth between the ponds; and lots near Content Brook completed the circuit. Eighty-one proprietors shared, as did Colonel Foxcroft and Daniel Stone, of Cambridge.

The following list gives names, the "acre-rights" belonging to each, and the number of acres received, omitting fractions:—

The same proprietors received grant of the "great swamp" two years later;⁶ it was not divided, but sold in bulk not many years after.

The lands west of Concord River were divided in 1708. Here a rangeway ran parallel with the Chelmsford line, about half-a-mile distant, following also its westerly deflection. The familiar "rangeway road" follows nearly this old line, along which, right and left, ranges of lots were laid out. The first range, beginning at Broad meadow, was between Chelmsford line and the rangeway; the second range, southeast of the rangeway; the third, running from "treble cove" to the river and Winning's Pond, southeast of the first and second; the fourth, along the south line of Chelmsford, and designated as "west of the 1st and 2nd ranges"; the fifth, over against this, is called "the south range of the last two ranges."

The following list gives in order the grantee and the number of acres in each lot:—

A lot "for the Ministry" was laid out, 1708, November 13, consisting of forty-eight acres, "south of the road to longhill meadow"; and, when this division was completed, the town sold five hundred acres remaining in the remote southwest to Captain William Reed, of Cambridge. In February, 1713-14, a part of the "great swamp" was granted to the proprietors; and, in 1718, a list of proprietors and rights is given (Grants, vol. ii, p. 313) for "a draught of the lots on the land in the scenter of the town"; but no record is made of the lots, which must have been small. The same is true of "a second Diuition of scirts of land," in 1719, and of "an account of the small tract of land laid out in the centre of the town of Billerica, May 6, 1719," though the eighty-one proprietors are all named as above in each case.

In February, 1722-3, "the quadron south of Okes" received a grant of sixty-one acres between mill-meadow and the long pond, "to make up their first Divition," which is described above; and, in 1731, a section remaining of Fox Hill was disposed of. Description of the lots in this distribution may be found in the Records.

In all the early years no distinction is made between "town" and "proprietors" in the Records, but, as the non-proprietors multiplied, meetings of the proprietors are held and record is made separately, but still in the town books. In 1740, April 4, such a meeting voted "to make sale of all the slips of land that may be found in Billerica (or that was formerly Billerica), that belonged to the propriety." A year later the treasurer was granted fourteen shillings which were in the treasury, for his services in "dividing and paying out to each proprietor his proportion that came by the late sale of slips of propriety land." The sum was £48, or "two shillings to each acre right." A few other records not important are found; and the last one occurs, 1755, February 3, when report was made that there were £60 in bank, and the treasurer, Josiah Bowers, was instructed "to pay out to each proprietor two shillings and two pence, Old Tenor, upon an acre Right."

So ended almost exactly a century from its beginning the town's care for, and distribution of, its common lands. The questions involved in this charge had been many and delicate, and the wisdom of the fathers in dealing with them should be recognized. They were not lavish or parsimonious in the use of their land fund, but employed it in a proper and generous "encouragement" of such as bore the burden of laying the foundations, while they guarded it from any unjust appropriation by individuals. The record proves them true and honest men.

The two "Land-Grant" volumes of Records give minute details of the location and bounds of all these grants, grouped under the names of persons receiving them; and the alphabetical indexes make it easy to trace what every man had. Many highways and byways are also described, a large part of which have been long disused and forgotten; and the account given in chap. vi contains most which can be gathered of present interest on this subject. Those who have occasion can trace many details, and the material is here for an early map of the town, locating ranges, roads, and a large proportion of individual lots with substantial exactness. It is to be hoped that some son of the old town, with tact as surveyor and antiquarian, will yet find congenial employment in retracing the work of Jonathan Danforth and his son Samuel and constructing such a historic map of Ancient Billerica.

CHAPTER XII.

DISMEMBERMENT.

As the population increased in the more remote parts of the town, questions of division arose. Convenience of public worship was the controlling principle in shaping the early towns, and the same principle demanded new adjustments. But the demand was one which would naturally be unwelcome, and met with debate and opposition. After seventy-five years the process began, and did not cease until the old town was shorn of more than half of her ancient territory. The earliest movement towards this end was made, 1725, December 4, in "a petition of Jonathau Bowers, Samuel Hunt, and divers others, Dwellers on the Land called Wamesick Purchase and Winthrop's farm, w^{ch} lands ly adjacent to Billerica, between Pantucket and Chelmsford Line, praying, for reasons therein assigned, to be erected into a separate and distinct Town."¹ This petition was referred to the next session of the General Court, but there is no record of action upon it. It was probably abandoned, in consequence of the successful opposition of Chelmsford, which sought and secured the annexation of that larger part of the Wamesit Purchase, which was on the west side of Concord River, the whole Purchase being nearly coextensive with the present bounds of Lowell south of the Merrimack. The petition of Chelmsford for this annexation was granted, 1726, June 13.²

The friends of the earlier project did not, however, abandon their efforts, and were so far successful that the General Court, 1729, April 9,³ considered favorably a bill to establish Wameset Parish, with these bounds: "the line to begin at Concord River, between the lands of John Rogers, jr., and Enoch Kidder, and so on that line to the Way leading to Winthrop farm, so called": thence on a "strait line to the S. E. end of Prospect Hill, six score rods north of the House of James Kittredge, continuing the same line to Andover Line"; then following that line and Merrimack River to "Chelmsford Old Line, (which was the Bound between the said Town & Wamasset or Indian Purchase,) keeping said Line to Concord river, to a stake called Patucket or Wamasset; thence crossing Concord River to the bound first mentioned, which includes Wamasset or the Whole Indian Purchase." Final action was not taken at this session, and, in December, a proposal to revive the measure and incorporate Wamesit Precinct was favorably considered and acted upon by both Houses, "the former order of this Court referring to Wamasset Purchase Lands notwithstanding." This proviso seems intended to repeal the above act of annexation to Chelmsford: but, if so intended, the failure of the Wamesit Precinct was probably held to revive its force. The Precinct was required, within three years, to erect and finish a good and suitable house for public worship, "where the committee that have already viewed the said lands shall appoint," and "settle a learned orthodox minister of good conversation, and make Provision for his comfortable and honorable support." This was not done, and Wamesit failed to secure a place among the municipalities of the State.

BEDFORD. In the opposite direction the movement was more successful. The General Court received, 1728, June 18,⁴ "the petition of Andrew Watkins, John Wilkins, and John Wilson, and a considerable number of others, setting forth their great difficulties by reason of their distance from the meeting houses in Concord and Billerica, to which they belong, and that they have been necessitated to get a minister among them for the winter season, and therefore praying that they may be set off a separate Township." The petition was referred to the next session, with order of notification to the Towns of Billerica and Lexington. In July the Court, on farther petition, directed a committee, already sent to examine the lines of the proposed Wamesit Parish, to extend their labors and go over the proposed bounds of Bedford.

Billerica had heard of the proposal, and as early as May 14, 1728, voted, that they "will act no farther at this time on the petition of the southerly part of the town as to their being set off as a Township." The matter came up again, January 27, and the town chose a committee of eleven, who were "Impowered to manage the affair Referring to our brethren, the petitioners of the southward part of our Town, according to their best discretion, in agreeing with said petitioners at home concerning the line between the Town and them (if they can), but if not, then to draw up what they think proper by way of petition to the General Court and to choose two men out of said committee to manage s^d affair at said Court." This committee was not able to agree upon the line of division, and petitioned the Court, 1729, April 2, "praying that the new town, proposed to be erected in the County of Middlesex, to be called Bedford, and which is principally taken out of the town of Billerica, may not be extended according to the lines set forth for making said Town, but that some of the families may remain in the town of Billerica." The petition, however, was dismissed, and Bedford was incorporated, 1729, September 23. The line of separation began at the Two Brothers, on Concord River, either following the Winthrop Farm line or more probably diverging a little to the north of it, and thence extending nearly as at present to Woburn, now Burlington. It was changed, by consent of the two towns, in 1766, so as to transfer Edward Stearns and his farm to Bedford. The change in the line began at what was known as Page's Corner, passed between the land of Lieut. Isaac Stearns and Edward Stearns, came to the brook "about two pole southwest from the saw mill," and followed the brook to Concord River.

The claim that Bedford was principally taken out of Billerica has been overlooked, but is correct. The old line with Concord was parallel with the present Main Street in Bedford and sixty-four rods south of it, as shown above (p. 212). It is still easily traced, crossing the depot street at the Merriam place, nearly touching the railroad at the curve east of the station, and marked in the swamp beyond by a pair of tall pine trees. Its easterly point is shown in the record of a committee, February 11, 1699-1700. They "began at Concord southeast corner, which was a stake and stones about it, standing on the southeast of Shawshin River about forty poles from it." This point would be very near an ancient Page house, standing on the old road south of the main road to Lexington, and on the County Atlas of 1875, marked by the name of Brennan. Westward of the cedar swamp, where the marks could not be found, the committee ran, by mutual agreement, north fifty-three degrees west to Concord River. This line includes about three-fifths of Bedford. Of the families transferred no list is known to remain. Of the first church members Mr. Shattuck,⁵ with sufficient probability, credits these names to Billerica: Obed Abbott, Jonathan Bacon, Thomas Dinsmore, Samuel Fitch, Jacob Kendall, Benjamin Kidder, Job Lane, John Lane, Christopher Page, Nathaniel Page, and Israel Putnam; and Josiah Fassett should doubtless be added. Of other citizens there was John Wilson, and probably more than as many others, younger members of the same families and of other families. Of the division of the property of Billerica we have an approximate assurance. The Province tax assessed in 1729 amounted to £125, 5s., 8d., of which the part belonging to Bedford was £18, 12s., 3d. Samuel Fitch was the first town clerk, and Israel Putnam was the first constable of the town and the first deacon of the church.

TEWKSBURY. The success of the Bedford petition encouraged a renewal of the movement in the north part of the town, but Chelmsford held all west of the Concord River so firmly that the proposal took a turn farther eastward. The consciousness of separate interests appears frequently in references to the inhabitants of Winthrop Farm. In 1731 they prepared a draft and laid it before the town of a road which they desired, and received favorable answer. In 1733, May 13, they asked the town to "erect a meeting house in the center of the town, or so as to accommodate the northerly part of the town, upon the Town's cost, or set them off, so that they may maintain preaching among themselves." This the town was hardly ready to grant; but they had discovered that it was useless to oppose the separation, and a town meeting was held, December 19, at which the above request was renewed, or, as an alternative, that the town would "please to set them off, with two-thirds of the land lying between Andover and Billerica meeting house, from Wilmington line to Concord River, for a Township." Others desired that the organization should be a "Precinct, for their better accommodation in public worship." At this meeting, a committee, consisting of Mr. Samuel Danforth, Lieutenant Daniel Kittredge, Lieut. Joseph Hill, Mr. Samuel Hunt, Jr., and Lieut.

Joseph Kidder, was appointed to "view the land" and report, which they did, January 9, 1733-4, and the town voted, "that the northerly and northeasterly part of the Town, according to their petition, be set off as a Township, Granting them two-thirds of the land from Andover line to our meeting house, by a parallel line with said Andover line, extending from Concord River to Wilmington line, (if the inhabitants on the southeasterly side of Shawashin River be willing to join with them)."

This final condition called out a petition from Samuel Hunt and others to the General Court, "praying an absolute grant of this Court for their being made a Towne with these bounds," or the appointment of a committee to examine and report. The latter was done, with the result that Tewksbury was incorporated, 1734, December 23. The new town was taken wholly from Billerica, receiving in round numbers nine thousand acres of the twenty-five thousand which remained after the separation of Bedford, which had taken nearly or quite four thousand. The following list of families included in Tewksbury is imperfect, but will have interest:—

Brown, Joseph	Hunt, Peter	Manning, Ellphalet
Brown, William	Hunt, Samuel	Manning, Thomas
Farmer, Richard	Kidder, Ephraim	Marshall, Thomas
Farmer, Thomas	Kittredge, Daniel	Needham, John
French, John	Kittredge, Daniel, Jr.	Osgood, Stephen

Haseltine, Stephen	Kittredge, Thomas	Stickney, Abraham
Hunt, Jeremiah	Kittredge, William	Trull, Samuel
Hunt, John	Levestone, John	Whiting, John
Hunt, Joseph	Levestone, Seth

To these forty-seven names enough should probably be added to make the number sixty. They include all then on our list of the names Hall, Haseltine, Hunt, and Kittredge, a loss too serious not to be felt. The latter family had become so numerous in that part of the town exclusively, that it is not strange they have been credited with original settlement there. In fact, as noted elsewhere, their ancestor, John Kittredge, lived and died southeast of Bare Hill, in Billerica.

WILMINGTON received the next segment taken from Billerica. That town was incorporated, 1730, September 25, consisting of the north part of Woburn. The line on the west included "the farm" of Abraham Jaquith, which was partly in Billerica. The question arose, whether the Court intended to include this part which was in Billerica or to follow the old Woburn line: and, 1733, April 12, our selectmen petitioned the Court, praying "that Billerica may be continued in the uninterrupted possession of her ancient Bound." After receiving the answer of Wilmington, the question was put, whether, in the act, "it was intended by the words relating to Mr. Jaquith's farm to include the whole of that farm in Wilmington, and it passed in the affirmative." Some of the Billerica neighbors of Mr. Jaquith, on the east of Shawshin River, were also inclined to the new town; and, 1733, January 28, Wilmington voted, "that the Bildrica neighbors on y^e Est Side of Shawshin River be annexed to Wilmington Towne and Towneship, and to have full right in y^e meeting-house and to all other Towne Priviledges, if y^e great and Generall Cort see good to annex y^m to us."

In March, 1737-8, Billerica received a "Petition of several persons, on the southeasterly side of Shawshin River, to be dismissed from the Town of Billerica to be annexed to the second preicencnt in Woburn, in order to be Erected into a Township." On the question of granting this petition, "it passed unanimously in the negative." Two months later⁶ the General Court received the petition of John, Ebenezer, and Jacob Beard, Jonathan Baldwin, Peter Cornell, and Richard Hopkins, saying that their farms were convenient to Wilmington, and that they had attended worship in the meeting-house there since its erection, as it was two miles nearer than Billerica, and at some seasons they could not cross the Shawshin. They refer to the petition to be set off which Billerica had refused, and ask that their request be granted without reference back to Billerica. To this petition the House, in June, refused consent; but, in December, 1737, the Council gave a favorable hearing, and voted that the petitioners be annexed to Wilmington, provided they should pay their proportion of charges for the meeting-house which Billerica was building. The House concurred, and this section of six hundred acres was transferred to Wilmington.

CARLISLE. After these losses on the south, north, and east, it remained only to complete the circuit in the west; but, although the movement there began early, it was not consummated for more than a generation. At the same meeting, in March, 1737-8, when the town refused the Wilmington petition, it postponed one of similar tenor from "several persons on the westerly side of Concord River," who desired to be set off "to Joyn with part of the Towns of Concord and Chelmsford, to be erected into a Township." After debate, the town, May 11, "voted their willingness (when it was the Hon^d General Court's pleasure to erect them into a Township) to set them off by the bounds following, viz: to begin at the west side of Concord River thirty poles below the bridge, that is, over Concord River, at Hill's land boating place by the river; then running with a streight line to the southwest corner of Andrew Farmer's paster land, on the east side of treble cove path; from thence with a streight line to Chelmsford line at the north easterly of Jonathan Suow's land." But sixteen years passed before the General Court incorporated Carlisle,¹ 1754, April 19, as a district of Concord. In 1755 Billerica refused the consent once given to the separation, and the elements seem to have been inharmonious or the location of the meeting-house a knotty problem, for after struggling with their difficulties until 1757, Jannary, the people in Carlisle were granted a dissolution of the District. In their request for this they say,² that only a small majority originally favored the District, and that after many trials in various ways to come to some amicable agreement for buikling up the place all means fail, and they apprehend the utter impossibility of ever coming into any further agreement. Details of these "trials" may be seen in the "History of Concord." Some of the Concord people had previously sought to return to Concord, but a petition of Chelmsford and Billerica citizens had opposed them; and to this they now reply that Concord was willing to receive them again, and "those who lived most remote were most anxious to return."

The dissolution of the District did not bring peace, and a petition to the Court followed, 1757, June 1, bearing fifty-one signatures, of which Timothy Wilkins is the first.³ The following Billerica names occur: Abraham Duren, Widow Mary Duren, Ebenezer Hardy, Amos Kidder, John Kidder, Ebenezer Kittredge, Joseph Monroe,

Joshua Monroe, Nathan Monroe, George Nickles, Edward Spalding, Job Spalding, Leonard Spalding, Thomas Spalding.

They say that they, "By the Disposal of the Providence of that God who setteth Bounds to Men's Habitations, Live very Remote from the Meeting Houses of the Several Towns to which we Respectively Belong, By Reason whereof we and our Families are subject to Many Difficulties in the Discharge of the Duty Incumbent on us; And Especially the Great and Important Duty of Attending upon the Public Worship of God." For relief they ask to be erected into a Township or District, with such others as were included, with the "Limits following, that is to say, half the Lands with the Inhabitants on the same Between Concord Meeting House and Chelmsford Meeting House, in this manner, that There be made an East and West Line, in the Centre, between" these meeting-houses, and half the land on each side this line towards each meeting-house to be included. In the other direction a line was to be drawn between the two meeting-houses, and from this line the bounds were to be two and a quarter miles east and west. The petitioners had agreed that the meeting-house should be built at the place where these lines crossed, if a Convenient place; if Not, the Next nearest Convenient Place."

In March, 1760, the subject was again before the town, which voted to set off the inhabitants on the west side of Concord River, by the following line: "Beginning at Chelmsford Line, at a Stake and Stones near an old cellar; Running thence to a white oak Tree near the House of William Bonner, standing in the Land of Asa Spalding, Taking in s^d Boners; from thence Running in a straight Line to the southwest corner of W^m Shed's Land; Then Running a Strait Line to the Southwest of Benj^a Parker's Barn, and so on, Still on a Straight Line to Concord Line." But this permissive action would hardly be held as favorable, proposing to restrict the limits of Carlisle and not allow them to reach Concord River. The new meeting-house was begun at this time, but not finished for several years; and the town itself was only a name and an endeavor for some years longer. The subject was revived by petition to the General Court, 1772, June 1. The petitioners say that the desired bounds include about seventy-six families,¹⁰ and that they have erected a meeting-house. The bounds which they asked were to include "the house and land of Joshua Monroe; thence east, including house and land of Jonathan Swallow; still running East, including house and land of Amos Kidder; thence southeast, including house and land of Nathaniel Hutchinson; thence on a strait line to the Rangeway, where the country road crosses the same; thence East, by the South side of said Country road, to Concord River." But Carlisle's long struggle for life did not end in success until 1780, though Billerica again gave her consent, 1779, March 1, when a committee reported on the bounds desired: "Beginning at Chelmsford line, at the end of the wall between the land of Lt. Jonathan Spaulding & Land of Lt. Asa Spaulding, Running East forty Degrees South half-a-mile to the Rangeway; then running southeasterly to the northwest corner of the land of John Nickles, Jun.; then running between s^d Nickles' land & land of Asa Spaulding to the southeast corner of said Nickles' land; then running south thirty-one degrees west half-a-mile to a heap of stones in Capt. Daniel Stickney's land; then running southeasterly to the northeast corner of the land of Assachar Andrews; then Running between the s^d Andrews' land & land of Mr. Joseph Hill to Concord River. Voted, that Joseph Munroe, Joshua Munroe, Nathan Munroe, John Henry, John Henry 2nd, Josiah Heald, Aaron Munroe, James Nickles, Joseph Nickles, Jonas Robbins, Asa Spaulding Jun^r, with their land, and all included within that line, be set off as a Township, agreeable to the lines above mentioned."

This was the final action of Billerica upon the subject, which had recurred at intervals for forty-two years; and at last she seems to have given her youngest daughter a send-off with hearty good-will. The list of names above for some reason omits these: Timothy Crosby, Charles Hans, Ebenezer Hardy, Joseph Osgood, Levi Parker, Nathaniel Parker. Here ceased the process of dismemberment of Ancient Billerica. After the lapse of a century, it is fair to hope that it will not be resumed again.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE REVOLUTION.

In the contest through which the British Colonies acquired independence and became a nation Billerica bore her part. Her minute-men were at Lexington, and the first soldier who fell at Bunker Hill was Asa Pollard, one of her sons. As early as 1731, September 14, the underlying principle of the national contest found expression in a vote, "that it is our opinion that our Representative hold fast all our charter priviledges; and, in particular, that he give his voice in no suply of the Treasury, that deprives the house of their priviledg in passing accounts before payments." In 1766 "the late troubles" in connection with the Stamp Act came before the town, on the question of recompense to the sufferers, and "it passed in the affirmative," with a reference to the discretion of their representative.

December 21, 1768, a town meeting "took into Consideration the present Distresst and Impoverished State of this Province, That some effectual measures might be agreed upon to promote Industry, Oeconomy, & Manufactures, thereby to prevent the unnecessary Importation of European commodities, which threaten the Country with poverty & Ruin." Resolutions were unanimously passed, favoring home manufactures and disapproving the use of imported articles, of which a long list is named, beginning with loaf-sugar. A committee reported a form of subscription, pledging those who signed, to promote these objects. "The late regulations respecting Funerals" are specially emphasized, and the signers agree that they "will not use any Gloves but what are manufactured here, nor procure any new Garments upon such an occation but what shall be absolutely necessary"; to all which the patriots of Billerica it is quite certain generally agreed. This non-importation action became very general, and produced no little effect on the popular mind.

In September, 1768, resolutions from the Town of Boston were responded to; and, "taking into Consideration the Critical State of our public affairs, more especially the present Precarious situation of our Invaluable Rights and privileges, Civil and Religious," the town voted to choose "one person a committee for s^d Town, to meet at Boston at Faneuil hall, the 22^d inst., to act for them in a Convention, with such as may be sent to join them from the several towns in this province, in order that such measures may be consulted and advised as his majesty's service and the peace and safety of his majesty's subjects in the province may require." William Stickney, Esq., was chosen delegate to this convention. In this way the towns furnished the basis for effective discussion and action on the vital problems which stirred the colonies: and it is not strange that the English Ministry were alarmed and incensed at the activity of these miniature republics. They were in fact the palladium of our rising liberties.

The non-importation agreement naturally did not secure universal assent, and became inoperative, to the great joy of the Tories; and the Boston Massacre, by British soldiers, 1770, March 5, intensified the popular feeling. Royal instructions were resisted, as not having the force of law; and the action of Governor Hutchinson and the judges, in receiving their salary from the Crown and not from the Colonies, increased the sense of danger in the minds of the clear-headed patriots. In Boston, under the grand leadership of Samuel Adams, a committee was appointed, who reported to a town meeting, 1772, November 20, a paper which stated the rights of the Colonists, enumerated their violation, and called upon the towns for expressions of their judgment. It was the most radical exposition which had yet been made of rights and grievances, and the response was hearty.

In Billerica a town meeting was held, 1773, February 1, and there is little doubt that its action took shape under the hand of her able and patriotic minister, Henry Cummings. It stands thus:—

"The inhabitants, having deliberately Considered the Critical and alarming Situation the Colonies upon this Continent are Reduced to, by reason of the unconstitutional proceedings of the British Ministry and parliament of late years; & also the expediency of their, as well as the Inhabitants of every other town, Adopting some method to Communicate their Sentiments in Regard to the Disputes Subsisting between Great Britain and the Colonies, more especially on account of the late change in the American Department, that his Lordship the present Secretary of State for the said Department may be Convinced that a General Uneasiness prevails throughout the Country in Consequence of the late measures of the British Administration, notwithstanding any Reports to the Contrary. & may thereby be Influenced to use his best Interest and endeavours to procure a Removal of the causes thereof, and a Restoration of that peace & Harmony which so long Subsisted Between the Mother Country & her Colonies, & are undoubtedly Necessary to the political Happiness and welfare of each: Unanimously Voted and Resolved, "1. That the late Acts of Parliament for raising a Revenue in the Colonies; the establishing a Board of Commissioners with exorbitant powers; the granting of such extensive powers to the Court of Admiralty; the fixing a salary on the Governor of the province, and on the Justices of the Superior Courts, Independent of the Grants of the General Assembly; the extending to America the late Acts of parliament, Entitled an Act for better preserving his Majesty's Dock yards, &c; the Stationing fleets and armies to enforce a Compliance with Ministerial & parliamentary measures, together with many other things that might be mentioned, are Repugnant to the principles of the British Constitution. Subversive of their Charter Rights and privileges, & therefore Intolerable Grievances.

"2. That those Reports which Represent the Inhabitants in General, in the Country, as acquiescing in and ready to Comply with the late measures of Administration, are, as far as they Respect them, false and groundless.

"3. That they will heartily Concur with and faithfully assist their brethren in the common cause, throughout the Continent, in all prudent, legal, and Constitutional measures that shall be Adopted, to obtain a Redress of their present Grievances & a Restoration of their Just Rights and privileges; and will also at all times Unite with them in Zealously and Strenuously Asserting their Rights and Vigorously maintaining their freedom.

"4. That they would take this Occasion publicly to Declare their Cordial Affection & unfeigned loyalty to his present majesty George the 3^d, and to express their Sincere wish that the Union Between Great Britain and her Colonies may never be broken, but be preserved upon Such an Equitable foundation as Shall Conduce to the prosperity & Advantage of both. Wherefore,

"5. That they Commit in trust to our Representative in the General Court, to use Such measures as his prudence & wisdom Shall Dictate, to obtain in a Constitutional way a Redress of all Grievances.

"6. That the foregoing votes be Recorded in the town Book, and that the town Clerk transmit a Copy of the same to the Committee of Correspondence of the town of Boston."

Other towns took action of like tenor, and the effect was very great. The people were still loyal, but their rights were sacred and could not be sacrificed. If the two claims were not harmonized, there was no doubt which must yield; and from that spirit came independence and union.

Instead of conciliation, England pursued a policy of exasperation, by sending a commission to Rhode Island for the trial of persons concerned in the destruction of the schooner "Gaspee," and more offensively by the Tea Act, which involved the issue of taxation without representation. The patriots met the issue, 1773, December 16, by throwing the first cargo of tea into Boston Harbor, receiving the exulting approval of the people in all the Colonies. Then followed the Boston Port Bill, which extended the feeling of union; for the colonists espoused the cause of Boston, rather than see her suffer alone for an act which all approved.

The Boston Committee again appealed to other towns, and Billerica responded, 1774, June 6. Captain Enoch Kidder was moderator, and a committee consisting of Mr. Ebenezer Bridge, Capt. Josiah Bowers, and Capt. Ralph Hill, reported as follows:—

"The Inhabitants, having taken into Consideration the oppressive Measures, adopted and prosecuted of late, by the British Ministry and Parliament against the Colonies; and more especially having Considered the very alarming and vindictive act passed for the Blocking up of the harbour of Boston and putting a stop to the trade, unanimously came into the following Resolves:

"1. That a Right in the British Parliament to Tax his Majesty's American Subjects and to make laws Binding upon them in all Cases, without their Consent by Representatives, effectually deprives them of those Rights and Privileges which as men and as British Subjects they have a Just Claim to; and has no better foundation in Reason & Equity than the unlimited Prerogative, contended for by those arbitrary and misguided Princes, Charles the first and James the second, for the which the one lost his life and the other his Kingdom.

"2. That the Colonies are as Justifiable in opposing this unrighteous Claim of the British Parliament & all Acts Resulting from it, with all the attempts to Carry the same into execution, as the people of England were in opposing Charles & James, & Setting William, Prince of Orange, of ever Glorious Memory, upon the Throne in the Room of the latter, Since the measures of those Arbitrary Princes were not more Inconsistent with the Liberties of the People of England than the late measures of the British Parliament, in consequence of the above-mentioned claim, are with the Liberties of the People in America.

"3. That our Vigorous Contests for our Liberties, in Opposition to the said Claim of Parliament and the Oppressions with which we have been loaded in Consequence thereof, Cannot Consistently be Denominated Faction and Rebellion by any who are friendly to the Principles of the Revolution upon which his Present Majesty's Right to the Crown Depends; and therefore there is Reason to Suspect that those who call our manly Struggles for Liberty Opprobrious names are disaffected to the Hanoverian Succession, & aiming to Restore the Race of the Stuarts.

"4. That the act for Blocking up Boston Harbour is Hostile, Arbitrary & Cruel, and a Solemn Alarm, Sounded to all America, to Unite as one man and Stand more firm than ever in Defence of its Liberties, as it Discovers implacable Resentment in the British Ministry and a fixed Intention to treat these Colonies as Rebels, without even the formality of a trial, and to condemn & punish them unheard if they Do not yield a tame Submission to their Sovereign Mandates, which is a mode of proceeding against Real offenders Scarcely to be parrelled by any instance in the most arbitrary & tyrannical Reigns.

"3. That we consider the Blow Struck at Boston as aimed at the Province in General, and as a Prelude to something further, Equally Vindictive, yet in Store for this and the other Colonies, and as we have a fixed Reliance upon the Virtue of our Brethren in Boston to persevere in the noble Cause of Liberty, which they have hitherto maintained with Such laudable fortitude and Resolution, and, looking upon our Selves as Bound to animate and encourage them, we hereby promise & Declare our Readiness to Support and Strengthen them in the present conflict to the utmost of our power, and to joyn with them in any measures that shall be Judged expedient for our Common Safety and Defence, and for Defeating every vengeful machination of those that would punish us for Shewing our Selves men, and Dragoon us into Slavery because we Disdain patiently to take the Yoak upon our Necks at their Bidding.

"6. That, if the Respectable Body of Merchants throughout the Colonies might come into an agreement to import no British Goods and carry on no foreign trade whereby the merchants in England should Receive any Greate Benefit or Emolument, we humbly Conceive that a plan would be laid for the Speedy Removal of our Difficulties; and that we should have nothing to Do but to Sit Still and See the Salvation of our Country. We therefore Ardently Recommend this measure to them, promising that nothing shall be wanting upon our part for the Encouragement of the Same.

"Lastly. That, as it would be an Indellible Disgrace and a Violation of the Sacred Obligation we are under, to God. To our Country, to our Selves, and to Posterity, for us tamely and Pusillanimously to give up these invaluable Liberties, which our worthy Ancestors purchased for us at Such Vast Expense of Blood & Treasure, We are Determined to use our utmost efforts to maintain them, and not part with them at a Cheaper Rate than they were at first Obtained."

These resolutions were recorded, and transmitted to the "Committee of Correspondence in Boston." It was also voted to choose a Committee of Correspondence, which consisted of Mr. Ebenezer Bridge, Mr. Joshua Abbott, Capt. Josiah Bowers, Mr. Ralph Hill, Doctor Timothy Danforth, Mr. William Tompson, and Mr. Solomon Pollard.

On June 27, after considering two covenants, sent from Boston, "The Town, after Serious Deliberation upon the Difficulties & Distresses in which the Province, as well as the Colonies in General, are involved, at the present Day; also upon what Method will have the greatest tendency to Cause a Suspension of all Commercial Intercourse with the Island of Great Britain, (that being adjudged a Measure the most Salutary and Prudent that can be adopted, and most likely to effect the end proposed.) Voted, That the Inhabitants of this Town come into an Agreement, faithfully and Religiously to be observed, that they will not buy, purchase, or Consume, or suffer any person by, for, or under them, to purchase or Consume, in any way or manner whatsoever, any Goods, wares, or merchandise that shall arrive in America from Great Britain aforesaid, from and after the 31 Day of August next ensuing, for and until such time as they shall have Received the Result of the Continental Congress, upon whose wisdom, Prudence, and Integrity they Rely, & to whose Determination they shall Readily Conform. Voted, That if any person or persons shall Discover such a want of regard for the Interest and Good of the Country, as to import any kind of merchandise from Great Britain aforesaid, after the aforesaid 31 Day of August until the publication of the aforesaid result, they will not purchase of them any article of British goods, whatever, when, or howsoever imported. Voted, That a Covenant comprising the Spirit and intention of the foregoing Vote be forthwith Subscribed to by the Inhabitation of the Town," and a committee was appointed for the purpose.

September 12th, it was "Voted, that the Town Justifie the Committee of Correspondence for their Going to Concord, to join with the committees of the other towns of this County, to Consult upon measures proper to be taken at the present important day," and "that the town fully accept of the Resolves passed at said meeting in Concord." At the same time the town voted to choose two persons, "as a Committee to attend at the Provincial Congress, to be held at Concord on the second Tuesday in October." William Stickney, Esq., and Mr. Ebenezer Bridge were chosen. Already the First Continental Congress was in session at Philadelphia, and the active union of the Colonies was taking practical form. Two weeks later, Mr. Stickney was also elected Representative to the General Court, "to be held at Salem," October 5; and he was instructed "to pay no Regard to the King's new mandamus Council, as a Council, nor proceed to act with them"; and, "if the Governor Should Dissolve, prorogue, or adjourn the Court, that our Representative joine the House in forming themselves into a provincial Congress," and in the latter case, Mr. Bridge was also to attend it.

The progress of sentiment and action was rapid, as appears 6 December, 1774, when the town adopted a committee's report as follows: "When we Reflect on the alarming & Critical Scituation of our Publick affairs, it is with pleasure we behold the Remarkable Unanimity that prevails Through the whole Continent; we are Greatly pleased to find that the very Methods by which a Corrupt Ministry Sought to Divide the Colonies have Served Happily to unite them, and by every New Act of Oppression more and more to Strengthen the Union, So that the people Seem in Every Quarter, almost to a man, to be Engaged in the Common Cause. And we Earnestly Recommend it to this people, that since they have Endeavoured to Collect the United wisdom of the whole Continent, by their Selected Delegates, also the General Sence of the province, now assembled in Congress, that they would pay a proper Regard to their Resolves and Recommendations; it is with most painful Sensations we see the supineness and inattention to our Common Interest that seems to prevail in the minds of many people in this town; we are sorry that there is so much uneasiness in the minds of some People in Regard to settling the militia. We heartily wish that this people were more fully Convinced that good policy Consists much in learning the use of arms and the art of war; and the times may soon Demand their Service and the utmost Exertion of them. And Since it is submitted to us, as a committee, to Draw some plan for the Town to adopt in order to settle the militia, we Give it as our humble opinion that it would be best for the [men to be] called Together: both the Alarm List and the Training band; and in the first place to Resolve that they will abide the Vote of a Majority, and then proceed to the Choice of officers for each Company, and when the Company are so settled, that each Company meet to Gether as often as they can conveniently in order to learn the art military, and that the companies all attend & strictly obey the lawfull commands & orders of said officers. With Regard to the Company under the Command of Mr. Ebenezer Bridge, we can't but Justify upon the principles they set out, which, we take for Granted, was to Learn the Military Art, and we Rejoice to see that they, as well as the other Companies, have made such noble Improvements, and we hope that Company will act so much upon Honnor as not to make any Devisions in the other Companies. and if they go on to Enlist men, that they be Restricted to a Certain number." Monday, the twelfth, was assigned for the election of officers, and Mr. Bridge's company was limited to forty-eight privates. It was none too soon for the militia to be arming and training; as they were quickly needed. Volunteer movements, it appeared, had already been made before the action of the town.

Another vital step was taken when the constables were instructed, December 19, to pay the Province taxes to Henry Gardner, Esq., of Stowe, who had been appointed by the Provincial Congress Receiver-General. The State was to have the means in friendly hands to carry on its legitimate work. A Committee of Inspection was also chosen, consisting of Ebenezer Bridge, Joshua Abbot, Solomon Pollard, Joshua Davis, William Tompson, Timothy Dausforth, Reuben Kendall, John Parker, and Oliver Abbot, "to see that the Resolves of the Continental, and Provincial, Congress, he adhered to, so far as they Respect us." In January, 1775, William Stickney was chosen delegate to a Provincial Congress which met in Cambridge; and another important committee was thus provided for: "The Difficulty and Dangers of the present Day into which we are fallen, when the Course of Law & Justice is Interrupted, and the Danger of people being Disorderly & Tumultuous to the Disturbing the Common wealth and the peace of the Good people of the Town, taking the Advantage of the times; voted, to choose a Committee of twelve persons, as Conservators. Chose William Stickney, Esq., Mr. Ebenezer Bridge, Mr. Joshua Abbot, Captain Daniel Stickney, Captain Josiah Bowers, Mr. Joshua Davis, Lt. Asa Spanlding, Mr. Benj. Lewis, Mr. Henry Jests, Mr. Zebadiah Rogers, Captain Ralph Hill, & Mr. Paul Cooke, whose business it shall be, as much as in them lies, by all prudent methods, to prevent & Discountenance all Disorders, Mobs, & Tumultuous Assemblys in the s^d Town, and to heal all Diferances by persuading all Contending persons to be at peace, or to leave their Differences to men to settle for them; and to Encourage people as much as possible to lead Quiete & peacable lives in all Godliness & honesty. And where persons prove obstinate and erreclaimable, to bring such matters before the town for their Consideration & Determination. Voted, that seven of s^d Committee be a Corum." These good men intended to prove and did prove that they could guard the public peace in times of transition and danger. It is also evident that Dr. Cumings did not always write or criticize their public utterances. He would have secured better grammatical coherence; but what the fathers meant to say is usually clear.

At the town meeting in March, it was voted to raise a company of fifty minute-men, who should meet weekly for training, and be paid one shilling for every half-days' training, except when this day was the same as the general training-day. The officers, appointed by a committee of the town, were Captain Ebenezer Bridge, Lieuts. Jonathan Stickney and James Lewis; and the minute-men were to pass muster before Colonel Tompson, Captain Pollard, and Captain Farmer. Another committee was "to perfect the alarm List; the Rule to go by is, all above the age of fifty-five."

A few days later occurred an incident in Boston which has made the name of a young man from Billerica famous in the history of these days, and produced much effect upon the minds of the patriots. Thomas Ditson, Jun., being in Boston, was seized by the British troops, March 8, on the pretence that he was urging a soldier to desert; without any examination kept a prisoner until the next day, when he was stripped, tarred, and feathered, and dragged through the principal streets on a truck, attended by soldiers of the Forty-Seventh Regiment, led by Colonel Nesbit, to the music of Yankee Doodle, the original words of which, it is said, were then first used. The outrage produced great indignation, and the selectmen of Boston sent a letter reporting the case to the selectmen of Billerica, who presented a remonstrance to General Gage, and submitted the case to a town meeting, on March 20. The town thanked them "for the wise and prudent measures" they had taken, expressed its dissatisfaction with the reply of General Gage, and instructed them to carry the case to the Provincial Congress.

Debates and events were becoming very serious, and the drilling of train-bands and minute-men foreshadowed too well the work before them. The stern resolve of the patriots expressed itself in a vote, the same day, "to look up the old Bayonets"; and, April 14, four days before the Lexington and Concord alarm, they voted to "furnish the minute-men with Bayonets and Cartridge Boxes." It was also voted, that "as every method ought to be pursued which may tend to promote the arts & manufactures of the Country, especially that of wool, The Inhabitants of this town Shall not Kill any lambs for the markett till after the first Day of August next; and also that no one ought to sell any to any Butcher or Petty Chapman, at any time whatever." "Voted, That the Inhabitants of this Town will, on the Death of a friend or Relative, Conform to the 8th article of the American Association, & go into no further mourning than such as is therein Recommended, and will entirely Discontinue the Giving of any Gloves whatever at Funerals."

To prevent the troops in Boston from being supplied with materials for hostile operations, the town voted not to permit any team "to Load in, or, after loaded, to pass through, the Town, with Timber, Boards, Spars, Pickets, Tent-poles, Canvas, Brick, Iron, Waggon, Carts, Carriages, Intrenching Tools, Oats," etc., without satisfactory certificate from the Committee of Correspondence, as to load, destination, and abode. Meanwhile, General Gage was preparing for an expedition to seize the military stores which had been gathered at Concord, with little suspicion what preparation the Provincials had made, and how promptly they would deal with such a movement. It was about eleven o'clock on the night of April 18th, that Paul Revere and William Dawes set out on their ride to give the alarm and summon the minute-men to resist the advance of the British troops. The story of that day has been well told, and can not be here repeated. It was certainly to Billerica one of the most exciting and important days in her history. The midnight riders spreading the alarm were likely to come by the Woburn, Lexington, and Bedford roads, and probably reached Billerica by two o'clock. The Ditsons on the Woburn Road would be among the first to receive the summons, and very ready to respond to it after their recent experience. Colonel Thompson and Lieutenant Stickney, living in the southeast part of the village, would be promptly notified; and Ebenezer Bridge, who was captain of the minute-men, and lived at the Farmer place and nearly opposite Colonel Stickney's. There was hurrying to and fro, we may be sure, and in the early dawn, when the first encounter took place at Lexington, few families, if any, had not heard the call to arms. Muskets and accoutrements were hastily made ready and donned; the alarm-list no doubt turned out as well as the train-band and the minute-men; and gathering at the Common for muster and orders, they hurried off towards Concord. Meanwhile, the British had pushed on to Concord, and after the fight there found reason for hurrying back towards Boston. They had not gone far when, at Merriam's Corner, the Billerica troops came and joined in the assault and pursuit of the retreating foe. Mr. Frothingham states that they came under the command of Colonel William Thompson, a fact which suggests that the force was not limited to the company of minute-men under Captain Bridge, and it is not likely that the veterans would be slow to turn out at such a call. Some Billerica men were naturally in the Bedford company and arrived earlier, and when Capt. Jonathan Wilson was killed, the command devolved upon his Billerica lieutenant, Edward Stearns. Nathaniel Wyman of the same company was killed, who was probably from Billerica, although his name is also credited to Lexington. No other man from this town was killed, but John Nickles and Timothy Blanchard were wounded.

The day of Lexington and Concord decided the issue of war; and there followed a rapid mustering of Provincial forces. Billerica furnished her share of men, as appears from this action, May 15: "Chose Messurs Samuel Kiddler & Isaac Foster as a Comt^{rs} to provide Blanketts for those persons in this town that have Inlisted into the provincial service." Another vote was, "that the Commanding officer of the Caddlett Company make Returne to the field Officers, the State of the Company, as the other Militia Captains do, and also that they be Ready on any Ocation to take their part in any Burthen, according to their number, with the other Companys." A committee was also chosen "to provide straw for the army at Cambridge." Deacon Hill was excused from the Committee of Correspondence, and Captain Daniel Stickney and Lieut. John Parker were added to that important committee. Two weeks later, the town voted, that the article in the warrant "Respecting the Dissolution of the Caddett Company be put over to the fall meeting"; but there is no record of farther action. Probably this was a company of boys, too young for service and too patriotic to neglect preparation for future duty.

A committee was chosen, June 26, "to purchase 60 hogsheds of salt & ten hogsheds of Mollasses, for a town Stock." This salt was bought at Beverly, and furnishes many items among the town charges for the year. Other items are "a pair of shoes for William Britton," "an old coat and a pair of stockings" for the same soldier, and "sundries Delivered to Mary Britton," no doubt his wife. "To Jacob French for fixing 5 Bayonets to their Guns, 9^s, 5, 2," and "to W^m Baldwin for making 7 Cataridge Boxes for the minute-men, 1, 8, 0"; "a pair of shoes for Robert Angier, 6^s, 0"; "a Jaccoat for W^m Britton, 2^s, 0"; "3 cords of wood for Mary Britton, 1, 0, 0."

The siege of Boston occasioned the departure of many of its patriotic inhabitants, who sought refuge in the surrounding towns; and at the March meeting in 1776 a committee was appointed "to take care of and provide for the Donation persons that came from the towns of Boston and Charlestown." The Committee of Correspondence was reconstructed, William Stickney, Esq., taking the place of Colonel Bridge, who was absent in the army. Other members were "Joshua Abbot, Col. W^m. Thompson, Capt. Daniel Stickney, Capt. Josiah Bowers, Dr. Timothy Danforth, Dea. Joshua Davis, Lt. John Parker, Mr. Henry Jeffs, Mr. Isaac Foster, and Mr. Benjⁿ. Lewis." Their duty is defined, "to serve as a Committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety, whose Business shall be to Communicate with Dispatch any matters of importance to the publick that may come to their Knowledge to the Committees of the same Denomination of any other town, County, or Colony, which it may particularly concern, or to the General Assembly of this Colony, or in their Recess to the Council; and also to Inspect whether there [are] any Inhabitants of or Residents in their Respective towns who violate the association of the Continental Congress, or any other the Resolves, Directions, or Recommendations of said Congress, or Acts and Resolves of the General Court & preceding Congresses of this Colony, Respecting the present Struggles with Great Britton. And, if any such are found, that they proceed with them in Such manner as the Resolves of the Continental Congress or the laws or Resolves of this Colony Do or shall Direct; That they make known to the General Court or to the Council all Gross Breaches of trust in any officers or servants of this Colony that may come under their observation; That they use their utmost influence to promote peace and harmony in their Respective towns." These were extensive powers and duties, and the exercise of them was by no means nominal. Very much was due to the vigilance and discretion with which these committees discharged their various and delicate functions.

At a meeting, May 23, the town voted "to send another Representative this year," and chose Colonel Thompson. It then adds a resolution which showed the progress of public sentiment after a year in the school of war, and that they were finding out that loyalty to Great Britain could not much longer be made consistent with the defence of their rights. "The Question was put whether the Town will, in Conformity to a Resolve of the Hon^{ble} the House of Representatives of this Colony, advise our Representatives that, if the Hon^{ble} Congress Should for the Safety of the Colonies Declare them Independent of Great Britain, they the said Inhabitants will engage with their lives & fortunes to Support them, and it passed unanimously in the affirmative." They were patriotic men who were ready for this action. With such leaders as Dr. Cumings and William Stickney, we may be sure it was not taken without intelligent consideration of its significance and what it was likely to cost them.

The battle of Bunker Hill was fought on June 17, and in that battle the company from Billerica served in the redoubt under Prescott. Its former captain was now Colonel Bridge, and Lieut. Jonathan Stickney was in command. Asa Pollard, whose home was near the "fordway," was the first soldier killed, and was buried on the field. Samuel Hill was also killed, and probably Benjamin Faste, who was reported as dead soon after; and Timothy Toothaker died a few days later of wounds received. Colonel Bridge was wounded on the head and neck by a sword cut, and was one of the last to retreat. In the severe scrutiny which followed, he did not escape charges of misconduct, in seeking too cautiously the cover of the redoubt. He was tried, but acquitted on the ground of indisposition of body.¹

It is beyond the proper range of a local history to attempt to follow the current of national affairs; and the great Declaration, with the important events following, can only be suggested as occurring at this point. The town voted, October 7, to open the salt store, selling the salt for five shillings per bushel, not more than a bushel and a half to each family, and no credit was to be given. At the same time it was voted, "that the Rev. Henry Cumings, Joshua Abbot, Dr. Tim^o. Danforth, Capt. Josiah Bowers, & Col. Tompson, be a Committee to Draw up some proper vote to present to the town * relative to a hand bill sent to the town." This committee reported, October 14, as follows:—

"The town of Billerica being assembled this day, on adjournment of a legal meeting, warned in Compliance with a Recommendation from the house of Representatives, in order for the Freemen of said town to express their mind Relative to the erecting some form of Government in this State, after Deliberately Discussing the matter, came into the following votes:

"1. That the Tyranny of Greate Brittain, (which has compelled the United provinces of America to Dissolve their Connection with her,) having broken up the Constitution of this province, it has now become necessary for the prevention of anarchy, for the preservation of internal peace & good order, and for the mutual Security of the Inhabitants in the enjoyment of their property and just Rights, that some form of Government be speedily erected; and therefore,

..2. That it be Submitted to the present house of Representatives, in conjunction with the Council, to Draw up such a plan of Government as they in their wisdom shall judge best adapted to promote the lasting welfare and happiness of this State. Depending on it that before such plan of Government be ratified & established by an act of the Court, it be made publick, for the inspection of the people, that they also may have an opportunity to judge of it, and to propose such alterations as they may think best to be made. If it should appear in any Respect Disagreeable to them. voted, the above Report be accepted."

In 1777, May, the town instructed its representative to favor the course thus indicated, which was adopted by the Court, and a Constitution was submitted to the people; but it did not please them and was rejected. Two years later a convention was called for the purpose of framing a Constitution, to which Billerica sent her pastor, Rev. Dr. Cumings. The result of its deliberations was approved by the people, 1780, June 5th, the first Constitution of Massachusetts. Billerica desired an alteration of a clause, but consented to it without conditions. Until this was adopted, the towns acted on a theory of their semi-independence; for instance, "the Question was put whether the town will heartily Submitt to the Reagulating bill, & it passed in the affirmative."

As the war went on, and the calls for troops were repeated, the people found it more difficult to respond. The country, in fact, was poor, and the tax of maintaining the contest in both men and money was severe. 1777, March 10, the town chose "a committee of five persons to Indent with persons to Inlist into the Continental service," consisting of Capt. Solomon Pollard, Capt. Edward Farmer, Capt. Jonathan Stickney, Lieut. Jacob Richardson, and Oliver Crosby; and they were allowed fourteen days to procure men and make report. On the 24th, the town continued the committee, adding Lieut. Elijah Danforth, and voted an additional bounty of £24 to "such persons as will now Inlist into the Continental Army." Probably forty of the men who are numbered (3) on the ensuing list of soldiers responded to this call, a number which would demand nearly £1000 to fulfil this stipulation. A committee of nine was chosen, "to form some plan how the money shall be raised for the additional bounty." Their report was:—

"First. That every man according to his Interest shall be taxed to pay the additional bounty to hire men to Engage in the Continental Army.

2^{ly}. That each person that have lately arriven to the age of sixteen years be Exempted from any part of the charges that hath already arisen by the late levy of men. 3^{ly}. That each Lanlord pay this tax upon the farmes Rented. 4^{ly}. That those that engaged in the service at Cambridge for eight months. in the year 1775, be allowed credit for each man, £3, 0. 0. 5^{ly}. That those that served six weeks be allowed credit for each man. 1. 0. 0. 6^{ly}. Those that served Two months have credit each man, 1, 4. 0. 7^{ly}. Those that served in the Continental army in 1776 without hire have credit each man. 18, 0. 0. 8^{ly}. Those that went to Ticonderogue without hire have Credit each man, 12, 0. 0. 9^{ly}. Those that went to the lines without hire have credit each man, 2, 0. 0. 10^{ly}. Those that went to New York 2 months without hire have credit each, 6, 0. 0. 11^{ly}. Those that went to New York 3 months without hire have credit each, 12, 0. 0. Those men that have advanced money to hire men into the army have credit for what money they paid."

A list of "what each person hath done in the War" was reported, but unfortunately not recorded; it would be very interesting. The town accepted the report, "save the 2^d article," and voted to raise £900, as a "tax to be levied on Interest"; also, that the services of apprentices and sons under age be set to their masters and fathers. But the tax on interest was objected to, and reconsidered at the next meeting, when the town voted, that it be raised "on polls and estate in the usual way"; and that apprentices and minors should receive one-half of the credit for their services. The latter item was still not satisfactory, and in May the committee was instructed "to Drop the Credit that was to be set to Minors as to the Back Charges," but "to keep an account of s^d Credit for their Benefit in some futer time." The pecuniary embarrassments became more and more serious as the Continental currency depreciated; and persons with fixed incomes suffered most. This appears in a vote, 1777, December 1, "that the selectmen make Mr. Jonathan Kidder, our Schoolmaster, an addiquate reward for his services in some measure, as things have risen." The extent of this inflation is illustrated in the salary of Dr. Cunnings. This was £80. But for the year ending in July, 1779, he received £380; for the next half-year, £830; and for the year 1781, £9000. In other words, this "Continental currency" had fallen to less than one per cent. of its face value. It had become too attenuated to be reclaimed, and the unfortunate holders of it, soldiers as well as citizens, suffered greatly in its utter loss. In 1782 the taxes were raised in specie, and the pastor's salary was again £80.

But the town was not unmindful of its patriotic soldiers, and cared for their families in cases of need. Such aid is recorded, in 1777, for the wives of Abijah and Josiah Beard, William Britton, William Carrier, Jesse Danforth, John Ekers, and Roger Toothaker. In giving this aid, Mrs. Carrier had seventy-three quarts of milk, at ninepence a quart; five months' house-rent for £3; one cord of wood for £1, 10s.; and a bushel and a half of Indian meal for the same. In 1778 the selectmen are instructed "to take care & provide for the families of the soldiers that are out in the Continental army, according to their Several Circumstances, and keep accounts thereof." The treasurer is also instructed "to borrow money to pay for the Cloathing, provided by the Selectmen for our Soldiers in the Continental Army."

In 1778 the proposals for the Confederation came before the town, January 23; and they say, "although they apprehend some things therein Contained are no so agreeable, yet considering the vast Importance of the whole for the well being & Happiness of the united States of America, Voted & agreed to the whole of s^d Confederation, and that Col. W^m. Tompson, our Representative, he and he is hereby Instructed to Joyn with the honorable house of Representatives in any measures they Judge best, in order to forward the same to Congress."

Another call for recruits, in 1778, was met by the town's offer of £30 to such able-bodied men "as shall Enlist themselves to Joyn Gen. Washington's army for the space of nine months, except sooner Discharged, in order to fill up the Continentall army"; and £60 to such persons "as shall Enlist themselves as militia men to go to the North River for eight months." The selectmen were empowered to borrow money for this purpose, and, at a later meeting, £10 were added in each case to these offers. In October, 1778, we have a glimpse of the hopes which cheered them during these trying years in the report of a committee, appointed to estimate the back services in the war, who say: "That, considering the many services done since our appointment and the Difficulty of estimating them Separately, and the hopeful prospect that this summer's campaign will put a finall end to services of this sort, it is our oppinion that one Committee Consider the whole." Whereupon the town appointed a committee of seven, "to estimate the back services since they went to Ticonderogue, since the war rate was made in 1777, having Reference to the former settlement Respecting some grievances that some persons sustained in said settlement, according to their Discretion." This committee made a report in December, which was recommitted for revision and adopted, 1779, January 4. as follows:—

May, 1777.	Two months to Rhode Island, set at	£2 0 0
July, 1777.	Six months to Rhode Island.	6 0 0
August, 1777.	Three months and a half to Bennington,	13 4 0
October, 1777.	Forty-one days to Saratoge,	9 10 0
February, 1778.	Three months to Boston,	9 10 0
April, 1778.	Three months to Cambridge,	9 10 0
July, 1778.	To Rhode Island; all hired men.
July, 1778.	Six Months to the Hill,	16 10 0
August, 1778.	Six Weeks to Rhode Island,	11 0 0
September, 1778.	Three months to Boston,	9 10 0"

If we had the names of the men employed in these various services, the record would have greater interest; but it is safe to assume that the town was represented in all; and there was work for the committee again appointed, May 13, consisting of Jonathan Hill, Ebenezer Richardson, Jonathan Pollard, Samuel Rogers, Josiah Crosby, Joshua Davis, Jacob Manning, Thomas Allen, and Jonas French, "to provide for the families of those persons that are Gone out of this town into the Continental Army." At the same meeting, "the Question was put whether the town at this time will have a new Constitution or form of Government, and it passed in the Negative by forty Votes."

More men were needed in 1779, and, June 22, a committee was appointed to procure the town's quota, "to go into the Continental army and to Rhode Island." July 5, a tax was levied, of "thirteen thousand dollars," for the purpose of paying and securing the needed men; the first use of the word "dollar" in the Records. As prices rose and the value of the currency became more doubtful, men had reasonable fears as to enlisting and trusting promises of future payments. A State Convention was held, and resolutions were passed "for the Retreiving the Credit of our Currency," which Billerica adopted, also appointing delegates to a County Convention, August 5. at Concord, "to regulate the prices of produce and manufactures," whose proceedings were also adopted; and a committee of fifteen was "chosen of Observation to see that the Resolves and Recommendations of the State and County Convention be punctually complied with." But the task laid upon them was much more hopeless than that of finding men whose patriotism would respond to the call of Washington; and although a week later the Selectmen and Committee of Correspondence were united with this one, and "Impowered and directed in the most Vigorous Manner to see that there be no breaking over or evading the doings of the said Convention, and that the breakers thereof be proceeded against according to their offences; and more especially to see that there be no bartering in Gold and Silver, to the Injury of our paper Currency." prices continued to rise, the regulations could not be enforced, and the end came in the utter worthlessness of the paper currency they strove so resolutely to sustain. 1780, June 14, another committee was appointed, "to procure our quota of men now called for, to join the Continental army"; and, July 6, the town voted, that "the sum of £31,710 be granted as a tax to be levied upon polls and estates, in the usual manner, for hiring nineteen militia to serve three months in the army; also, to hire four men to join the Continental army for six months." Some of the men who, in 1777, had enlisted "for three years or the war," had returned, and the town voted that they be rated for their poll tax. Again, 1781, January 1, a committee was appointed, "to procure our quota of men * upon the most easy terms they can." A tax of £27,000 was levied, "to procure our Quota of Beef for Supplies for the army." In July another tax was raised for the same purpose, but the terms of the tax were changed to £180 "in Specie." The poor Continental currency could be used no longer, and they return to the specie standard. Another and apparently the last call for men appears, July 15; and a tax of £250 in specie is levied, "to pay the hire of the men now called for." Lieut. Isaac Barron was to be allowed "equal hire with a Private." Yorktown closed the campaign of 1781, and the long and exhausting contest was practically ended.

The numerals above refer to various services, which are imperfectly outlined as follows:—

(1.) Service in 1775, including the company of minute-men and all known to have been at Lexington, and in the army at Cambridge.²

² Massachusetts Archives. Vols.: Lexington Alarm, XII, 16 and 73, and XVI, 21.—Town Records. Vol. IV, October, 1775.

(2.) Service in 1776, including the battle of Bunker Hill and the subsequent siege of Boston.³ Seventy-five of these men served eight months, and claimed a "coat," promised for that service.

(3.) Service in 1777. Thirty-two men under Captain Edward Farmer, who marched "to reinforce the Northern Army," which was fighting Burgoyne at Bennington and Saratoga, are included above. Colonel Bridge also marched with a detachment, on the "Bennington alarm"; went ninety miles, and was dismissed by General Lincoln. No roll of his men is found.⁴

(4.) Men who enlisted in 1777, "for three years or the war," in the Continental Army.⁵

(5.) In service, 1778, in Rhode Island; on Bunker Hill from February to May, and elsewhere.⁶

(6.) Service in 1779, including a detachment "to join the Continental army and march to Claverick," and recruits.⁷

(7.) Service in 1780, recruits, and a detachment of sixteen men, who "marched 220 miles and served four, five, and six months."⁸

(8.) Men in service, 1781, "for 3 years or the war."⁹

(9.) Seven men on board the privateer "Essex," in 1780.¹⁰

This list of Revolutionary soldiers is necessarily imperfect. Many of the rolls are lost; and it would take months of labor to go over the mass which is preserved, but imperfectly indexed, with such care that no name from any town would be likely to escape. The town had representatives in various directions where no rolls of such service are found. If we had these lost records, they would probably add fifty and perhaps one hundred to the three hundred and seventeen enumerated above. When we remember that the census of 1776 gave the town a population of 1500, we can see in part to what extent these patriotic fathers gave service and life, to found the nation. Their children should never forget at what a price they gained freedom for themselves and coming generations.

This chapter may fitly close with the tax list for 1776, with such memoranda appended as, in the absence of a map, will help those who are interested to locate most of these patriotic tax-payers, and revive the memory of the town as it was one hundred years ago.

The Shawshin District is east of the river, between the Woburn and Wilmington roads. CHAPTER XIV.

EDUCATION.

THE founders of New England were careful and prompt to provide for the education of all the children. As early as 1642 a law was enacted, enjoining the selectmen to "have a vigilant eye over their brethren and neighbors, to see first that none of them shall suffer so much barbarism in any of their families as not to endeavor to teach, by themselves or others, their children and apprentices so much learning as may enable them perfectly to read the English tongue." The penalty was twenty shillings for each neglect. The same act required that parents "give religious instruction to their children and apprentices, and bring them up in some honest, lawful calling, labor, or employment, either in husbandry or some other trade profitable for themselves and the commonwealth, if they will not or can not train them up in learning to fit them for higher employments." In 1647 a free school was made compulsory. If there were fifty householders, the town must appoint a teacher, and towns of one hundred householders must have a grammar school of such grade that youth "may be fitted for the university."

Billerica could not at once meet this requirement. But, "1, 5, 61. The Townsmen doe agree y^t Lieftenent Will French and Ralph Hill, senior, doe take care and [examine] the scull families in or Towne, whethr there children and servants are Taught in the precepts of religion, in reding and Lerninge there Catechism." How this duty was discharged is suggested in the record by the selectmen: "10, 9^m, 68. they apoint y^e next seconday to go y^e rounds to examine y^e teaching of children & youth, acording to law." If we could accompany these selectmen on that annual examination, we should learn something of education under difficulties: and might gain respect for the fathers, with appreciation of the fact of progress in two centuries.

Mr. Whiting's name first appears in this record, "19 March, 74-5. In reference to the catechising of y^e youth of y^e towne and examining them concerning their reading, a duty imposed on y^e select^m by y^e Hon^d Court. to take care that children and youth be instructed in both. The selectmen doe order, that all children and youth, single psons from eight years old upward, their parents and masters shall send such their children and servants to y^e Reverend Mr. Samuel Whiting, at such times as shall be afterward appointed by him, to be examined of both, as hoping this might be a good expedient for y^e encouragement of all superiours and youth."

We may well believe that such an examination, by the pastor, would be no small incentive to study on the part of the "youth" who must appear before him. But many of the parents could give but little instruction, and another step in advance greatly needed was taken when, "19, 11^m, 79, Ens. Tompson was chosen school-master, to teach such to read and to write as shall come to him to learn." Joseph Tompson, Billerica's first school-master, was the son of a minister, and, with the possible exception of Danforth, was the best educated man in town. He continued to be the school-master for more than thirty years. Of the studies pursued we are not informed, nor of the "times and seasons"; but the culture of the town owes much, we may be sure, to Ensign Tompson's school, and we may remember with interest the place to which the children of two hundred years ago wended their way for the instruction he had to give them. His house was in the southeast part of the village, at the end of the lane where now Mr. Tufts lives. Whether the services of Mr. Tompson were gratuitous or he had a tuition fee does not appear; but no item is found among the town charges until 1710, when he received one pound as school-master, and another the next year.

About the same time the question of a new school-master was raised. We may hope that the reason was not because Captain Tompson found occasion in his age to charge something for his services. Perhaps after thirty years his methods had become too old-fashioned, and a younger man was called for. In the autumn of 1709, one object of a town meeting was "to incoridg a schoole-master for Reading and Writing"; and, judging from the records of Mr. Needham, the new town clerk, there was need of a new school-master. But four years later a master was still needed, and, November 16, 1713, "it was voted, that the selectmen shail mak yous of their best desecration in providing a scoull-master for a quarter of a yeare": and, January 18, the selectmen were instructed "to se out for a schoolmaster against March Court, and to provide a house." Towns were frequently complained of for neglect to provide good schools, and the last record implies that Billerica had been thus charged, as it had been at least once before, in 1692, "for want of a schole." Probably Mr. Thompson's labors were occasionally suspended and resumed. The same presentment was made in 1718, and answered by Captain Whiting, at Charlestown.

The first appearance of a successor to Mr. Thompson is in 1715, when Mr. Shattuck is paid £8, 13s., and the town voted, that he "shall keep the school another half-year." In 1716, Mr. Isaac Branch was employed, receiving £10 for two quarters and £22 for the year 1717. The germ of the system of school districts then appears: "The Town Impowered the selectmen to order & appoint in what parts of the town the school shall be kept & how long at a place." In November, 1718, the town votes "to hire our present schoolmaster for another quarter, Provided he move to the several Quarters of the town"; also, "to give but four shillings p. week for the schoolmaster's board for the future." This master was John Graham, and he boarded with Mr. Ruggles. December 29, 1718, it was voted, that "for about five months the school should be moved to accommodate the outscirts of the Town, and the Rest of the year to be kept in the middle of the town"; and a committee of five was to order the places where it should be kept. It was also voted "to give Mr. Grimes, our present schoolmaster, forty pounds for one year, Provided that he board himself and keep a moving school." In March, the selectmen gave leave to John Hartwell's wife "to keep a school to Instruct children to Read." Mr. Joseph Houston was master for three or four years from 1719, and was succeeded by Benjamin Ruggles, the pastor's brother. Then for a short time the master was Jonathan Fry, of Andover, the ill-fated young chaplain of Lovewell's expedition. The next year the town paid Mr. William Smith for services, and also Nicholas Bowes, the future pastor of Bedford. Then comes Mr. Isaac Abbott, who was master for six years, who was also employed to copy the early volume of records of "Births, Marriages, and Deaths," in a new book. Benjamin Bowers follows, 1736-39; Jonathan Stedman, 1739; Joseph Manning, 1740; Robert Cutler, 1741-45, who found his wife here, and became pastor in Epping, New Hampshire; and John Chandler, in 1746, who was thus introduced to his future pastorate here. Joseph Bean succeeded, and then came Jonathan Kidder, in 1758, who served the town for a generation, and whose fame lingers still among the traditions of our older people.

A record, May, 1722, tells us something of the early methods: "It was agreed that Mr. Houston shall make up three months in the scenter of the town, and then shall go one month among the Hunts." And, in June, "it was agreed that Mr. Houston shall have liberty for a month or two, if he Pleas, after his month is out at Mr. Hunt's; and then at his Return shall go one month to the west side of Concord River; and then next one month to John Stearns; the next one month to Jonathan Bacon's; then at Mr. Walker's three weeks; then next at the Kittridge's one month; then three weeks at Dr. Toothaker's; then to be three months in the scenter of the Town, which will compleat his year."

The sections of the town where schools were kept were at first and long called squadrons; and a division of the school money to the squadrons began to be made about 1760, with attending questions and jealousy as to the division. A school-house is mentioned in 1766, but had perhaps been built earlier; as the town in 1725 voted grants of land to the squadrons for school-houses, to be located by the selectmen. In 1742 a committee reported. that the school be kept six months in the centre of the town, two in the east squadron, (one of which should be east of the river,) two on the west side, and one in the south squadron. In 1782 another report is found. The centre squadron was to extend a mile and a half, and a grammar school was to be supported there, the out squadrons drawing an equal amount, to be expended "in keeping good writing schools." The houses which were to form the line of the centre squadron, on the various roads, are designated: "on Wilmington road, Jonas French's new house; on the French's road, the house of Jacob French; on Boston road, the house of Oliver Crosby; on Bedford road, the house of Peter Hill; on the road to Fitch's mill, the house of John Blanchard; on the road over middle bridge, John Carleton, Jr.; on Chelmsford road, the house of W^m. Laws; on the road to Carleton's mills, Josiah Dansforth's; on the road to Tewksbury, by French's dam, Benj. Davis." There were to be two squadrons on the west side, to be divided as the inhabitants there pleased. The east squadron was to include all north of John Patten, Jun.'s, and William Tarbell's, and east of the Long Pond Road; the Shawshin squadron "to begin at Samuel Danforth's and take in Thomas Richardson, widow Hosley, Joseph Jones, & Ebenezer Richardson, Jr., on the Boston road, and Ebenezer Richardson & Josiah Richardson on the east road," with all on the east on Shawshin River except John Skelton and Amos Wyman; the southeast squadron included "all south of the widow Farmer's and Hezekiah Crosby's, that live between Boston road & Bedford road," except Timothy Jaquith and Isaac Manning, who, "a little off from Bedford road," were in the south squadron.

But the squadron school-houses were still wanting, and, 1791, September 12, a committee on the location of such houses made report. It recommended, that in the centre ward the house be set "in Stephen Parker's corner, at the west end of the meeting house," 22X22, at a cost of £50; the north ward house to be set in William Rogers' corner by John Rogers, 16X16, to cost £20; the east ward house, location left blank, 18X18, to cost £22; the Shawshin ward house to be set at the corner of Lieut. John Farmer's and Ebenezer Richardson, Jr.'s, land, 16X16, to cost £20; the southerly ward house to be set in Simon and Joseph Blanchard's land, "half way between the roads, on an allowance for school travel," 14X14, to cost £18; the south ward house to be set at the head of Job Hill's lane, 16X16, to cost £20; the south ward, over Concord River, to be set at the end of Shed's lane, so called, 16X16, to cost £20; the north ward, over Concord River, to be set, not agreed where, cost £20. Wards which chose not to build might draw the interest of the sum allowed to said ward to hire places to keep their school; but the latter privilege was not to extend beyond two years; and the committee was to settle disputes as to locations not yet decided on. Most of these sites are nearly the same with those still in use. The house at the centre was also used later as an academy; then became a store and post office; was burned in 1873; and rebuilt by Mr. Morey for the same use. When the district system of schools displaced the earlier squadrons is not clear; but for two generations districts had charge of their own schools, locating and supporting as they pleased. But within a few years the town has reassumed the entire charge, seeking more harmonious and efficient management.

The employment of school "dames" is mentioned as early as 1680, and in March, 1718, John Hartwell's wife had leave "to keep a school to Instruct children to Read"; but it is not clear to what extent females were thus employed, and it is only within a few years that most of the schools have passed into their hands. Before the Revolution, only English text-books were to be had, which were sometimes reprinted, but always costly and ill-adapted to use in this country. After that, improvement, sure if not rapid, was made, and has contributed much to the usefulness of the schools.

It was a notable day in the history of Billerica, when Mr. Pemberton, who had been for eight years the first principal of Phillips Academy, at Andover, came from that position to Billerica, and established a school here, which is properly known as the Pemberton Academy. He was one of the notable teachers of his time, and counted such men as James Madison and Aaron Burr among his pupils. His school here was on the west side of Long Street, at the place where the late Dr. Pillsbury lived, and is described as a one-story building, which received additions as more room was needed, until "its length became a marked feature." Here he conducted a school for fourteen years, which was highly successful, numbering at times sixty pupils, many of whom graduated at Harvard College and became eminent. At first a training-school for boys, its scope was enlarged and girls were received; and Deacon Samuel Whiting assisted in the instruction. It would be interesting if we had a catalogue, and knew more of this early academy.

After an interval of some years, a private school was established by Mr. Bernard Whitman and his sister Bathsheba, their brother being the colleague pastor of the church. It was kept in a hall of the old hotel. But, in 1820, the Billerica Academy was established, and Mr. and Miss Whitman assumed the charge of it. The Trustees of this academy were Josiah Crosby, Esq., Samuel Whiting, Esq., Joseph Locke, Esq., Rev. Nathaniel Whitman, Francis Faulkner, Esq., Col. J. B. Richardson, Dr. Zadok Howe, Rev. Samuel Stearns, Rev. Jacob Coggin, Edward St. L. Livermore, Rev. Samuel Sewall, George Bruce, Cyrus Baldwin, William Bland, Jr., Esq., Dr. A. R. Thompson. Others afterward chosen were Hon. Timothy Walker, John Baldwin, Esq., Marshall Preston, Esq., Capt. Francis Richardson, Rev. Bernard Whitman, Rev. Hezekiah Packard, Rev. William Barry, Dr. Thaddeus Brown.

This academy building stood south of the Unitarian Church, and was probably identical with the earlier school-house, on the same spot, which is mentioned above. The school was good and useful, but it lacked the pecuniary foundation needful for permanence, and its career closed in 1836. From that time, until 1852, the only opportunity for higher instruction in the town was a private school, which was taught for some years by Reverend Mr. Stearns, in the vestry of the Congregational Church, of which he was the pastor.

Dr. Howe, knowing the value of such a school and instructed by the failure of the Academy, a few years later set about a more substantial foundation; and the results of his benevolent plans remain, and must long endure, in the Howe School. The design had occupied his thoughts before his death, and the lot was selected and purchased by himself. By his will, a Board of Trustees, to be incorporated, received the bulk of his estate, and were charged with the duty of carrying his plans into execution. The first Trustees were John Baldwin, James R. Faulkner, Dudley Foster, William H. Odiorne, Marshall Preston, Amos Spaulding, and George H. Whitman; of whom only Mr. Foster is still a member of the Board. Others, who have been appointed to fill vacancies by the Judge of Probate, are Thomas Talbot, John A. Buttrick, Gardner Parker, Luther W. Faulkner, Henry A. Hazen, Moses G. Parker, and Peter B. Bobonan. The building was erected in 1852, and dedicated with an address by Mr. Whitman, who remained until 1875, the diligent and faithful secretary of the Trustees. Valuable details of the history may be found in that address, which has been published.

The School was opened at once under the charge of Mr. William C. Grant. He was succeeded, in 1855, by Mr. Stephen Gilman, and, in 1864, by Mr. Francis Gorman. The present principal, Mr. Samuel Tucker, assumed his charge in 1868. Tuition was free at the beginning, but in recent years the income of the fund, somewhat more than $20,000, has not been sufficient alone for the support of the School, and a small tuition fee has been charged; it is now four dollars per term, with three terms in each year. The Catalogue, published in 1880, enrolls the names of 838 pupils, of whom, since 1868, there have been 66 graduates. Pupils are received on examination from the common schools of the town, and from other towns on the same terms. The generous endowment of Dr. Howe is now less adequate than at first to the needs of the School, and should receive some increase from the town, or from private munificence, in order to meet the larger requirements of instruction and equipment, which the lapse of thirty years and the demands of recent progress have laid upon it.

This record of schools in Billerica has also a recent addition. Early in 1879, Professor M. C. Mitchell, a graduate of Waterville College, now Colby University, in 1862, who had for some years had a private Boys' School, at Falmouth, Massachusetts, removed with his school to this town. After brief locations, on Boston Street and on Andover Street, he purchased the large and handsome building which had replaced the old hotel, burned in 1876, on the south corner of Andover and Main Streets, which was occupied in May, 1880. It is designed as a home school for boys, the number of pupils being limited to twenty-four, and the charge, including all expenses, being $400 per year. The school is prosperous, and we give a good view of its buildings.

CHAPTER XV.

THE dismissal of Mr. Chandler left the church for the first time without a pastor; and the devout fathers set apart a day of fasting and prayer, 1760, October 2, "to supplicate the throne of grace for divine direction in the choice of a minister." The ministers of Littleton, Tewksbury, Wilmington, and Woburn were invited to assist in the public services. Sixteen ministers were paid for preaching during the two years ensuing. Samuel Angier was employed twenty Sabbaths; Edward Sparhawk, ten; Edward Brooks, twelve; Job Whitney, Nathaniel Noyes, and Mr. Frye, eight each; William Whitwell, seven, and Benjamin Caryl, four. The latter received a call to settle, which was not accepted. At length a town meeting was held, 1762, November 18, and this is the record: "The church of Christ in this town having at their meeting on the 25 Day of August, 1760, Voted to give up their Right and Privilege of Choosing a Gospel minister by themselves, and to act in conjunction with the Town in this Important affair; and the Church and Town Having mett together upon this occation, * and the meeting being opened by a prayer to god for his Gracious Influence, guidance, & Direction, The Question was put whether we would proceed at this Time To the Choice of a Gentleman to settle with us in the work of the Gospel ministry, and it was voted in the affirmative. Then the members of the Church & the Inhabitants of the Town were desired by the Moderater to Bring in their votes conjunctly, in order to the choosing such a minister, which being done and the votes examined, it appeared that Mr. Henry Cumings was chosen by all the votes. Then the Town voted to the said Mr. Henry Cumings, as an Incouragement to settle with us, for his settlement Two Hundred Pounds Lawfull money, one Hundred to be paid" at the time of his ordination, and the remainder a year later. His salary was to be £80, paid annually, and he was to have the use of the "Parsonage pasture." The question of acting on "the article of wood" passed "in the negative," and ministers have since been permitted to furnish their own wood. In paying Dr. Cumings the promised "settlement," the town appropriated £78, 17s., 11d., which had been received from the State for the care of the French neutrals. The ordination took place, 1768, January 26. "Seven churches came to the solemnity. The Rev^d. Mr. Morrill, of Wilmington, began with prayer; Rev^d. Mr. Emerson, of Hollis, preached the sermon, from Heb. xiii:17; the Rev^d. Mr. Rogers, of Littleton, gave the charge, & the Rev^d. Mr. Bridge, of Chelmsford, the Right Hand of Fellowship, & y^e Rev^d. Mr. Emerson, of Pepperil, made y^e last prayer."

The record of Mr. Cumings' birth and family is given elsewhere. He was a young man when he assumed his important and lifelong charge, having graduated from Harvard College just before he was twenty-one years of age, and spent only two years in teaching, at Reading, where he found his wife, and in the study of theology with his pastor, Rev. Daniel Emerson, of Hollis. Mr. Emerson was a man of character and spiritual force, and of power as a preacher, and many young men went from Hollis under his influence to take high positions in the pulpit and at the bar. He had been in ardent sympathy with the Great Awakening and the labors of Edwards and Whitefield, and Mr. Cumings brought the tonic of this training to his ministry in Billerica. He brought also a fine physical manhood, a culture and a piety, which gave him good equipment for his office; and for almost two generations he led his people, a good example of the oldtime pastor, holding their respect and love with a rare force to the end. As to the manner of man he was, I am able to give some authentic and interesting reminiscences, furnished by his granddaughter, Miss Nancy Wilkins, whose privilege it was to be with him twenty years in the later part of his life, and who, after illustrating in her own person a most serene and charming old age, has but recently been called away by death. She says,—

"The earliest recollections of my revered grandfather are of a pleasing nature, although they inspired my youthful heart with awe. He was six feet and upwards in height, finely proportioned, with silvery, flowing locks and a pleasant smile. He would be called a perfect Christian gentleman, in whom was no guile, and was noted for his hospitality to all. He was a powerful man, both mentally and physically, and was considered a fine Hebrew scholar, having been taught while in college by a Jew, who took unwearied pains with a small class to perfect them in the language he loved, and took great pride in their success. He was well versed in Latin and Greek. From the latter I have heard him quote largely; particularly from a speech of President Holyoke. In prayer time some of the students had whistled and scraped. After prayers, my grandfather said, he never heard such a powerful address as he made to them in Greek; it came like a thunder-clap, and the offence was never repeated. I have often heard him repeat this speech, and his memory was very uncommon. He would repeat the first book of Paradise Lost without hesitation. He fitted several for college in his younger days, and, later, instructed some theological students. He was uniformly kind, but in those days any approach to familiarity would have been considered highly improper; and, as he seldom spoke of himself, I knew but little of his history. His mother was a woman of uncommon energy, and very devout. Dr. Cumings owed much, in his own opinion, to her influence. Mr. Emerson, his pastor, befriended him, fitted him for college, and helped him through. The Sabbath was kept very strictly. None could visit or leave his house on that day, or stay at home to provide food. To me it was always a pleasant day. I had my Bible and Pilgrim's Progress, and I longed to find and enter through that wicket gate, for it was all real to me. I never knew one who had a more vivid sense of an overruling providence. His wives' family was of English descent, all Episcopalians, and their grandfather kept slaves. He often spoke of his first wife and always with deep emotion, and she must have been a most lovely Christian woman. In memory of her and of his blessed Saviour, he used to trim his rooms with evergreen on Christmas Eve, and for this purpose would go far to get the double spruce which he thought the most beautiful. He was a man of strong passions and quick temper, but had learned the lesson of self-control. In his younger days he used tobacco freely, but, when convinced that it was injurious, he abandoned it; but he said it was like cutting off a right arm.

"Once a year he visited all the schools, in order to catechise the children, using the Assembly's Catechism, The Commandments and Creed, portions of The Bible, and Hymns. It was a very interesting day to the children. My grandfather took great pleasure in cultivating his garden, and was very fond of flowers, having a fine assortment for those times. He gave me a flower-bed and taught me to cultivate it. He often brought us wild flowers and herbs, and seemed to know their properties; as well as all the birds of the air and all their peculiar habits."

This picture, outlined by one who knew and loved him, shows very clearly some of the elements of his power as a minister. He was a diligent student, wrought out his sermons with great care, and preached them with effect. Then he was a man of the people. He had known in his own early experience what poverty and trial were, and was prepared to sympathize with the trials through which the people were passing. The testimony is abundant how heartily he shared in the patriotic discussions and actions which bore fruit in the independence of the States and establishment of the Union. He was a leader in the patriot councils, and the action of the town was often shaped by him. His election as a delegate to the Convention which framed the Constitution of Massachusetts, in 1780, was only the proper and natural recognition of his standing among his townsmen. He was often called on councils, far and near, and to preach on public occasions, in a way to show that his merits were appreciated beyond the bounds of his rural parish. But if he was ever called, in the modern fashion, to leave his chosen field, the temptation did not move him, and he was content to live and to die among the people, who gave him in youth unanimously their confidence and love, and continued it to the end.

A new and more commodious meeting-house was found necessary and was erected in 1797. It stood near, but a little southeast of, its present position, facing the north. By some accident the first steeple fell, and the builder received $500.00 compensation from the town. The cost of this house was provided for by sale of the pews, which took place, 1797, December 8, as follows, the sum received being $8504.50:—

The church continued united and prosperous during the long pastorate of Dr. Cumings. A just estimate of his theological attitude, in relation to the questions on which the separation among the churches about the time of his death took place, is not easy to reach. Some facts, however, will assist in such an estimate. A pupil of Mr. Emerson, of Hollis, would not fail to hold the views then and after described by the term "evangelical," unless he departed from the position of his teacher; and that Dr. Cumings ever did so there is lack of evidence. On the contrary, the testimony of his granddaughter, who sat at his feet during the last years of his life, is that he "held fast" the evangelical doctrines to the end. His published sermons confirm this statement; and it might be illustrated from his unpublished sermons to almost any extent. I give extracts from two sermons, which show his general tone of thought and discussion. The text of the first is Hebrews, v:9; and speaking of the benefit procured for us by Jesus Christ, he says: "By this is meant our deliverance from sin and all its penal effects, a deliverance from guilt and condemnation, from wrath to come and the eternal punishments of another world. * It is owing to the interposition of divine grace, that we have not before now been made extremely miserable. * This grace we owe, and it is dispensed to us through the mediation of Jesus Christ. * Christ hath procured eternal salvation for us by the merit of His own obedience, suffering, and death, whereby he has procured eternal redemption for us, not only deliverance from y^e wrath and curse of God, but eternal life and happiness. When man had by sin ruined and undone himself, Christ was contented to be made a sacrifice for him and to bear his sins in His own body on the tree."

The text of the other sermon is Mark, xiii : 33, and its "Doctrine, that a consideration of the uncertainty of the Time when our Lord will call us to Judgment ought to put us upon using the greatest care and Diligence, by Prayer and the most circumspect walk and conversation, that we may be in a constant preparation to meet Him." Some of the points made in the treatment of it are as follows: "We are in this world in a state of Tryal or Probation. * Christ comes to every Individual at death. The Scriptures teach that as soon as the soul leaves the Body, it appears before God and is sentenced to a State of Happiness or Misery. So that the Day of Death is a Period as interesting to every one as the Day of general Judgment; for the same Sentence that is passed upon every one at Death will be openly and solemnly ratified at the general Assize of the World. Death puts an everlasting Period to our probationary state." After these and other preliminary statements, the preacher outlines what the vigilant man will do; and under the fifth head uses this language: "The Vigilant Man, as he is put upon watching by a consideration of the Certainty of a Judgment to come and the Uncertainty of the Time when it will come; so, in order to maintain his Vigilancy, he will frequently represent to his Mind the Solemnity of a future Judgment. And I know of nothing that would tend more to make men watchful and keep them so, than often to reflect upon the solemnities of that great Day, when we must all give Account of ourselves to God, which Day will certainly come though we know not the Time of it. A consideration that there is a Day approaching when the Lord Jesus Christ will descend from Heaven, with his mighty Angels, in awful Power and Magnificence, to Judge the World, and that He will then raise the dead and summon the whole human Race from Adam to the latest of his Posterity before his glorious Tribunal, and, separating the righteous from the wicked, will, after graciously inviting the former to his heavenly Mansions, pronounce that awful sentence against the latter, 'Depart, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels.' * It will be a joyful or a terrible Day to us, according to our present Behavior." The duty of prayer is then considered, under several heads; and the sermon closes with fervent and solemn appeals to his hearers.

This latter sermon¹ was first preached, 1775, February 12; was preached eight times elsewhere, and repeated four times in his own pulpit, the last time in 1810. It reflects the unchanged tenor of his late as well as his early preaching. A characteristic tendency of Dr. Cumings' preaching is to limit his statements of the doctrines of the trinity, of sin, of redemption and retribution, to the language of the Scriptures, seldom interpreting them in phraseology of his own. His sympathies were with the Arminian, rather than with the high-Calvinistic opinions of his time; but when his colleague was ordained, in 1814, it was understood by the council that he held evangelical opinions. Mr. Stearns, of Bedford, concurred in it for that reason; a fact confirmed on the trial of Mr. Stearns, twenty years later, by Mr. Whitman's own testimony, that the suspension of exchanges between himself and Mr. Stearns was not due to any change in Mr. Stearns' opinions.² On the other hand, it is to be remembered, that the church with substantial unanimity accepted the views of the "liberal" party, under the lead of Mr. Whitman, and that Dr. Cumings' influence, negative if not positive, must have contributed to this result. He is named with Unitarian ministers in the histories of the period; and whether any injustice is done to him in this classification is a question on which opinions will differ.

In February, 1813, Dr. Cumings preached his Half-Century Sermon. On account of his age and infirmity, he requested a colleague, and the church at once took measures which resulted in the ordination of Mr. Nathaniel Whitman, on the fifty-first anniversary of the day when Dr. Cumings had been himself ordained, 1814, January 26. The life of Dr. Cumings was spared for almost ten years longer, and his pastorate extended to nearly sixty-one years, his death occurring, 1823, September 6. From ordination to death his pastorate was about eleven years longer than that of Mr. Whiting, but in this comparison it should be remembered that Mr. Whiting labored here five years before the church was organized, and the actual difference in the length of their ministry is only six years. To the last Dr. Cumings held the respect and love of the people, and, when the end came, he was buried by the town with reverent affection, the third and the last pastor to whom the town has rendered this service.

Mr. Whitman brought high character, scholarship, and piety to his new position. It should be added to the record elsewhere given, that he was two years an usher at Phillips Academy, Exeter, and there began the study of theology with Dr. Buckminster, of Portsmouth, completing his course at Cambridge. He was received with great cordiality and considerate kindness by his venerable colleague, and a warm friendship grew up between them. His ordination was attended by a multitude of people, and the hospitality of the town was full and generous. The sermon was preached by the Rev. James Flint, of East Bridgewater; the Rev. Samuel Stearns, of Bedford, gave the Right Hand, and Dr. Cumings the Charge, which were published. Mr. Whitman was a good preacher and active pastor. He established a Bible Society and a Peace Society, as well as the first Sunday School in town, and he used his influence effectively in improving the common schools. His pastorate, however, fell upon a period of agitation and disruption among the churches, when influences which had been gathering force, some of them for a hundred years, came to a head; and it is scarcely any fault of this worthy man that they culminated in his day and disturbed the peace of his ministry. The discussions which preceded and attended the separation of the Unitarian churches were not the only and scarcely the most serious of the influences which threatened the peace of the local pastors. The practical union of Church and State, which had been naturally inherited from England, and illustrated in all our previous history, as the constable gathered the pastor's salary, was out of place in the free air of America. With independence the demand for a change grew stronger and stronger; but it involved so serious considerations and was so startling to good but conservative men, that the resistance was long, and many pastors were unsettled in the process. The age of Dr. Cumings and the honor in which he was held delayed its coming in Billerica, and the town collected the salary of Mr. Whitman until 1834. In that year the usual article in the warrant was "passed" by the town and was not again of the dead, a final Judgment, and of a future state of Retributions." Ministers whose preaching was in direct opposition to this covenant he could not consistently permit to occupy his pulpit.

Mr. Whitman was dismissed, 1835, March 30, and was succeeded by Rev. William E. Abbot, who was ordained, 1837, February 8, and dismissed, 1839, February 10. Mr. Abbot was graduated at Bowdoin College, 1830, and at Harvard Theological School, in 1838. The next pastor was Rev. Theodore Haskell Dorr, a graduate of Harvard College, in 1835, and Theological School, in 1838. He was ordained, 1839, May 28, and dismissed, 1843, May 28. Succeeding ministers have with one exception received no formal installation. Their names and dates of service are as follows: James Thurston, 1844, November 15-1850, May 15. Samuel Pettes, 1850, June 16-1855, May 14. Nathaniel O. Chaffin, 1855, June 17-1857, May 10. Norwood Damon, 1857-60. Livingston Stone, 1861-62. James Gallaway, installed, 1863, January 28-1865. Christopher Coffin Hussey, 1866, October 1, who is still in charge.

In 1844 the meeting-house was moved, and turned half around to face the east; but it was allowed to retain its primitive structure and graceful spire, which form a landmark visible from afar. The longer ministry of Mr. Hussey has witnessed improvement in several directions. In 1879 a fund of $10,000 was contributed by several members of the society, the interest of which only can be used to support preaching. The conditions of the gift are that the minister's salary be kept at a specified rate, and that the preaching be distinctively Unitarian. In 1881 a house was bought for a parsonage, and so fully repaired as to make it substantially a new, as well as pleasant and convenient, home for the minister. It stands on the east side of the street, one door north of Amlover Street, having been the home of Mr. W. H. Blanchard and previously of Marshall Preston.

THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH was the earliest separate organization, after the First Church had for one hundred and sixty-five years existed alone in the town. There were Baptists here at an early day, William Hamlet at least and probably George Farley; and a letter from Hamlet relating to the early troubles is published by Backus, the Baptist historian. But the number did not increase until after the Revolution, when the tendency to resist payment of "minister's rates" had influence in increasing the number of Baptists. Not long after the death of Dr. Cummings, they had become numerous and strong enough for organization. Meetings were first held in the school-house near the Fordway, in the spring of 1828. A church was organized, 1828, September 30, and recognized by Council, October 9. It consisted of twenty members, of whom thirteen were dismissed from the South Chelmsford Church. The first deacons were Joseph Dows and Amos Spaulding. Their successors have been Edward Spaulding, George C. Gilman, John C. Hobbs, and Francis E. Manley.

The list of its ministers is as follows, omitting students and others who served for shorter periods:—

Otis Wing, 1829, March, to 1830, March.

Jedediah W. Sargent, ordained, 1833, January 14, to 1837, January.

Jonathan E. Forbush, 1837, March–1838, August.

Warren Cooper, 1838, October–1839, October.

George W. Randall, ordained, 1841, February 18–1842, May.

Benjamin Knight, 1842, May–1849, April; and 1857, Feb.–1860, Jan.

Benjamin Putnam, 1845, June; died, 1850, December 21, aged 62.

Zenas P. Wilde, 1851, April–1853, April.

Homer Sears, 1854, January–1856, January.

Thomas C. Russell, 1860, August–1863, March.

John D. Sweet, ordained, 1863, October 21–1868, March.

Clifton Fletcher, 1869, February–1875, July.

William H. Fish, ordained, 1875, December 30–1877, June.

Robert M. Neil, (alias O'Neil or McNeil), 1877, October–1878, July. "Dismissed from the fellowship of the church and ministry."

Edward T. Lyford, 1879, May.

The first meeting-house stood on the east side of Concord River, very near the middle bridge. The frame was raised, 1830, November 30, and the house was dedicated, 1831, September 14. It was fifty feet long, forty feet wide, had forty-eight pews, and would seat three hundred people. In the spring of 1844 it was removed to its present location in the village, on Bedford Street. A bell was procured in 1872, and in 1877 it received an addition of a convenient chapel, as appears in the illustration.⁴

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH was organized, 1829, April 30, a society having been formed, January 17. This was a more direct result of the theological controversy, and of the ecclesiastical separations, which were still agitating the Massachusetts churches; and the presence of Dr. Lyman Beecher, as Moderator of the Council which organized the church, was a significant expression of the general interest in this and similar movements. The unity and strength of the First Church was, however, less affected by the separation, in Billerica, than in many towns. The number of its members who did not sympathize with, or yield to, the Unitarian position of the church was small. Two women, Huldah Blake and Martha Bowers, entered a protest, 1820, October 8. They affirm their belief in the true and proper deity of Jesus Christ, in the atonement, in the entire depravity of unregenerate men, and their need of supernatural grace to fit them for the happiness of heaven; and generally in the doctrines of the Westminster Confession and Catechism. With these views they believed their pastor and many of their brethren in the church did not agree; and they therefore asked the favor of a regular dismissal. This the church, affirming the right and duty of each individual to be guided by his own conscience, granted. No other dismissals for this reason are recorded, and not more than four or five members of the First Church ever joined the new Congregational Church, which began with twenty-five members. The meeting-house, on Andover Street, 60×40 feet, was raised, October 28, and dedicated, 1830, January 13. The record of its ministers has been as follows:—

Isaac Jones, acting pastor, 1832, July–1834, April.

Joseph Haven, installed, 1836, June 8; dismissed, 1840, September 27.

Benjamin Ela, ordained, 1841, April 29; dismissed, 1842, May.

Jesse G. D. Stearns, ordained, 1843, May 29; dismissed, 1867, May 8.

John P. Cleveland, D. D., acting pastor, 1867–70.

Everts B. Kent, acting pastor, 1870–71.

John M. Lord, acting pastor, 1871–72.

Henry A. Hazen, installed, 1874, May 21; dismissed, 1879, May 4.

John Haskell, acting pastor, 1879, May–1881, October.

Charles C. Torrey, acting pastor, 1881, November.

The long and faithful pastorate of Mr. Stearns deserves especial recognition. Record of his descent from Billerica ancestry may be found elsewhere, (see STEARNS, 8). A scholar of exceptional diligence and culture, modest and devout, and active in every good word and work, he commended himself to the citizens of the town as well as to his own charge. As teacher of a useful private school, and superintendent of the schools of the town, he exerted no little influence, and represented the town in the Legislature.

The deacons of this church have been William Gleason, Aaron Patten, Edward Wright, Samuel H. King, and Moses P. Greenwood.

A UNIVERSALIST SOCIETY was formed, 1842, January 10, and a meeting-house erected the same year. It stood on the north side of West Street, where the school-house now stands. In 1868 it was sold to the Roman Catholics and removed to North Billerica, where it is still in use by that society. The ministers of this church were Rev. Varnum Lincoln, ordained, 1843, September 8; Rev. L. P. Landers, of West Cambridge, 1845-47; Rev. George Proctor, 1847-53, and again, 1855-63; Rev. P. Hersey, 1853-55; and Rev. R. M. Byram.

A ROMAN CATHOLIC SOCIETY was organized and purchased the Universalist Church in 1868. It has prospered and the number of its communicants is large. The priests who have been in charge come from Lowell, and no record of their names or dates of service has been furnished.

The youngest church in the town is the Baptist Church, at North Billerica, which was organized, 1869, May 14, receiving twenty-two members from the Centre Church. Its pleasant meeting-house was a gift from the Hon. Thomas Talbot; built in 1870, and dedicated, 1871, January 19. Its pastors have been William M. Ross, 1869, June 2; Nathaniel L. Colby, ordained, 1872, July 2; and William A. Farren, ordained, 1879, September 24.

CHAPTER XVI.

CANAL, TURNPIKE, AND RAILROADS.

THE early roads were often called paths, and the name describes them. Carts could pass over the better roads, but many were passable only on horseback or on foot. Wagons were unknown. The earliest chaise was owned in town not much, if any, before 1800, and marked the aristocracy of the few who could afford such luxury.¹ The first great improvement in the means of transportation was the Middlesex Canal. This first important canal in America passed through Billerica, and its path is still to be seen at many points. The company was incorporated in June, 1793, to connect the Merrimack with the Mystic and Charles rivers, and save the trade of New Hampshire to Boston. The preliminary surveys consumed more than a year, and ground was first broken at Billerica "Mills" in the spring of 1795. At this point the Concord River is one hundred and nine feet above tide-water in Boston Harbor and twenty-five feet above the Merrimack, which the canal reached at its most southerly bend, about a mile above Pawtucket Falls. The canal was 27 miles long, 30 feet wide, and 3 feet deep. It was navigable to the Charles River, in 1803; but its income was absorbed for years in alterations and repairs, and no dividend was declared until 1819. One hundred assessments were laid upon stockholders, and the cost of shares, including interest, was $1455.25; the total cost of the canal being $1,164,200. From 1819 to 1843, dividends were paid, amounting to $504 per share. The receipts then fell below the expenses; in 1851 the charter was surrendered, and in 1852 the canal was sold in sections, owners of adjoining lands being generally the purchasers. The charter was farther declared forfeited in 1859. The proprietors complained that the railroad had been permitted to damage their chartered rights without indemnity, but they had no redress. The chief design of the canal was to carry freight, but a packet-boat for passengers was run daily, at a speed of four miles per hour, the fare from Lowell to Boston being fifty cents. That the canal did not very essentially affect the life of the town is shown by the fact that all its carrying from Boston to Billerica did not exceed $200 per year.

The Middlesex Turnpike was an enterprise of significance in its day. It was chartered in June, 1805. Ebenezer Bridge and James Abbot being among its corporators. Its route extended from Tyngsborough to Medford and Cambridge. The line at first was to pass Billerica meeting-house; but, in 1806, the route was changed, by permission of the General Court, from a point in Bedford, crossing Nutting's Pond, to Buisquet bridge in Tyngsborough. Some lack of friendly co-operation in Billerica may have influenced this change, and the managers were ambitious to make their great road as near an air-line as possible. Hills and ponds must not stand in their way, and they accordingly followed a route straight through the town, crossing Concord River a mile above the centre bridge, and leaving the village as far one side. This line would attract very little local travel and support, and experience soon proved that the visions of a great through travel and traffic were delusive. The canal and the railroad left little for the turnpike, and its charter was repealed in 1841. The unfortunate proprietors of the Middlesex Turnpike were not without some very sound reasons for their faith. Those were the days of teams and stages, and the business which they brought through this town was a notable feature of its life. Much of the traffic of western New Hampshire and Vermont with Salem and Boston passed through Billerica. The teaming was of two kinds. There was a class of professional teamsters, who drove large wagons, drawn by four, six, or eight horses, serving the merchants of the up-country. The memory of some of these men, like Thomas Dutton, of Hartford, Vermont, whose team always rested on the Sabbath, still lingers along the route. Wool, butter, cheese, and whatever sought the market would furnish the loads, while salt, molasses, dry goods, rum, and all the varieties kept by the miscellaneous "country store" were taken on the return. Another class of teams probably more numerous, though smaller, was driven by farmers, who took a trip or two yearly to market, carrying their own produce, beef, pork, or whatever they had to sell, and returning with articles for home consumption or for the merchants.

The stages also entered largely into the life of that period. "The first stage-coach passed through Billerica about 1795. It was a two-horse, covered vehicle, owned and driven by Mr. Joseph Wheat, and ran from Amherst, N. H., to Boston and back again, once a week. It stopped at Billerica over night, making the trip in about four days. The same team performed all the journey."² The business increased. In 1803 the stage from Boston to Amherst set off from King's Inn every Wednesday and Saturday, leaving at 5 A.M. and arriving at 7 P.M., returning Mondays and Thursdays at the same hours. For several years before the opening of the Boston and Lowell Railroad from twelve to sixteen stages passed daily through Billerica, Sundays excepted. After work was begun on the new mills at East Chelmsford, in 1821, Mr. Richardson, who kept a hotel at the "Corner," sent a hack Mondays and Saturdays to accommodate gentlemen who wished to connect with the Amherst stage at that point. Lowell could hardly be served in that way now! All this staging and teaming made a demand for taverns, which were numerous and busy. There were two, and sometimes three, in the village: one or two at the Corner, and the Manning Tavern on the Chelmsford Road; and these were not all. Men and beasts must be provided for, and this provision often suggests Falstaff's "intolerable deal of sack," as one reads the items in old ledgers.

But canal and turnpike gave way to a more revolutionary improvement. The Granite Railway to Quincy was chartered in 1826, and did its first work in 1827 in carrying granite for Bunker Hill Monument. The sagacious men who were laying the foundations of Lowell saw that the railway was what their enterprise needed, and the Boston and Lowell Railroad was chartered in June, 1830. The railroads to Worcester and Providence were chartered soon after, and were opened to Newton in April and to Readville in June, 1834. A year later, 1835, June 25, the Boston and Lowell Railroad was opened. Two days after, its first advertisement appears, as follows:

"The Cars will continue to run till farther notice as at present, viz.: Leave Lowell at 6 A.M. & 2½ P.M. Leave Boston at 9 A.M. & 5½ P.M. No baggage can be taken, except what belongs to passengers. Allowance to each, 40 pounds. As soon as Burthen cars can be provided, notice will be given for the transportation of merchandise. Tickets may be had at the depot, corner Leverett and Brighton streets. Price, $1.00.

"GEORGE M. DEXTER, Agent."

² Bt-Centennial, p. 152, (note).

The contrast is great between the four trains of 1835 and the twenty-five passenger trains of 1882, with almost as many more for freight. Then they must start from Lowell; now they may come from San Francisco. But the benefit which the railroad brought to Billerica has been much less than it would have been if it had followed a more direct line, through Woburn, and passing between the village and Fox Hill. Such a route would have made the pleasant, high lands on which the village is located a very accessible and attractive suburb of Boston, and with the growth of both Lowell and Boston, Billerica might have shared. But some feared and repelled the railroad; others, more sagacious, saw its benefits and sought its location on a more northerly route; and the growth of the village has been hindered by its distance from the stations. Relief for this difficulty has been sought in various directions, and once it seemed to be secured; in fact it was secured for a few months, until a hopeful enterprise ended in disastrous failure. The story of the Billerica and Bedford Narrow-Gauge Railroad is not a pleasant one, but must be here briefly told.

In 1875, George E. Mansfield, of Boston, came to Billerica with plans and proposals for building a railroad, of a two-foot gauge, from Bedford to North Billerica. A road of fourteen miles' length in Wales, The Festiniog, had shown the practicability of a line so narrow, but none had ever been built in this country. Discussion resulted in a charter, and a company was organized, 1876, May 10, Capt. Charles A. Ranlett being its president. Subscriptions and surveys required some months, and ground was broken, with much enthusiasm, September 6. The construction of the line took more than a year, and it was opened in the autumn of 1877. Its equipment consisted of two locomotives, "Ariel" and "Puck," two passenger cars, two "excursion" cars, and a few others. The novelty of its narrow track and cheap construction attracted much attention. People came to see its working, and the "Scientific American" published, 1878, March 16, an article describing its construction, with an illustration of its engines. For a few months the village enjoyed railroad facilities, and so far as the feasibility of the working experiment went, the road was a success. Its failure came from financial causes. The estimated cost was $50,000, or $8000 per mile; but, in the "Scientific American" article, its projector puts its cost when completed at over $60,000. On the other hand, a portion of its subscription proved unsound or fraudulent and the road began operations under a heavy burden of debt. Starting in this unfortunate condition, and hardly at the outset earning its running expenses, the directors were unable to finish its connections and equipment, or, by patient and successful running, win the confidence of the public and test the question, in which some of them never lost faith, whether such a road could become pecuniarily profitable. Under its burden of debt, the road was thrown into bankruptcy and assignees took possession, the personal property being sold, 1878, June 6, for $9000. The town, which had subscribed originally and paid $12,000, was urged to aid farther, but declined to do so; and individuals were not ready to undertake the financial experiment. Meanwhile, the Sandy River Railroad, in Maine, had built a similar line, north from Farmington. This company purchased the equipments of the Billerica and Bedford Railroad; and there they are still in use with more success. Time is rapidly obliterating the roadway through the town, and the children of coming generations may listen with some doubt to the story, that their fathers did once have such a railroad and regular trains running from Billerica to Bedford; and that merry school-children went shouting on excursions over the route. That such was the fact the historian can testify, with emotions in which amusement, chagrin, and regret are mingled.

CHAPTER XVII.

MILLS. — MANUFACTURES.

IN 1659, November, William Sheldon received the grant of a lot on condition of building a mill, to grind corn, within two years, (see under SHELDON). This grant was declared forfeit, and John Parker received "the mill lot," 1663-64, January 25, with an eight-acre right, for £55, paid for the town.¹ The house-lot was to be near the great bridge. No condition of building a mill is connected with the grant, and it is doubtful if there was any mill at North Billerica before the grant to Osgood, in 1708. But a "corne mill" was built as early as 1683, on Vine Brook, by John Wilson, (see WILSON), who had a saw-mill there in 1680; and Thomas Patten had a mill at Pattenville as early, (see PATTEN). But John Parker owned, by grant and purchase, at least two large lots at this place; and a mill-pond is mentioned there in 1664. Probably therefore the first mill in town was built by Mr. Parker and about 1660, on Content Brook, and not on Concord River. Bacon's mill, at the falls of the Shawshin, is mentioned in 1707 and perhaps was built earlier. Benjamin Fitch afterwards owned it, and it was long known as "Fitch's mill."

The grant from which all subsequent owners have held the water power and mill privilege at North Billerica was made, as follows:—

"At a General Town Meeting, octob. 4, 1708, Granted to Christopher Osgood, Jun^r., of Andover, all that neck of land on the West of Concord River, lying between said River and the pathway leading to broad meadow, with the stream at the falls, Reserving ten pole from the fordway down said River, and from the foot of the Hill going down into broad meadow; provided, the said Christopher Osgood do, within two years next ensuing the date hereof, Erect and maintain a good grist mill upon said River, at the falls over against sam^l Rogers his house lot, and the said Osgood doth Engage to secure and defend the Town of Billerica from any trouble and charge that may arise for damage that may be done to the meadows of the Town above us by said mill-dam; the said land is given & granted to the said Christopher Osgood and his heirs (by the Town of Billerica) so long as he and they shall maintain a good grist mill at said place, and when said mill ceases, the said land shall Return to the said town of Billerica."

EVANSTON, ILL.

The following action has interest in this connection:—

"March 27, 1710. It was voted, that the Town of Billerica will defend Mr. Christopher Osgood from bearing any charge of the damage in flowing Dr. Toothacher's meadow by his mill-dam, said Osgood engaging for himself & his sucksessors that the said stream that was granted to him shall return with the land to the said Town of Billerica, when the said mill ceaseth, which he holds said land and stream by: passed in the affirmative. Jonathan Bacon, Josiah Bacon, & Josiah Fassett entered their descent against y^e uoat above written."

"March 9, 1710-11. at a meeting of the proprietors on the east of Concord River, there was Granted to Dr. Roger Toothacher all the land on the east side of the highway leading to his house, that belonged to Farley's and Marshall's lots, for full Recompense and in Exchange for his meadow lot, flow'd by Mr. Osgood's mill."

Mr. Osgood built and maintained a grist-mill and saw-mill. He probably acquired by purchase the land on the north side, which was not included in the grant; for his son Christopher, in 1747, sold this to Joseph Ruggles with right to use water for a fulling-mill, when there was more than was needed for Osgood's mills. In 1748, Mr. Osgood's executor sold his mill privilege to Nicholas Sprake for £1500, who in turn sold to William Kidder. In 1759, John Carleton came from Bradford and purchased of Kidder what was then described as two-thirds of the privilege, Mr. Ruggles' right being recognized as one-third. Whether Ruggles sold to Carleton, I am not able to say, nor whether Thomas Richardson acquired his title of Carleton or of some later owner; but after the Revolution the mills were known as "Richardson's," and the Middlesex Canal Company purchased of him, 1794, March 25, the title, which was held for the use of the canal until 1851, September 22, when it was sold for $20,000 to Charles P. and Thomas Talbot, its present proprietors. These gentlemen were released, by vote of the town, 1864, March 7, from the obligation to maintain a grist-mill, contained in the Osgood grant, the town judging, no doubt correctly, that the use of the water power in their extensive manufacturing would be a greater public benefit than the grist-mill.

Prior to this action, the owners of the water power had prosecuted successfully before the Legislature a contest with the towns of Wayland, Sudbury, Concord, Bedford, and Carlisle, and the owners of meadows above on the river. The latter had petitioned the Legislature in 1859, claiming that the dam had been raised and was maintained at a height which damaged the meadows and reduced their value, and they asked for redress. A joint committee heard both parties at length, and the petitions, arguments, and documents were published in a report, (House Doc., No. 100, 1860). The result was not conclusive and, in 1861, commissioners were appointed by the Legislature, to investigate, make experiments, and determine whether the dam affected the meadows in the towns above. To this end, thirty-four stations were established along the river, and observations were carefully recorded for two months from 27 July, 1861, the effect of various heights of water at the dam being tested. The observations and report were published, (House Doc., No. 1, 1862). The general conclusion was that "the dam at North Billerica is not the only nor the chief cause of the wet state of the meadows above. The bars across the stream, especially the Fordway bar; the weeds filling the channel in many places, often for long distances; the discharge into the river during summer of water stored in reservoirs and mill-ponds upon the Sudbury and Assabet and their tributaries, in their combined effect do far more damage to the meadows than the Billerica dam." They say that the effect of the dam becomes inappreciable at Robbins bar, and its entire removal would not affect the upper meadows; that effectual relief could come to the meadows only by reducing the dam thirty-three inches or more, cutting out the Fordway and other bars, deepening the shallow places, straightening the channel at some points, and keeping the river free from weeds. This programme was more extensive than the Legislature felt itself called upon to undertake, especially as it was proved that similar trouble and complaint had been chronic from the first settlement of the country.

In 1811, Francis Faulkner came from Acton and began the manufacture of woolen goods. It was the second enterprise of this class in New England, Abraham Marland being the pioneer, who began at Andover in 1810. Mr. Faulkner soon purchased of the Canal Company the secondary water privilege, like that which had belonged to Joseph Ruggles. He could draw water until it was "three-quarters of an inch below the top of the dam and flash-boards," when he must close his gates, under a penalty of one dollar for every half-hour they were left open. By his thrift, skill, and enterprise, Mr. Faulkner made his business very successful, and transmitted it to his sons. The firm name is still "J. R. Faulkner & Co.," and his grandson, Mr. Richard Faulkner, is the agent now in charge of its business. From a modest beginning with a single set of cards the business has increased until eight sets are in use, employing seventy-two hands. The monthly pay-roll is about $2500.

Mr. Charles P. Talbot came to Billerica in 1839 and was soon joined by his brother Thomas in laying the foundations of their extensive and successful enterprise. The dyewood-mill was their earliest undertaking, for which they hired a building of the Canal Company. In 1844 they bought the saw-mill of Nathaniel Stearns, on the northeast side, and used it for the dyewood business until it was burned, in 1853. They then sold this site to Mr. Faulkner, having purchased the prior and larger rights of the Canal Company on the other side of the stream. There they rebuilt the dyewood-mill, which is still in vigorous operation; and, in 1857, they built their woollen-mill. This at first had eight sets of cards; six were added in 1870 and as many in 1880. Two hundred hands are now employed, and the monthly pay-roll is $7000. In 1849, the Messrs. Talbot began their chemical works, which were at first in a building near the depot, but removed later to their present location, sixty rods farther east, by the railroad. These now employ sixteen hands, and produce a daily average of five tons oil of vitriol, one ton of blue vitriol, and as much muriatic acid.

The next most important manufacturing enterprise was begun soon after 1830, in the south part of the town, by Jonathan Hill, Esq. Its specialty was, and still is, a useful machine for splitting leather, invented and patented by Samuel Parker, (see 19). This machine has had a very wide sale in this and in other countries, being almost indispensable in the manufacture of leather. The business was sold, in 1853, to Mr. Charles H. Hill, who continues it with much success. In 1875, the value of the work done was $28,000.

In the east part of the town where there had long been a saw-mill, on Content Brook, Theophilus Manning had also a grist-mill. He sold both, in 1825, to Dea. Aaron H. Patten, who began, in 1845, the manufacture of cabinet-work. The business grew to considerable proportions, and Pattenville became a definite local name in town.

The business reached a value of $20,000 to $30,000 per year, and was continued by his sons; but, in the financial depression of 1874-78, it suffered, and the shops were sold, in 1879, to Walter J. Pettingell, who has carried on business, making tanks, until the mill was burned, January, 1882.

Most recent is the growth of an extensive glue factory, which was commenced in 1867 by the Jaquith Brothers, near the old bridge of the Middlesex Turnpike. It has been quite prosperous, doing a business amounting to nearly $15,000 annually. For many years the Winnings maintained a saw-mill on the brook running from Winning's Pond; and there has long been a saw-mill, now owned by Mr. John O. Richardson, on Content Brook, near the railroad station at East Billerica.

CHAPTER XVIII.

BILLERICA IN THE REBELLION.

Of the part which this town took in the War of 1812, and in the Mexican War, the town and State archives contain no record. Probably Billerica had soldiers in both, but the number was small, and the scenes of action were too remote to leave any distinct impression. Far otherwise was it in the great Secession contest. When the life of the nation was assailed by the Southern uprising, the people all felt the blow and the danger, and the towns asserted their vital relations to the conflict as they did in the Revolutionary contest, to the disturbance of British councils. No one who experienced it can ever forget the thrill of patriotic emotion which went through the North when Sumter was assailed and President Lincoln called for fifty thousand volunteers to defend the Union. Public meetings, enlistments, and aid societies and labors engrossed the public mind. In Billerica the town hall was thrown open, the church bell, aided by the drum and an old ship-gun, sounding the call to meetings for action and organization. John A. Burrows and Charles N. Fletcher were the first soldiers mustered from Billerica. The number increased rapidly. Richardson's Light Infantry, of Lowell, afterwards the Seventh Light Battery, and the first three-years company in the field from Massachusetts, visited the town for a reception and a drill; as did a rifle company. Albert E. Farmer, who was taken prisoner at Bull Run and died in Richmond, was the first soldier from Billerica to fall. In 1862, after the defeat of McClellan, the call for troops was responded to by a town meeting and the offer of a bounty for enlistments. They were easily obtained, and the town's quota was mustered into the Thirty-Third Regiment. An interesting meeting was held in the town hall the night before their departure. A call for nine-months men followed, and after the supposed quota had been filled it was found that more men were needed, and town meetings and bounties were again called into requisition. In the summer of 1863 came the first draft, with but small results from this town. In the autumn efforts for volunteers were renewed, and a considerable number of veterans whose three-years term would expire in 1864 re-enlisted "for the war." These brave men, who after so long and severe a term of service were ready to rededicate themselves to the great work, should be held in especial honor, and their names can be traced in the list below. In the summer of 1864 came a second draft quite as meagre in results as the first, for only two men from Billerica were accepted. Other calls were filled by such volunteers as could be secured in town or beyond, and large bounties were paid.

The news of victory and peace filled the land with joy in the spring of 1865, and though a deep shadow followed with the assassination of the beloved Lincoln, the substantial fruits remained. The returning veterans were welcomed on the Fourth of July at a picnic in the grove by Concord River near the middle bridge. The exercises were hearty and impressive, including an address of welcome by Dr. Frank E. Bundy. In farther testimony to the valor of her soldiers and the memory of her dead, the town has erected an appropriate monument. It stands upon the Common, and a good picture of it is here given. It is a shaft of white granite, six feet square at the base and twenty-five feet high. The shaft is crowned with the figure of a soldier, in easy position, with musket at rest. In raised letters are inscribed the names "Petersburg," "Gettysburg," "Newbern," "Lookout Mountain," "Bull Run," "Chancellorsville," "Baton Rouge," and "Cedar Mountain." A carved eagle surmounts a shield, and upon the pedestal is the inscription: "Billerica to her heroes, in grateful recognition of that steadfastness of purpose, devotion to principle, loyalty to country; and trust in God, which enabled men to die for Liberty and Union." On the east and west sides are the names of twenty dead soldiers:—

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

Four other names will be found in the ensuing list which would properly have been inscribed with their comrades' upon the monument. It is due to them that they be honorably mentioned here:—

DAVIS, HIRAM E.
NEWBURY, HENRY

PERSONS, EDWARD H.
TUTTLE, CALVIN G.

The monument was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies and in the presence of a vast assemblage, Wednesday, 8 October, 1873. Hon. Thomas Talbot presided; the prayer of dedication was offered by Rev. Mr. Hussey, and an oration given by Col. Russel H. Conwell, of Boston. Governor Washburn, Hon. E. R. Hoar, of Concord, ex-Gov. Onslow Stearns, of New Hampshire, a son of Billerica, and others participated in the exercises, which were held in a mammoth tent south of the monument.

RECORD OF SOLDIERS AND SAILORS FROM BILLERICA IN THE WAR
OF REBELLION, 1861-65.

[NOTE.—The first column after name gives date of muster; the second, the company and regiment (of Massachusetts Volunteers, if not otherwise stated); the third, the end of service, which is by regular discharge, unless specified; and "dis." signifies disability. A star (*) denotes death; alone, death in battle, or in a few days; a star with "w." (*w.), death from wounds; and with "d." (*d.), death from disease contracted in the army. The length of service in months follows. In the last column, "Re." indicates a discharge and reenlistment; and in cases of promotion the rank is indicated; and where more than one promotion took place, the highest is given, others being implied. Two or three of these men from Billerica enlisted from other towns. This list of names has been prepared with great care by Mr. Franklin Jaquith. It is gathered primarily from the Town Records, with only such insertions as evidence demanded. Some other names, gleaned from the Adjutant-General's Records but not found in Town Records, are added in a supplementary list. That no errors or omissions will be found is too much to hope. For the arrangement and items of the table, Mr. Jaquith is not responsible.]

CHAPTER XIX.

THE MOTHER-TOWN OF BILLERICAY IN ENGLAND.

[The author is happy to give place in this chapter to Rev. Edward G. Porter, of Lexington, who, at his special request, paid a visit, in 1879, to Billericay, the mother-town, in England, and gives pleasant record of facts and impressions there gathered and likely to be of interest.]

It must always be an occasion of regret that so little is known of the origin of our New England towns. If the early settlers had imagined what interest would, in after years, gather around the humble beginnings of their enterprise, they would, no doubt, have left us a much fuller account of themselves and their movements. But they were unconsciously making history; and it is usually true that the men who make history are not the ones to write it. Many of our early town records have preserved the names of the original proprietors, but we look in vain for any extended account of their lives, the places they came from, the ships they sailed in, and the ports they arrived at. We know that Jonathan Danforth, Ralph Hill, John Parker, and William French, the early settlers of Billerica, came from the eastern counties of England; and there is reason to believe that Hill and French were from Billericay in Essex. But what the circumstances were which led them to join the colonists, what sacrifices they made in coming, what relatives they left behind, what incidents attended the long journey, can only be conjectured. We know, however, that, although the colonists of New England voluntarily left the land of their birth, they did not cease to love it. They brought with them as much of it as they could — its laws, its religion, its home-life. They were still British subjects, loyal to the crown. In proof of their affection for the mother-country, witness their almost universal practice of naming their new settlements after the places from which they had come. Thus we have Plymouth, Dorchester, Weymouth, Ipswich, Braintree, Sudbury, Billerica, and scores of other well-known English names reproduced on our soil. This fact alone will ever preserve to us the memory of our origin. As we are not ashamed of our forefathers, neither are we ashamed of the country from which they came. No better material for the founders of towns and states could be had than that which the Anglo-Saxon race furnished in the seventeenth century, and no truer men ever crossed the sea than those who came from the sturdy yeomanry of Old Essex.

It was just at the beginning of June — the loveliest season of all the year — when I paid a promised visit to Billericay. From London the journey is accomplished by rail on the Great Eastern line as far as Brentwood, (nineteen miles,) and then by the carriage road, a pleasant drive of five miles. Accustomed as we are in America to see nature in her ruder and less cultivated aspects, there is a great charm in the soft and finished landscape of England. No rough ledges assert their supremacy over the soil; no broken-down stone walls or worn-out fences mar the symmetry of the picture. The roads are well made and well kept. Heaps of hammered stone may be seen at intervals, piled up in regular order, for use upon the road as occasion may require. On either side, the hedge-rows, usually of hawthorn, furnish an agreeable border, shaded often by the overhanging oak, elm, and poplar. Daisies and primroses, sweet-scented lilacs and lilies of the valley, abound in great profusion in the spring and early summer. Wheat, clover, and beans are cultivated in large quantities in this section. Here and there a small stream is crossed by a stone bridge, with its graceful arch reflected in the water, where the cattle are often seen quietly standing in groups, and near by the sheep feeding in the rich, green pastures. Many of the houses, even of the humbler people, have plants tastefully arranged in boxes suspended from the window-sills. Ferneries and rockeries, both indoors and out, are very common. The ivy is everywhere seen twining over brick walls and stone porches, covering with its leafy mantle much that would otherwise be excessively plain. The road which we are following is the old highway from London to Chelmsford, Colchester, and the eastern counties. As Billericay is situated on an elevated plateau or ridge to the eastward, we leave the main road at a small hamlet called Shenfield, where there is a church, a shop, and two old taverns still bearing their ancient names of Green Dragon and The Eagle and Child.

From Shenfield the road passes through a rich, open, agricultural country, ascending gradually the almost imperceptible slope, on the crest of which Billericay is built. The situation is in many respects like that of its namesake in Massachusetts. Entering the town from the southwest, we pass along the main street, a broad, winding, macadamized thoroughfare, lined for the most part with neat, two-story, brick houses, standing close together, as is usually the case in European villages. The houses have evidently been built at very different periods. Some have the quaint gables and projecting upper stories of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, while others are more modern, a few being of quite recent construction. The village is well lighted with gas. Fifty years ago the population was about two thousand. The number has fallen off since then, owing to the loss of the silk-weaving and coachmaking interests, which for a long period contributed much to the prosperity of the place. The weekly market, instituted by Edward IV, 1476, is held on Tuesdays, when the village assumes a lively appearance, as it then becomes the centre of trade for the entire neighborhood. Great fairs are also held, by an ancient privilege, in August and October, chiefly for cattle. The principal business now is in "corn," as the English call it, i. e. grain, of which a large quantity is raised in this part of Essex. The manorial rights of Billericay are vested in the present Lord Petre, who holds a court-leet and baron annually in the spring, at the former of which the constables and other officers for the internal regulation of the town are appointed. Petty sessions are held at the town hall, over the market-house, on the first and third Tuesdays of each month.

The history of this large property, which includes not only the village of Billericay but a large section of country in its vicinity, is a curious illustration of the way in which great estates have been accumulated and entailed in England. The first Lord Petre, Sir William, lived three hundred years ago, and was wise enough in his generation to accommodate his loyalty, and his religion as well, to the rapid and contradictory changes that occurred under Henry VIII, Edward VI, Mary, and Elizabeth, in consequence of which many rich abbey lands and manors fell into his hands. This time-serving policy was so apparent, that Sir William was generally spoken of as the man who was "made of the willow and not of the oak." He was, however, a generous benefactor to Exeter College, Oxford; and his daughter, who married the famous Nicholas Wadham, became, with her husband, co-founder of Wadham College, Oxford. The old seat of the family was Ingatestone Hall, a few miles west of Billericay, near the line of the old Roman road. This hall is still standing, a venerable, irregular Elizabethan pile, covered with ivy, and surrounded by old gardens and fish-ponds. One of the rooms still contains some fine sixteenth century tapestry.¹ The modern residence of the family is at Thorndon Hall, a magnificent seat on a gentle eminence overlooking an extensive park, which can be seen from Billericay.²

The introduction of railroads was a blow to the ancient prosperity of Billericay. Being on high land, the town was left at a distance of several miles from the Great Eastern line. The brisk and profitable traffic which formerly passed directly through the town was thus diverted. The oldtime inns, such as the Crown, the White Hart, the Horse-Shoe, the Red Lion, the Bull, the Sun, the Checkers, and the White Lion, at which the coaches and teams stopped daily, may still be seen, though most of them are shorn of their glory, and the traveller looks in vain for the post-lads who used to be always ready dressed and spurred up for duty. From its situation at the crossing of several old roads, Billericay became a thoroughfare especially for the travel between Chelmsford and Horndon-on-the-hill, Tilbury and Gravesend. One of the most conspicuous buildings in the place is the work-house, or "Billericay Union," as it is called, a large modern structure, pleasantly located in the outskirts of the town, on the Chelmsford Road. The poor of several parishes in the vicinity are well cared for in this establishment, which is admirably managed under the direction of a board of guardians. On the ridge just outside the village, two venerable wind-mills form a prominent object in the landscape — remnants of the many that formerly lined the hills in the eastern counties. Some of the people still remember the old beacon of fagots that flashed the signal lights from this spot, on important occasions, over a good part of Essex. The view from here on a clear day is very extensive in all directions, particularly over the broad Thames valley and the Kentish hills beyond.

The origin of the name of Billericay is obscure. Morant, the old historian of Essex, states that, in 1343, it was called Beleanca, probably, he says, from the old word "balenga" or "banleuga," a precinct around a borough or manor; in French, "banlieue." Some learned antiquaries contend that the name is more likely to be derived from the two Latin words "Belleri-castra," the camp of Bellerus. Others think it may have come from certain Welsh words signifying the fort on the hill. The interpretation suggested by some one in this country, "villa rica," does not meet with favor in England, though it is not easy to see why not, since it is well known that "v" and "b" have often been used interchangeably. But whatever may have been the origin of the name, it is an indisputable fact that the town has been known by its present name, with slight variations, for many centuries. In 1395, allusion is made in the Pipe Roll to one "Thomas Ledere, traitor to the King, beheaded at Billerica." In a grant of Edward VI, A.D. 1551, the name is spelt both Billerica and Billerykay. In 1563, among the ecclesiastical accounts of Chelmsford are two entries of sums received from "Belyreca men for the hire of our garments," i.e. costumes for a miracle play. Among some tradesmen's tokens of the seventeenth century is one inscribed, "Abraham Thresher in Billericay, Essex, his half-penny, 1666."

The immediate neighborhood of Billericay exhibits memorials of nearly every important epoch in English history. In Norsey Wood, beyond the northern end of the village, are several large earthworks which are believed to be the defences of an ancient British village.

Numerous cinerary urns of rude workmanship, containing burnt bones and ashes, have been exhumed in the tumuli, or mounds, which have been recently opened.³ Two finely-shaped kelta, one of flint and the other of bronze, have been found near by.⁴ So far as excavations have gone, the whole neighborhood appears to be rich in relics of the Roman period, showing that this must have been a military post of considerable importance. Earthen vessels of various shapes and colors, tiles, beads, fibulae, specula, and especially coins have been found in large quantities. Some of the latter are finely preserved and bear the impress of the Emperors Hadrian, Germanicus, Constantine, Licinius, Nero, and Trajan, and of the Empresses Faustina and Helena.⁵ It is believed that the place called Blunt's Walls, near by, was a strong Roman fortress, which subsequently conferred upon the estate the appellation of walls or strongholds, as recorded in the grant made by Henry III to Robert de Blunt, who joined Simon de Montfort.

After the Roman came the Saxon and the Dane; and "Bellericastra" bore its share of the devastating changes which swept over England. Then came peace and prosperity in the train of Christianity, whose holy rites began to be celebrated by devoted missionaries. The original church for this parish was not in the present village of Billericay, but at Great Burghstead. (Burgsted, "Bursted Magna,") a mile and a half toward the south. This was probably near the residence of the Saxon thane who, embracing the Christian faith, assisted in building a rude wooden edifice for worship. Then came a small church of stone, which, soon after the overthrow of Harold, (A. D. 1066,) gave place to a large Norman structure, destined to be incorporated within the walls of a much finer building which we see standing there to-day. The heavy, machicolated stone tower is surmounted by a wooden spire and weather-cock. On one of the five bells hanging in the tower is inscribed, "Vox Augustini sonet in aure Dei. A. D. 1436." At different times, beautiful, decorated windows have been inserted in the thick stone walls, while the small Norman lancet-windows in the north aisle have been happily left untouched; a south aisle and chancel have been added; also a stone font, two piscinas, and various monumental tablets in memory of certain prominent persons in the parish. Over the north door, carved in Edwardian characters, are seen the words of the angelic salutation, "Ave Maria plena gratia," etc. The floor of the church is paved with brick; the pulpit is very high and reached by a flight of nine steps. (It ought to be said that the present incumbent does not attempt to preach from it.) The pews are nearly five feet high and are lined inside with oak green baize. Both the pulpit and the pews are unpainted. In the vestry the tithe-map is kept in a copper case and padlocked to the wall. The parish records, bound in vellum, cover a period of about three hundred years, and are kept in the custody of the minister. The earlier entries are not easily deciphered, unless the reader is an expert. The churchyard is peopled with the dead of Billerica for many centuries. The present sexton has buried over a thousand persons during the last twenty-five years. In the accompanying engraving, an ancient yew tree shades the south porch, a weather-beaten mass of oak beams, very much in need in repair.

The connection of Billerica with Hadleigh Castle should have brief notice. This castle, built by Hubert de Burgh in the reign of Henry III, was pulled down and rebuilt by Edward III. In the Public Record office there is a full account of the expenses incurred in the work. Among them are frequent entries for the carriage of goods and material from Billericay, but no entry of payment therefor. We remember that men were taken in those days upon the king's order and required to work upon his buildings, and we are not surprised at the widespread feeling of discontent which found expression in the great uprising of the people, led by Wat Tyler, of Essex, in 1381. As many as one hundred thousand rudely-armed men are said to have joined in this insurrection. The Essex division under the famous Jack Straw, after leaving London, deluded by the king's promises, retired to Billericay, where they intrenched themselves — a large army — in Norsey Wood, and sent messengers to the king, Richard II, demanding to know whether he had recalled, as reported, his letters of pardon. The king sent back a haughty answer, followed by troops under the Earl of Buckingham, who attacked the camp in Norsey Wood and completely routed it, slaying, it is said, as many as five hundred of the insurgents and taking many prisoners. The Pipe-Roll record shows that in the market-place of Billericay the headsman executed his fell craft upon many a miserable victim.*

In process of time the people of Billericay, finding it inconvenient to attend the parish church at Burgstead, obtained a free chapel (or chantry) in their own village, and this has since become the principal Anglican place of worship. It is a plain brick building with nothing very old about it except the tower, in which hangs an ancient bell, inscribed in Lombardic characters: “+ Galfridus : de : Hedemtun : me : fecit.” There is also a large and flourishing Congregational Church, which has been served by a long succession of able and devoted pastors, amongst whom may be mentioned the names of Thomas Jackson, Philip Davis (a pupil of Isaac Watts), and John Thornton, whose ministry of over forty years is distinguished by the excellent books which he wrote, and the eminent ministers who pursued their theological studies under his direction. The Rev. Alfred Kluht, the present pastor, is much esteemed for his character and usefulness.

Although Billericay cannot exactly boast of a Dick Whittington, a certain young man from the town did make his appearance in the great city of London about the middle of the fifteenth century, and, embarking in trade, he flourished, grew wealthy, received the honor of knighthood, and died Sir John Bayly, Lord Mayor of London. In 1531, John Tyrel, of Billericay, a tailor, appears among those who were apprehended for nonconformity. He was one of the early converts made by Hugh Latimer. During the terrible persecutions under Queen Mary, Billericay had the honor of furnishing two victims to swell the noble army of martyrs. One was Thomas, or "Worthie, Wattes," as he was called, a preacher who was repeatedly summoned before Bishop Bonner for proclaiming his religious views. In June, 1555, he was conveyed to Chelmsford, where he was burnt. There were five martyrs together, and having partaken of a meal they knelt down and prayed, after which Watts went and prayed privately by himself, and then came to his wife and six children and said: "Wife, and my good children, I must now depart from you. As the Lord hath given you to me, so I give you again unto the Lord, whom I charge you see you do obey and fear Him. . I shall anon, by God's grace, give my blood. Let not the murdering of God's saints cause you to relent, but take occasion thereby to be stronger in the Lord's quarrel. I doubt not He will be a merciful Father unto you." Two of his children offered to be burnt with him. After viewing the stake he spoke to Lord Rich, a fierce persecutor of the Protestants, and said: "My lord, beware! beware! unless you repent of this, God will avenge it. You are the cause of this my death." The other martyr from Billericay was a humble woman, Jane Horns, "a maid," who appeared before Bonner the following year and was burnt at Stratford.

* See paper Essex in Insurrection, 1381, by J. A. Marvel-Bayly, F. S. A.

Two other persons from Billericay during these trying times were sent up to Bonner—Jane, the wife of Hugh Potter, and James Harris, a stripling of seventeen years. The special crime with which the latter was charged was "not having come to his parish church by the space of one year or more." This he admitted. Bonner now commanded him to go at once to confession. To this he consented, but when he came to the priest he stood still and said nothing. "Why," quoth the priest, "sayest thou nothing?" "What shall I say?" said Harris. "Thou must confess thy sins," said the priest. "My sins," said he, "be so many that they cannot be numbered." With that the priest told Bonner what he had said, and he took the poor lad into his garden and there, with a rod gathered out of a cherry tree, "did most cruelly whip him." Not long after this, Thomas Brice, author of the "Poetical Register" of sufferers for conscience' sake in the reign of Mary, was driven out of the country, apparently from this neighborhood.

Near the close of the reign of Elizabeth, Timothy Okeley, who had succeeded John Okeley as vicar of Great Burghstead, was himself succeeded by William Pease, who remained in office about forty years. None of these ministers seem to have sympathized with evangelical religion; and Pease, in particular, made it uncomfortable for all his parishioners who ventured to differ from him. In March, 1619, he summoned several of them before the Archidiaconal Court for nonconformity. Among them were Solomon Prower and Christopher Martin, who were officially "monished" with the rest, and commanded to appear again in a month to be examined further. Prower and Martin fled to Leyden, where the latter became a member of the church organized by John Robinson. This Martin also victualled the Mayflower, in which he sailed with his wife, son, and servant,⁷ in 1620, for New England, giving Billericay the honorable distinction of having furnished four out of the one hundred and one passengers on that memorable voyage.⁸ They were followed by several other parishioners of Pease's, among whom, in 1635, are found the names of William Ruse, husbandman, and his wife Rebecca and their four children, Sarah, Maria, Samuel, and William. Ralph Hill and William French are supposed to have come about this time, and it was probably through their influence that the name of their English home was given to the new settlement in the Massachusetts Colony, to which they contributed so much in its early days.

The limits of this chapter will not allow me to follow the fortunes of the mother-town further. Enough, however, has been said to show that some of the most notable events in English history are connected with the name of Billerica, a name which, as this volume shows, New England is destined to transmit with equal honor, and, it may be, with equal fame.

⁷ Another account says, wife and two servants.

CHAPTER XX.

MISCELLANEOUS AND FINAL.

A FEW subjects not yet noticed must be grouped in a brief and summary way. Some of them might well have been expanded to chapters did our limits permit. It would be a subject of special interest, to gather the names and follow the fortunes of many who have gone from Billerica to homes in other towns and States. Many towns in all parts of New England and the regions beyond may trace the lines of families who have contributed to their prosperity in the register of Billerica. It suggests something on this point to call attention to the fact that all families bearing the names of Farley, Farmer, Jefts, Kidder, Kittredge, Pollard, Shed, and Toothaker, whose lines in this country go back to 1700, find their American progenitor in Billerica. Not less numerous or important are the branches here found of the Crosby, Danforth, French, Frost, Hill, Manning, Parker, Patten, Richardson, Rogers, Stearns, and Whiting families; while to enumerate the significant names of families simply less numerous would be to repeat most of the names from the pages of the Genealogical Register. Any just presentation of this subject would develop facts of which the town might be proud. She has never been populous; but her sons and daughters abroad are many.

The record of the legal profession in Billerica is brief, and I know of no names to be added to the list of 1855. (Bi-Centennial, p. 146.) William Crosby, 1800; Samuel Dexter; Timothy Farnham; Joseph Locke, 1801-33; Marshall Preston, about 1820-49; George H. Whitman, 1849. Of course, in the absence of lawyers who were such by profession, other well-informed citizens have often been called to aid their neighbors in legal matters. So much of this service devolved upon some of them, that practically it would be just to mention in this connection such names as Jonathan Danforth, Joseph Tompson, Oliver Whiting, Joshua Abbott, William Stickney.

Until 1824, the number of selectmen annually elected was five; except in the years 1720 and 1815-16, when three were chosen, and 1766, when the number is four. In the latter case, I suspect the omission of Joshua Abbot's name is accidental, as with this exception he holds the office continuously, 1757-80.

The first Post-Office in Billerica was established, 1797, October 7.² The Post-Masters have been:—

The population of the town at different periods is a subject of interest, but the material for estimates at first is scanty. In 1659, there were 25 families; four years later, the number had nearly doubled, judging from Mr. Whiting's "Rate," (p. 165 above); but for the twelve next years there was small increase, except as children multiplied in the homes already formed, (p. 113). The tax-list for 1679 (p. 193) has only 47 names, but that for 1688 has 73 names, showing that a new impulse had followed the anxieties of Philip's War, and, in spite of the Indian perils of the time, the progress continued, and, in 1707, the number of polls was 140.³

The tax-list for 1733 includes 228 names, but, in 1735, when Tewksbury had been taken out, the number was only 187, which, in 1755, had increased to 206. In 1765 a careful enumeration was made, showing for the first time the exact population, when this town had 1330. Only seven towns in Middlesex County then exceeded Billerica. In 1776 a census gave Billerica a population of 1500, and the tax-list for the same year contained 273 names. In 1778 there were 286 polls, but, in 1781, they had fallen to 271 polls, a decrease more than explained by the loss of the Carlisle names, in 1780. Assuming an equal number of polls and names on tax-list, and that the proportion of this number to the whole population in 1776 was the same in 1687, 1733, and 1755, we reach this estimate for the periods named, the decades after 1790 being supplied by the United States Censuses, and the years 1855, 1865, and 1875 by the State Censuses.

The fact is significant that after 1800 there was no increase for more than thirty years; and it seems to confirm the opinion that the Middlesex Canal, by preventing the use of the water power, exerted an unfavorable influence upon the progress of this town. A similar result has followed the deflection of the railroad line so far from the centre of the town.

A census taken in 1754 brings out the curious fact that Massachusetts had 2717 slaves. Of this number Billerica had eight, of whom five were females. In 1880, the census reports nine colored persons; but they are not slaves.

Other details of the last census are interesting,⁴ and I am glad to be able to give a summary of them.

The 2000 inhabitants of the town in June, 1880, were grouped in 449 families, who lived in 436 houses. There were 1662 over ten years of age, of whom 46 could not read and 56 could not write; of the latter, 51 were foreigners. The nativity stands thus: Native born, 1552; foreign, 448; born in Massachusetts, 1237.

Of the whole number there were 46 whose mothers only were foreign born; 525 whose fathers were born in Ireland, and of 485 the mothers were born there also; 246 whose fathers were born in Great Britain, and the mothers also of 191; 75 whose fathers were born in British America, and the mothers of 59. The whole number whose parents were both foreign born was 807; partly foreign born, 121. The ages are as follows:—

The State Census for 1875 gives the farming statistics in a more full and satisfactory form than the National Census, and from that source I gather the following:—

The value of the farm products is given, $150,652, which includes 2178 tons hay, 11,187 lbs. butter, 50 lbs. cheese, 19,279 gallons of cider, 2171 cords of wood, 5500 pairs of shoes, 17,558 bushels of apples, 550 of peaches, 645 of pears, 360 of plums, 68 of cherries, 1018 of tomatoes, 19,622 of potatoes, 1018 of onions, 1409 of peas, 1571 quarts of strawberries, 891 of blueberries, and 617 of blackberries; 10,150 lbs. of beef, 2182 lbs. of dressed chickens, 1389 of turkey, 220,835 gallons of milk, and 10,222 dozen of eggs; number of horses, 325, and of cows, 541. The 219 farms included 3948 acres of improved and 8751 acres of unimproved land. The value of all the land and buildings was $816,725; of all farm property, $921,724; the valuation of personal property; $651,662; of real estate, $971,761; or a total valuation of $1,623,423; total products, $1,439,262.

HENNETT LIBRARY.

DENNETT LIBRARY.

“The following list is the names of women who have applied to be registered to vote for school committee”; which a law recently enacted authorized them to do. As the historian is not a prophet, it is not his business to predict whether the number of women who desire this opportunity will increase or diminish.

LIBRARIES. Mr. Farmer mentions the first “Social Library” in Billerica instituted in 1772 and one of the earliest in Massachusetts, and a Second Social Library was incorporated in 1807. One of these libraries apparently became the property of the First Parish, and the other of a Ladies’ Sewing Society; and for many years they have been kept, practically united, in a room of the First Church, in the care of Miss Sarah Annable as librarian, who, in 1876, reported seven hundred volumes. These have now passed to the custody of the new library.

It had long been felt that the provision for the needs of the town in this respect was inadequate; and in 1880 the generous munificence of Mrs. Joshua Bennett laid the foundation for their better supply. The handsome building, of which we give a good illustration, standing just north of the First Church, has been erected at her expense and deeded to the Bennett Public Library Association; and her daughters, Mrs. Holden and Mrs. Warren, have contributed $2000 to its furnishing and the purchase of books, a good beginning for the growth which time may be expected to bring. A fee of five dollars is received for membership, and twenty-five dollars constitutes a life member of the association; but the use of books, without other privilege, is granted for the annual payment of one dollar. The building contains a library, with capacity for ten or twelve thousand volumes, which may be doubled by the use of alcoves; a reading-room, a committee-room, and a handsome entrance hall and cloak-room. The reading-room is ornamented with a wide fireplace and beautiful mantel of unique design, contributed by William W. Warren, Esq., and the front of the building is enriched by a fine rose-window, the gift of Mr. Joshua Holden. Mr. William H. Osborn, of New York, also gave the lot on which the library stands. The town owes much to Mrs. Bennett and her family for this timely and good foundation. It must exert a stimulating influence, and give a more generous culture to the coming generations who shall enjoy its privileges; and will contribute much to the prosperity and attractiveness of the town.

A similar service has been rendered at North Billerica by the Messrs. Talbot; although the library which they have founded is intended primarily for their own employées, and its management is in their hands; but its use for a small fee is open to all. They erected, in 1880, a building connected with their factory, shown in the illustration as a front wing, the second story of which is devoted to the library and reading-room. It is supplied with more than a thousand volumes, a number which will be increased and well used under the judicious care of the Talbot Library Association.

It is proper that record be made here of two historical incidents. In 1855 the town formally and fitly celebrated the two hundredth anniversary of its foundation. The Rev. Joseph Richardson, of Hingham, a loyal son of the town, gave a historical oration, which was published, with other proceedings of the day, in a valuable pamphlet. That celebration had no little influence in awakening and stimulating the interest in the early life of the town, which has found expression in its repeated later action, looking to the publication of this volume and providing for it.

A similar event was the celebration held, 1876, July 4. The centennial year of the United States naturally awakened renewed interest in historical subjects and led to many local commemorations. The Rev. Elias Nason responded effectively to an invitation of citizens to give a historical oration in Billerica; and the day will be long remembered by those who shared in the festivities in the beautiful grove southeast of the middle bridge. This oration also, with other record of the day, has been published.

Some of the Indian names frequently mentioned in this volume suggest an interesting question of their meaning. This question, rather than hazard conjectures, I have submitted to the Hon. J. H. Trumbull, of Hartford, Connecticut, the only living man who can read Eliot's Indian Bible, and who is recognized as the highest authority as to the meaning of Indian words. He writes under date, 5 May, 1882:—

•• Pawtucket signifies 'at the falls,' (see Indian Names in Connecticut, p. 49). Wamesit (Wamesut, Elliot) is 'at the bottom of the fall'; literally, 'at the going down.' So Elliot locates it: 'Wamesut . lyeth at the bottom of the River Merynuk.' (Brief Narrative, 1670.) Gookin says, 'where Concord river falleth into Merimack river.' The same name occurs in Rhode Island, as Wampmesnuck, below the falls on Pawtuxet River; and Woonascket is another derivative from the same root.

•• Shawshin has lost an initial syllable, or a single obscure consonant, probably m or n, (i. e. n'shan or m'shan); possibly some other sound. It has no meaning in the form in which it comes to us. If I were familiar with the topography of the township, I think the name would interpret itself; but, as I am not, I will not hazard a guess. Nor can I confidently give the signification of Naticook or Naticott." In a later note, he adds: "That there is any affinity between the name Connecticut and Naticot or Naticook is highly improbable. Such affinity can not be established unless it be shown that Naticot has lost an initial sound of Co, or Qu, or Que. Naticook apparently is nearly related to Natick, the name of several localities in New England; and perhaps to Nantucket, formerly written Natocho, etc." Nacook, the name of a brook in Duxtable, must also be akin.

The Psalmist sings of Jerusalem as "beautiful for situation," and the sons of Billerica, native or adopted, may justly speak her praise with similar enthusiasm. She has rivers, and ponds, and hills, with mountains in the distant background, affording a picturesque diversity of landscape. The Shawshin winds dreamily through its meadows on the east, and on the west is the Concord, much larger, but almost as sluggish, until it reaches the fordway and falls at North Billerica. West of the Concord is Broad meadow, on the north; Gilson Hill, with its fine outline in the centre, and the beautiful Winning's Pond in the south, flanked by highlands towards the river, which were early known as "Farley" Hill. Still farther southeast, in Carlisle, is the "long hill" of the fathers, with "long hill meadow," still partly in Billerica. East of the Shawshin, the head waters of Ipswich River are found, in Lubber's Brook, and Danforth's "Stop" Brook is south of the Woburn Road, but no highlands find room within the mile of breadth here belonging to Billerica. The central swell of land between the two rivers has southerly the picturesque Nutting's Pond, with Indian Hill on its northern side and on the east a plateau rising to the north, and, beyond a depression, terminating in Bare Hill. This hill is flanked by meadows, beyond which is the elevated ground on which the village is built, sloping towards the Concord, at the Corner. Fox Hill stands guard on the northeast of the village, descending rather abruptly to the lowlands and meadows along Fox Brook, on the northwest, and Content Brook below as it winds toward the Shawshin, and welcomes the "Little Content" on its way, the latter rising east of Fox Hill. Another considerable brook runs southeast from Fox Hill to the Shawshin;⁵ and Web's Brook, rising northeast of Bare Hill, pursues the same course.

The swelling ground on which the village stands, while not very high, is sufficiently elevated to give a wide view of the country in all directions. It may have interest to survey the scene in imagination from the tower of the First Church. The spire of the North Tewksbury church is very nearly north and may be our starting point. When the atmospheric conditions are very favorable, a rounded summit may be dimly seen, which is almost certainly Gunstock Mountain, south of Lake Winnepesaukee, and sixty-five miles distant. Mt. Washington is in the same direction, and if it were otherwise possible to see this monarch of the White Mountains Gunstock would hide it. About twelve degrees east is Patuckawa, in Deerfield, New Hampshire, thirty-nine miles distant, and passing as much farther we come to Prospect Hill, once a Billerica landmark and watch-tower in days of Indian warfare. Then the village of Tewksbury and State Alms-house, and a little farther east a summit is to be seen, when the conditions favor, which may be Agamenticus, fifty-four miles away. The village and seminary buildings at Andover are hidden by Fox Hill, but Holt's Hill, southeast of Andover, marks the locality. Then coming almost to the east point we reach the vast building of the Insane Asylum, at Danvers, and passing the east point as far come to the tower of the church in Wilmington, and, a little farther, Reading appears. A glimpse of the Woburn spires follows, and then the church in Burlington, but the Burlington highlands hide from view Bunker Hill Monument and the State House. Next come Arlington Heights and Blue Hill in Milton, Lexington, and Bedford, which marks the south point. Concord then shows its spires, and after a wider interval, about ten degrees south of west, Wachusett lifts its rounded and conspicuous summit. The spires of Westford cut the horizon as much north of west, and just beyond, in the distance, the singular head of Watatic, in Ashby, appears. Then we come to Gilson's Hill in the foreground, and, beyond and just south of it, Robin's Hill, in Chelmsford, and Kidder's Mountain, in New Ipswich, New Hampshire, thirty-four miles distant.

This brings us to the monarch of the whole circle, Monadnock, whose sharp and grand crest must not be mistaken for some lower height less than forty-seven miles away. Farther north are two conspicuous and fine summits, called, on the recent official map of New Hampshire, Pack-Monadnock, but popularly known as Temple and Peterborough mountains. North of the latter, and through a depression in the hills which gives the railroad a passage-way, a rounded summit may be occasionally seen with beautiful distinctness against the evening sky, which I suppose to be Bald Mountain, in Antrim. Lyndeborough Mountain is succeeded by Crochet Mountain, in Franconia, with its longer crest; then Jo English Hill and, near by, the village of Mont Vernon. Just beyond, a very distant summit may sometimes be seen, which is possibly Sunapee Mountain, sixty-eight miles distant, but probably some height not quite so far; and the circle is rounded by the Uncanoonucks, in Goffstown, with North Chelmsford and Lowell in the foreground.

The chief interest of such an itinerary, if it has any, will be to those who may have opportunity to follow it for themselves and fill in the outline with other details. But it will serve to suggest to any one the broad expanse of hills, and plains, and streams, over which the eye travels to the distant summits. These, clothed in their ever changing attire of sunshine and shadow, afford a panorama of peculiar beauty and grandeur. To watch the play of cloud and storm as they travel over such a range is instructive and delightful; while the sunshine, with its shadows and above all its sunsets, is surpassing. The praises of Andover sunsets have been sung more widely, as generations of students have come and feasted and gone out over the earth. But I have had opportunity to enjoy and study both, and I do not look to see, this side of the gates of pearl, any similar vision more indescribable in its beauty and glory than I have often witnessed in Billerica sunsets.

GENEALOGICAL REGISTER.

The following record of families is designed to include all names and dates occurring in the town records of births, marriages and deaths, prior to 1800. Since that date, records which have been furnished by families, continuations of earlier families, and such others as the compiler has been able to gather, are added, but with no attempt at completeness, which was for obvious reasons impracticable.

The three volumes of records of births, marriages and deaths before 1849, furnish the basis of this register. Additions and corrections have been gathered from various sources, of which the following should be mentioned:—

1. The tax-lists, which are consecutive, from 1733 to 1800, and other town records.
2. The record of baptisms of the First Church, extending from 1748 to 1834.
3. Probate records and the registry of deeds.
4. Inscriptions upon grave-stones.
5. Family records and the memories of individuals.
6. Family genealogies and histories of other towns.
7. The important collections of the New England Historical Genealogical Society, and the Register, which it has long published.

The plan of this record is simple, and the abbreviations used are common and self-explanatory. Successive families, bearing the same name, are numbered, and the same heavy-faced number is used after the name, where the person is previously mentioned as a child, and in connection with his marriage, elsewhere. When a son is afterwards mentioned as the father of a family, this reference figure following his name indicates the fact and the place where his family will be found, and if the figure does not follow a child's name, no family follows.

The completeness of such a record can be only approximate. The years of research, represented by Bond's Watertown and Wyman's Charlestown Genealogies, have not been at the command of this compiler, and he can only say that he has done the best he could, in the short time at his disposal. Some errors of the records and of previous explorers, he has corrected, and if he has not added more than his own share to the mistakes to which all such work is exposed, it is as much as he can hope for. Charity is a lesson which one must needs learn who delves in such records and labors, and it should not detract from the esteem, approaching reverence, in which Billerica properly holds the services of Jonathan Danforth, to note the fact that an error is found in his record of birth of the first son and the first daughter of the town. Trusting that this register will be found of value to the old town, to her sons and daughters abroad, and to genealogical investigators, the author commits his work to their charitable judgment.

CARRIER, Thomas, "vulgarly called Morgan," was in town, 1674, "23, 4^m, 1676. The Selectmen ordered the constable to give Notice to Thomas Carrier, alias Morgan, Welchman, that the town was not willing hee should abide here, as an inhabitant, and that he forthwith depart with his family, or give such security as shall be to the content of the Selectmen, on peril of 20^s. per week, while hee abide without leave, first had and obtained, w^{ch} is according to an ancient towne order amongst us." Very worthy men received such notice from some towns in later days. In 1677, November, he was assigned "with his man, John Levistone," to brush cutting in the south-east part of the town, and he took the "oath of fidelity," with twenty-four inhabitants, 1677-8, Feb. 4. If he was, at first, in the the south-east part of the town, his later residence was just beyond North Billerica, west of the road "to Winthrop's farm," (see "Grants," Vol. 2, pps. 44 and 53.) and next to John Rogers. Between 1684-90, he removed to Andover, and there his wife became fatally involved in the witchcraft tragedy, as elsewhere related. The welcome he met in Andover was not more cordial than he had found in Billerica. In 1690, his home was smitten with the small-pox, and the Selectmen notified his friends that the town was not responsible for aid, "for they took care, when first they came, to warn them out," and a few months later, poor Martha Carrier had a more peremptory 'warning out' from the Magistrates of Massachusetts, at Salem. She might well say the world was unfriendly. Afterwards, he removed to Connecticut, and with his family was among the pioneers of Colchester. The following extract from the records of that town embodies interesting traditions of this remarkable man: "Thomas Carrier had belonged to the body-guard of Charles 1st. of Great Britain, and was notorious for fleetness of foot, even after he was more than 100 years old. It is said that he killed the King of England. If so, he must have been the executioner of Charles 1st. A. D. 1648. It is said by his descendants that he was 113 years of age at the time of his death in 1735. He used to walk from Colchester to Glastonbury, carrying a sack of corn on his shoulders to be ground, walking very fast, and stopping but once, for the whole distance of 18 miles." Families bearing the name still live in the vicinity. He m. 1674, May 7, Martha, dau. of Andrew and Faith Allen, of Andover, sister of Dr. Roger Toothaker's wife. Her sister Hannah m. James Holt, and another sister m. Samuel Holt, of Andover, and she had brothers Andrew and John. Several of the family died of the small-pox in 1692. She was executed on gallows hill, Salem, 1692, Aug. 19. He died in Colchester, 1735, May 16. Traditions of his age differ. The N. E. Journal soon after his death says that he was 109 years old, and that he was not gray or bald, walked erect, and shortly before his death walked six miles. (Savage). Deputy Governor, 1679-92, except during Andros' usurpation, after which, only the prolonged life of the venerable Gov. Bradstreet prevented his election as Governor. He was President of the District of Maine, 1681-92; member of the Council, 1693-9; Judge of Superior Court, after 1692; Treasurer of Harvard College, 1650-69; Treasurer of Middlesex County, and from 1648-86, Recorder. The acknowledged leader of the party which resisted the arbitrary proceedings of the King, and effected the counter-revolution in Massachusetts. He d. 1699, Nov. 5, aged 77. His brother, Samuel, grad. H. C., 1643; was ordained colleague with John Elliot, as pastor at Roxbury; d. 1674. Nov. 19, leaving an eminent reputation for scholarship and piety. His wife was Mary, dau. of John Wilson, Boston's first pastor.

Our Jonathan Danforth was of worthy stock, and in view of his long life and many and varied services, he might be recognized as the father of the town. His marriage was the first on our records, though it seems to have taken place in Boston, as it was also recorded there. His skill as a surveyor, gave him employment far and wide. For forty years he probably surveyed every land grant in Billerica, and must have explored every nook and corner of the ancient town. His descriptions fill some 200 pages, in his own, very clear and handsome hand-writing, in the FARLEY. 1. George, was early in Woburn, and one of the first settlers of Shawshin. He bought the north-west lot of the Dudley farm, where he lived, near the Jaquith place. Probably Timothy was also his son, and b. in Woburn, who was killed by the Indians, at Brookfield, in 1673. Elizabeth was in Billerica in 1677, probably another daughter.

2. Caleb, son of George, 1, b. 1645, April 1; m. 1666, July 5, Rebecca Hill, dau. of Ralph, 1. After 1671, he lived in Woburn, until 1679, May 2, when he exchanged homesteads with William Hawlet, and returned to B. Later, he went to Roxbury, but came back and lived with Golden More. His wife d. 1669, March 29, and he m. 1669, Nov. 3, Lydia More, dau. of Golden, 1. Ch. Caleb, 4, b. 1667, June 28. Rebecca, b. 1668-9, March 10; m. Thomas Frost, 6. Lydia, b. 1670, Sept. 27; m. Zachary Shed, 4. Hannah, b. 1671, Oct. 18. Elnexer, 5, b. 1674, April 3. George, 6, b. 1677, July 30. Timothy, 7, b. 1680, July 20. Joseph, 8, b. 1683, April 6. Benjamin, 9, b. 1685-6, Feb. 8. Enoch, b. 1688, Dec. 21.

3. Samuel, b. 1654, March, "the last week," the first birth in town. This honor has been accorded to John Stearns, erroneously. Parker's original record, made at the time of his appointment as clerk, 1637. (Vol. I. Reverse, p. 2.) reads "Samuel Farley, the son of George Farley, and Christian, his wife, was borne in the last week of the 1th mo., 1654." Then after record of the birth of Mchittable Farley, and the marriage of John Trull, we find "John Sterne, the sonn of John Sterne and Sara, his wife, was borne the seconde week of May, 1654." In 1658, "a liste of all," to that date, was delivered to the Recorder, who was Thomas Danforth, of Cambridge, and his copy of this return, made by Parker, is preserved among the Probate Records. The list includes eleven births, arranged in chronological order, and the first name is Samuel Farley, giving also the name of the month, March, when he was born. The two prime authorities are thus concurrent and decisive.

It happens to be easy to trace to source of the error in this matter. When Jonathan Danforth became clerk, in 1664, he provided a new book for separate record of "Births, Marriages and Deaths," and to this volume transferred the records made by Parker. In this transcript, Parker's "1th mo." of Farley's birth, becomes "07^m," and makes it appear to come after Stearn's birth, in May. Danforth either made a mistake or a correction. If the latter were the fact, he would have made the case explicit, as he does in the previous entry of his own marriage which Parker had given as 1655, and Danforth changes plainly to 1654. The fact that he makes no similar correction of Farley's birth-date is proof that he saw no need of it, which indicates that the '7' was a slip of his pen and not a correction. This supposition is more credible than the other, which assumes that Parker's record made seven years earlier, and carefully returned to the recorder, was wrong in the number and name of month and the order of names; and it is the more credible, because in the transcript of the first female birth, Hannah Jeffs, the '14' becomes "04."

But Danforth's record has been the authority for later explorers. Very few would discover the earlier record of Parker, or if they did so, would notice the difference; and thus Farmer and others have given Farley's place to Stearns, repeating Danforth's error.

FARMER. 1. Edward. Our Record mentions the death of "Mrs. Isabella Wiswall, 21. 03. 1686," and John Farmer has added this "NOTE: Mrs. Isabella Wiswall, above mentioned, was wife of John Farmer, of Andley, in the county of Warwickshire, and came to this country with some of her children, after his death, which occurred prior to 1686. It appears from original papers, that she was sister to Rev. Thomas Mutton, of Wyke, and afterwards, of Brinklow, in England. She m. Mr. Thomas Wiswall, whence she acquired the name." Mr. Wiswall was ordained ruling elder, with John Elliot, Jun., teacher of the church in Newton, at its organization, 1684, July 20; d. 1683, Dec. 6.

Mr. Farmer came to Billerica prob. in 1671, as the birth of his son, John, is recorded Aug. 19, of that year. The eminent antiquary doubts this inference, but if he is correct in affirming an older sister Sarah, it would seem that Dunforth would have been as likely to record her birth, as that of John, if the latter did not occur in the town. Mr. Farmer was accepted as a citizen and granted a five acre privilege, 1672-3, March 24. (See Records, Vol. I, p. 107). His house-lot was on the east side of Long street, extending north to the "corner," and remained in possession of the family until a recent date. The house was a garrison, and an interesting incident is recorded in the chapter on Indian experiences. Mr. Farmer d. 1737, May 17, aged about 87; his wife, Mary, d. 1719, March 24, aged 77. (Ch. April 13. 1892

At the age of eleven, he went to live with his uncle, attending school and working for his board, and the district school was his only educational advantage. He spent two years, 1815-7, with another uncle in Salisbury, N. H., and was two or three years in a country store, and a short time in Charlestown. In 1824, he became Deputy Sheriff of Middlesex county, and settled in Lowell, holding this office till 1830. From this time he became active in the great business of staging, owning largely in the lines from Lowell to Concord, and others; and was a mail contractor between Boston and Montreal. In building the Ogdensburg railroad, he was a large contractor, and he became President of the Northern (N. H.) Railroad in 1831, but resigned on the death, in 1853, of his brother, with whom he was associated in extensive railroad contracts in Ohio, the management of which he then had to assume. About 1860, he became Agent of the Winnepesaukee Lake Cotton and Woolen Manufacturing Company, at Lake Village, N. H., and so remained for 12 years.

In Lowell he was active in 1826, in building the Central Bridge, and remained in the Company until it was made free by the city. He was one of the corporators in 1828, and a Director of the Old Lowell Bank, and later, of the Appleton Bank, of which he became President; also of the City Institution for Savings. In 1835, he was Representative in the Legislature; member of the Common Council, 1836-42; Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, 1841; County Commissioner, 1844-7; and Mayor, 1849-50. "From the early history of Lowell, his experience has been as successful, as honorable to himself and to his fellow-citizens, and his name in the years to come will occupy a prominent position in the history of our city."

In 1678, April 12, he was "appointed to inspect the young lads on y^e Sabbath days, those of them that sit below in y^e meeting house." HILL. 1. Ralph, was early at Plymouth. The tradition, in his family, that he came from Billerica is prob. and strengthened by the fact that there was a clergyman bearing the same name in Essex, 1645-69, (See David's Annals of Nonconformity in Essex, p. 440), whose wife was Persis —, and who had dau. Sarah bap. at Shalford, 1643, Aug. 10. In 1650, he was at Ridgwell, "a godly preaching minister;" afterwards, at Pattiswick, where he was 'ejected,' and in 1669, he is reported at Sheldon, "having a conventicle there." Our Ralph Hill "of Wellingsly," prob. a locality in Plymouth, sold 1643, Sept. 16, for £12, to Stephen Wood, house and garden, "upland at Wobery," 12 acres or thereabout; and we soon after find him in Woburn, where he was freeman, 1647; Selectman in 1649. He joined in the settlement of Shawshin as early as any; and lived on 'the farm,' a mile south-west of the village, his house standing a little west of the place where Mrs. Judkins, his descendant, now lives. In April, 1663, he gave the town one-half acre of land for a "buring place," and on the 29th, he died.—his own body, doubtless, the first to be laid in the old 'south' burying ground. Kimball lived, which he sold to John Poulter, and bought, 1656, May 16, of William Baker, the "farme" lot south of his father's. His house stood just north of Mrs. Boyden's place and was one of the 'garrisons' of 1675. It stood with its ancient windows, until after 1850. He m. 1660, Nov. 15, Martha Toothaker, the dau. of his step-mother, and d. 1695, April 9; his widow d. 1703-4, Jan. 4, aged about 69. Ch. KIDDER. 1. James, son of James, was b. 1638, in East Grinstead, Sussex, England. His ancestry has been traced in England, through six generations: James, his father; John; John; Richard; Richard; Richard. He m. Anna Moore, dau. of Elder Francis, of Cambridge, and his children before 1690, were b. there. He received in 1638, a grant of a ten acre lot in Billerica, but it was not located until 1639, and he did not occupy it till 1639. His house-lot is described: "thirty acres of land, more or less, lying upon the township, about 7th centre of it, his house-lot being part of it. It is bounded by John Rogers, sen., on 7th south; by land yet lying in common, on the east; and by the West street or highway which leads from lung street to 7th great river on 7th north; and by the great river on the west." Besides various meadow lots, he also had 20 acres on the plain beyond loes' meadow, and sixty acres south-east of Fox hill; 31 acres at the head of heath brook, (now in Tewksbury,) and other smaller lots. His house stood on the well-known lot where Gardner Parker lives. The place has remained in the family, John Parker having married, 1731, Abigail Kidder, dau. of Enoch.

James Kidder was Ensign in Capt. Danforth's military company, and his house was a garrison in 1675. He, himself, was placed in charge of the Indians at Wamesit, a position which indicates, in that critical period, the confidence reposed in his skill and courage. The conjecture is probable, that the hardships and exposure incident to this war, occasioned his death which took place, 1676, April 16. LANE, Job, was prob. from Rickmansworth, in Hertfordshire, where lands which he inherited were located. (N. E. H. and G. Reg., Vol. XVII, p. 266.) and in 1634, was 30 years old. That he was the Job Lane at Rehoboth, 1644, is not prob. He was a carpenter, and made payment for the 'Winthrop farm,' of 1500 acres, which he purchased in 1664, Aug. 2, for £230, by building a house in New London, Conn., for Fitz John Winthrop. He also built the great bridge in 1668. He owned a considerable estate in England, the rents of which he received during life, bequeathing the property to his son, John. He lived, first, in Malden, removing to Billerica probably in 1664, and after about 20 years residence, he returned to Malden, where he d. 1697, Aug. 23. His house was the only one beyond Ralph Hill's, towards Concord, until after 1675, when on account of his remote situation, he was permitted to garrison his own house. The place is probably that now occupied by Hiram Dutton, on the east side of the road, a few rods north from Huckin's street, and it is not impossible that the ancient house of Mr. Dutton is the same which he built. He bought, in Malden, the Coytmore Mill of Mrs. John Coggan, and bequeathed it to his son-in-law, Edward Sprague. Mrs. Coggan's first husband was Thomas Coytmore, and her second husband, Gov. John Winthrop, on whose account this lady had received the grant of 3000 acres at Wamesit. His first wife was Sarah —, who d. 1659, about May 19. He m. 1660, Sept., Anna, dau. of Rev. MANSPFIELD, John, and wife Rachel. Ch. Mary, b. 1736, Nov. 1. His name is on tax-list until 1786.

MARSHALL. 1. John, was granted a six acre lot, 1636-7, Feb. 4. We know not whence he came, or whose son he was. His age, at death, given by grave-stone, fixes his birth in 1632; much more probable than the statement of a deposition in the Mass. Archives, which makes him 15 years older. His first allotment was 20 acres, "lying partly on the township and partly on the commons; bounded by John Sheldon, north; by the commons, east; by Peter Bracket, south; by Mr. Whiting and William Patten, west; and a parcel of land reserved for y^e ministry, on y^e west, and partly on y^e south, and partly by East street on the south-west." The last bound is a reminiscence of the ancient Andover road, before it was changed in 1660, to its present place, and the location is east of the narrow gauge railroad line, as it runs south from the street. When the road was altered, he was allowed a private way across Sheldon's land, to reach it. He had later grants farther east, by loss' plain, and sold his first grant, above-described, to Dr. Samuel Frost, 1. The road running east, across loss' plain, was early known as 'Marshall's lane,' and the old house, in which the family long lived, is still standing on the east road, near the turning of this 'lane.' PARKER. A group of five Parkers appear in the early settlement of this vicinity. Abraham; Jacob; James. 2; John. 1, and Joseph. 8. That they were all brothers is not certain, but probable. Abraham, Jacob and John were brothers, and James, then of Groton, was administrator of Abraham's estate, as a brother might naturally be, and these two first appear in Woburn together. Abraham and Jacob lived and died in Chelmsford.

1. John. John deserves to be recognized among the foremost in the settlement of this town. He leased and lived upon the large farm belonging to the church in Cambridge, north of the Woburn road, on both sides Shawshin river. He was the first town clerk and the first collector of taxes; was the agent of the town in locating and disposing of the two large grants, one of 8000 acres sold to Brenton, and the proceeds used to extinguish Cambridge titles, and the other of 4000 acres, used variously for the town's benefit. He built the first meeting-house, and whatever the town had to do, Mr. Parker was very likely to do it. It is not known whence he came, or when he arrived in America. His wife was the widow of John Poulter, who was of Raleigh, in Essex, not far from Billerica. The wife of Jonathan Danforth was her daughter, but Mr. Parker had no children. He and Danforth call each other father-in-law and son-in-law, (Grants, p. 11, No. 3). He d. 1667, June 14, and if born in 1600, he was four years older than his wife. She m. 1674, April 16, Thomas Chamberlain, sen., of Chelmsford, and d. there, 1692-3, Feb. 8, aged 88. Mr. Parker's extensive enterprises left his estate insolvent, his creditors receiving 15 shillings and 6 pence per pound.

2. James was one of the three original purchasers of the "Dudley farm," and the only one who settled in town; he soon removed to Chelmsford, in 1638, selling his right here to Golden More; but in 1660, he joined the Groton settlement and was there, first selectman and leading citizen, dying 1701, aged 83. While in Billerica, he was agent for the heirs of the 'Winthrop' farm, and a letter written by him in 1654, in relation to it, is found in the "Winthrop papers" and quoted elsewhere.

3. Joseph had a township grant where the Baptist church stands. It was sold to George Willice and soon again to Daniel Shed. Mr. Parker settled in Chelmsford; afterwards in Groton, and was apparently one of the Dunstable petitioners in 1673.

4. Robert, of Cambridge, was one of the sub-purchasers of the Dudley farm, and had also a grant, afterwards exchanged, on the township. He never lived in town, but his oldest son, Benjamin, 5, lived here.

5. Benjamin, son of Robert, 4, b. 1636, June, was here in 1660. Besides his 'township' and 'farm' lots, he had a grant, south of Bare hill, where his house stood, west of the old Woburn road, as it ran over the top of the hill. In 1851-3, she published Bennet's Chronological Charts, and during Kenneth's visit to this country, she wrote The Crimes of the House of Austria. After her father's death, she remained at Perth Amboy two years in the celebrated school of Theodore Weld, then returned to Boston; has resided in Concord, 1838-68, and since 1878, with her brother Nathaniel; from 1868-78, her home was in Cambridge. In 1854, she published a School History of the United States, and in 1868, she wrote and delivered in several places a course of 20 lectures on Pre-Christian History; and the years 1867-8, were spent in Europe. In 1838, she became interested in Froebel's system of primary education, and in 1860, she undertook in Boston a Kinderergarten school. The farther study of this system was the special object of her visit to Europe. On her return in 1860, she published a Kindergarten Guide, revision of a work written in 1861. This was followed by Lectures on the same important subject and by a primer of Reading and Drawing, called After Kindergarten. What? which the author thinks one of her most important books. And she is publishing in 1880, Kindergarten papers in Dr. Barnard's Journal of Education. Some years of Miss Peabody's early life were spent in the family of Dr. Channing and she has published this year, Reminiscences of Dr. Channing, one of the most interesting and valuable contributions to the centennial memorial of that great man. The name of this daughter of Billerica is sure of a very honorable place in the educational history of our country.

2. Ebenezer was the nephew of Rev. Ebenezer Pemberton, D. D., whose father, Ebenezer, grad. H. C., 1691, and was the eminent pastor of the Old South Church, Boston, from 1700, Aug. 28, until his death, 1717, Feb. 13. The son grad. H. C., 1721; became pastor of the Wall-street church, in New York, 1727, Aug. 9; of the new brick church in Boston, 1734, March 6, and remained in office until his death, 1777, Sept. 16. He was a leading divine in the Presbyterian church, while in New York, and one of the few warm friends of Whitefield there; a trustee of the College of New Jersey. Several of his sermons were published. Our Ebenezer was educated by his uncle, and grad. at N. J. C., 1765. He had the valedictory at graduation, and was tutor at Princeton, 1769. His uncle desired that he should enter the ministry and in his will bequeathed his library to him on condition of his doing so. If he failed to comply, it was given to New Jersey College, because Harvard "hath a splendid library" and did not need it. Mr. Pemberton was a fine speaker, and "in taking the path he did, he robbed the pulpit of what seemed to be destined for one of its brightest ornaments;" but he adhered to his chosen vocation, and his life was devoted to classical instruction. Robert Troup and Col. Burr were among his pupils. He spent some years in Plainfield, Conn., and in 1786, succeeded Dr. Pearson as Principal of Phillips Academy at Andover, and during the eight years following did much to impart to that celebrated school the high character it has long borne. From Andover, he came to Billerica, and for about 20 years sustained a private Academy in which many young men were prepared for college. His last years were spent in Boston, where he d. 1835, June 23, aged 89. Yale, Dartmouth and Harvard Colleges gave him the honorary degree of A. M., and Alleghany College, that of LL D., in 1817. He was for some years primate of the Boston Association of Teachers, by whom he was highly esteemed. A good notice of Dr. P. may be found in Sprague's Annals, Vol. II, p. 415, written by Rev. Ephraim Abbot, who says he "was a little above the medium size, of dignified appearance; in manners, a gentleman of the old school; in conversation, he was pleasant, and had a fund of anecdote and useful remark; his passions were quick and strong, but were well controlled; his moral and religious feelings warm, and his emotions sometimes almost overpowering." He is mentioned in the Life of Charles Sumner as the instructor of his father, and in the Life of Josiah Quincy. Mr. Edmond Quincy says of Dr. P., "I well remember the handsome old man, and the beautiful picture of serene and honorable age which he presented, seeming in old world courtesy and costume to have stepped out of the last century into this; and the pride with which he spoke of the eminent men who had been his pupils, and especially of his having offered two Presidents, Kirkland and Quincy, to Harvard." While in Andover, he lived with a sister, his only surviving relative. After her death, he m. Miss Whitwell, who d. before him, and had three ch. who survived him. His father was Charles, from Epping, N. H.; his mother, Abigail Low, of Gloucester. For more than 40 years he followed the sea; a skillful sailor, soon rising to the rank of captain; widely and favorably known in commercial circles, in connection with the China trade. His favorite ship, the "Surprise," made the shortest passage on record from Shanghai to New York in 31 days. At the battle of Navarino, his ship was seized by the Turks, but recaptured by the English. In the Mexican War, he was employed transporting troops and supplies from New Orleans to Vera Cruz. In 1850, his name was brought into the debates of the U. S. Senate, in connection with his spirited and manly protests against the injustice of seizing free colored seamen in Charleston and other Southern ports. The Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, in the Senate, read, 1850, Sept. 11, a letter and statement of facts from Capt. Ranlett, and the discussion ensuing, was one of the most characteristic of that exciting period. [See Cong. Globe]. Naturally, when the War of the Rebellion came, he was zealous and active in raising volunteers and supporting the government. The last year of his life was particularly devoted to the enterprise of building the Narrow Gauge Railroad, of which he was president. ROGERS. 1. John, was freeman in Watertown, 1639, and Bond supposes that he was son of John, who d. there, 1674, Dec. 22, aged 80. The conjecture that he was a baker is strengthened by the fact that Billerica gave him a grant of several poles of land, "against his own dwelling-house, to set a kitchen-house on." This first grant in town was in 1656, and prob. he came here that year. It was eight-tenths of a single share. His first grant was 23 acres, "lying upon the township, his house-lot being included. It is bounded partly by common land, and partly by James Kidder, on the north, and by our great river on the west, by Jacob Brown, on the south, by Concord road, on the east." This was near where the town-house stands. He had another lot on the west side of long street, near the Deacon Spalding place; a lot in the Second Division, near Shawshin river, and one "in the common field, beyond content," or Tewksbury, with meadow-lots in the various divisions. SHELDON. 1. John was here in 1638, signing the Parker and Whiting agreements. Godfrey Sheldon of Scarborough, who d. in 1671, had sons John and William, who may be the Billerica brothers. William Sheldon, "1639.9, on condition that he build a mill to grind corn, within two years, is granted an 8 acre lot, to be free from former charges of the minister's house, until the year begins for y^e minister's maintenance, and he to begin in charges with us." Forty-four acres were laid out to him "on the side of fox hill joining to the highway by fox meadow corner, leading to the common beyond, his brother John Sheldon's land North, fox hill South, comans East and West." This grant was declared invalid, 1662, Nov., "the condition not being performed," and William did not settle here. The brothers complained of injustice, and John left the town for a time, living in Woburn. In 1674, March 30, the town "considering the unquietness of his spirit, and being willing he should again returne to the towne and settle upon his owne," granted to John Sheldon, 40 acres joining "to his owne lot at foxes farm," with some desired exchange of road, "provided, always, that the said John Sheldon gives under his hand, that this shall be a final end of all difference between William Sheldon and this town about mill or mills, and a final end of all complaints made by William and John Sheldon aforesaid, against this town, of wrong done to them by the town, in reference to lands and divisions." Mr. Sheldon's house stood South-East of the Andover road, probably on Mr. Kimball's land, his 27 acres being bounded "with East street West; John Marshall, now [i. e. in 1696, when the grant was transcribed.] Samuel Frost, South, and with the comans East and North." Marshall, who lived farther South-East, had a 'way' across his land to the road. In 1691, Nov. 30, "there is laid out unto John Sheldon, six acres of upland * lying the next to the east side of his own home lott. It lyeth seventy-four pole in length at that side next his lot, and fifty and eight pole in length on the east side next the commons, and eighteen pole, perpendicular in width; bounded by the town commons on the south-east and north-east; by the highway unto Sergt. Jacob French's house Northward, and in it there is also allowance of one rod wide next unto John Sheldon's home-lot afores^d, for to pass to the brick kills with carts, etc., though no open highway." He m. 1658-9, Feb. 1. Mary Tompson widow of Simon, of Woburn; d. 1690, May 24, aged 63. Ch. John, 2, b. 1660, April 24.

STEARNS. 1. John was one of the purchasers of the Dudley Farm and one of the earliest inhabitants of the town. His father, Isaac Stearns (or Stern, as the name at first was often spelled) was of Neyland, Suffolk, England, and came to America in 1630. He settled in Watertown, and his wife's name was Mary. Our John was b. there prob. in 1631. His elder sister Mary m. Isaac Learned, of Woburn, and after, of Chelmsford, who was one of the three original purchasers of Gov. Dudley's Farm, and John Stearns was in this way interested in the settlement. The land which he bought included fifty acres on the north-east corner of the farm, next the township; fifty acres in the south-west corner, bounded by the river and Winthrop Farm, and another fifty acres on the river. His house stood on the south side of Charnstaffe Lane, opposite Mr. Whiting's, and was the Dec. Whiting place of later years. He had an adjoining grant of land on the township, west of Mr. Whiting's and the Concord road. After his death this property passed to other hands, and the family history in the town has been identified with the other part of his purchase on the south-west corner of the Farm. The following grant to John Stearns, in 1680, shows where his house stood: "Granted more to him one small skirt of land, added to the land on which his house now stands; it begins at the east side of the pound, and so takes the just width of y^e pound, and joyneth to his owne land, and so it continueth that width unto the full extent of the most easterly corner of Mr. Dudley's farme, which land was granted to him in consideration of the country road being laid through that part of his land on which his house stands." The pound stood south of Charnstaffe Lane at the point where the Concord road, leaving the village, turns west upon it, and the bend in the lane caused by the grant of this strip to Mr. Stearns is conspicuous to this day. His township grant is thus described: "tenne acres, be it more or less, lying upon the township toward y^e south-west corner of y^e same, being bounded on y^e north by daniel sheed, according as y^e fence now stands, and on y^e west by Mr. Whiting, as y^e fence do now stand, and partly by George Farley, the line running from y^e corner of his fence to y^e other side of y^e Brooks to a great oak, and so running in y^e Township line crosse y^e brooke againe unto a stake standing even wth his east side fence, bounded by Mr. Whiting and y^e highway on the east; and there is this condition in this grant: y^e her, the said John Stearns, shall maintaine his fence about y^e said field at his owne charge for his owne security against cattle and swine, without requiring Mr. Whiting to bare any part of the same, and, so doing, he is to enjoy y^e said land for himself and his heirs forever." The district school and probably the Billerica Academy afforded the only advantages for education which he enjoyed. At seventeen he was a clerk in Boston, and in 1830 he joined his brother John in Virginia, and was employed in the engineering department of the construction of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal. He then became interested with his brother in contracts for building various railroads around Philadelphia and Baltimore, and in 1837 he returned to New England to continue, as long as he lived, a remarkably successful railroad career. He completed the Nashua & Lowell Railroad in 1838, and remained its superintendent until 1845, when he became agent for building the Northern Railroad from Concord to West Lebanon, N. H. As manager and president he remained in connection with that road until his death. He was also Superintendent of the Vermont Central Railroad, 1853-5. Director of the Ogdensburg Railroad, and of the Nashua & Lowell Railroad, 1857-75. In 1866 he became President of the Old Colony and Newport Railway, and his administration of its affairs for 11 years was remarkably successful. And in 1874 he became also President of the Concord Railroad. In all these positions his sagacity, ability and integrity were conspicuous, and commanded the confidence of the public. His comprehensive grasp of broad questions, and his capacity for details were alike marked. In 1862 he was elected a member of the New Hampshire Senate, and in 1863 became its president. Six years later he was chosen Governor of New Hampshire, and reelected in 1870, though his consent to be again a candidate was reluctantly given. His administration of the affairs of the state was practical, non-partisan, and highly successful, particularly so of its finances. He m. 1845, June 26, Mary A. Holbrook, dau. of Hon. He came to Billerica in 1839, having previously been engaged in the manufacture of broadcloths in Williamsburg. He now lives in Lowell. Of his three ch., Julian was born in Billerica, 1842, May 27.

3. Thomas, son of Charles, 1, b. 1818, Sept. 7. A good portrait of this gentleman is given as the appropriate frontispiece of this volume. He is the first citizen of the town who has been honored by an election to the Chief Magistracy of the Commonwealth, and while notice of him as a Billerica manufacturer belongs to the chapter on that subject, some account of his more public relations may properly be given here.

Mr. Talbot's widowed mother was a woman of character and energy. In 1825 she removed to Northampton, Mass., seeking employment for her large family in the woolen mills of that beautiful town. But opportunity to attend the public schools was carefully secured to her children, and the future governor was fortunate enough to spend two winter terms in Cummington Academy, 1838 and 1839. He had previously been in the mill of his brothers at Williamsburg, and in the spring of 1839 he was employed as finisher of broadcloth in the Pontoosuc Mills at Pittsfield. But his brother Charles who came to Billerica in 1839, December, invited Thomas to join him, and the brothers soon united as C. P. Talbot & Co., a firm still pursuing a most honorable and successful career. Mr. Talbot was chosen Representative in 1851, and the next year he was a member of the Convention chosen to revise the Constitution, and in both positions showed the sagacity and firmness which have always distinguished him. From 1864 to 1869 he was a member of the Executive Council and made his mark as a practical and wise counsellor on public matters. In 1872 he was elected Lieutenant-Governor, and was reelected in 1873. On the death of Senator Sumner in March, 1874, Governor Washburn was elected to the vacancy in the United States Senate, and Mr. Talbot became acting-governor. To the duties of this position he came with broad views and firm convictions, but no partisan or personal narrowness. This was illustrated in his action on two important public measures. The Legislature passed a bill repealing the law prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquors, and great pressure was brought to bear on the governor to give the bill his approval. The leaders of the republican party urged that it would be impolitic to commit the executive to the prohibitory platform, against the action of the legislature, and would endanger their chances of success at the polls. But Mr. Talbot had always been the foe of the rum traffic, and a prohibitionist on principle before he was governor, and such motives of policy did not move him. His ringing veto message was the utterance of a straight-forward man, and became at once a most important contribution to the literature of the temperance cause. On the other hand, when a bill enacting the temperance law was presented to him for signature, the manufacturing interests of the state, with which he was so intimately allied, urged and counted confidently upon his veto, and his approval exposed him to an active opposition. These influences united with a reaction in national politics by which the republican party lost its majority in the House of Representatives; and, although receiving the almost unanimous re-nomination of his party, Mr. Talbot failed by a few votes of re-election. In 1875 he declined, though strongly urged, to be again a candidate, and Hon. Alexander H. Rice was chosen. He held the office three years, and in 1878 Mr. Talbot received the unanimous nomination of the Republican Convention again for the place. The campaign of that year took an unusual and exciting cast from the independent candidacy of Gen. Benjamin F. Butler, of Lowell, long a democrat and later a republican, but on a very full vote Mr. Talbot was elected. His message on assuming the office again was a very practical state paper, and significant in giving voice to the popular demand for retrenchment in the public expenditures. His administration commended itself to the popular judgment by his manly and business qualities, and he would have been re-nominated and reflected if he had not early announced that he would not be a candidate. Mr. Talbot has never been an office-seeker, but office and honor have sought him as a man who could be trusted. He has been Director and President of the Boston & Lowell Railroad; State Director of the Boston & Albany Railroad, and the care of trust funds has often been committed to his hands. He is a Trustee of the Clarke Institution for Deaf Mutes at Northampton, and of the Howe School. He is a member of the Historical Committee, under whose charge this volume has been prepared, and has taken active and helpful interest in it. TAY. 1. William was granted "a ten-acre lot or one single share," 1636, November. The first location of a part of this grant was made 1638, December, as follows: "fifty and six acres" (or one-half of his upland) "be it more or less, his house standing upon part of the same, bounded by y^e country road on y^e East; by the comons (partly East) and South; and North, partly by y^e comons, partly by will^m Chamberline and will^m French, partly by Henry Jeiffs, and on y^e West and North-West partly by comons and partly by Henry Jeiffs; also what meadow lyeth in y^e said land is granted to him for one acre and a quarter, in part of his first division of meadow." This place was west of Bare Hill, and was near if not exactly where Dr. Noyes lives. Mr. Tay was in Boston as early as 1643, a distiller there. He was town clerk, 1664. As his name does not appear on the garrison-list of 1675, it seems probable that he fled to Boston before the Indian alarms of that year, and never returned, as he died there. I am indebted to Savage for his family record. He m. 1644, Sept. 14, Grace Newell, of Roxbury. His will was proved 1683, April 12, and gives his age 72. The useful well in the Fox Hill cemetery was bored at his expense, and he left to the town a legacy of $1000 for the care of that cemetery.

TOMPSON. 1. Joseph was from Braintree, son of Rev. William Thompson, pastor of the church there; b. 1640, May 1. His elder brother, William, a student at Harvard College with Mr. Whiting, was a few years missionary among the Pequot Indians at New London, and died early. Mr. Tompson lived in the southeast part of the village. His house-lot is ‘ell’ of the Rogers house at the place where the canal leaves the river. In 1664, he exchanged about five acres which lay west of the road for twelve acres “lying on both sides, and taking in that long spang of meadow up the pine plaine, on this side the comon feild, on the East side of it.” This exchange was doubtless made to secure to the town the mill privilege for future use. He seems to have practised medicine, and was called ‘doctor’ at Salem, but our Records do not give the title. In 1682-3, March 12, at a Selectmen’s meeting, “Roger Toothaker, being sent for and spoken unto concerning many things amiss in his family, he desired they would exercise a little more patience towards him, and he promised amendm^{nt}.” But the amendment was not thorough; and 1684, Dec. 13, the Selectmen wrote a letter to him, prob. at Salem, where he seems to have gone, “to come for his wife y^e middle of next week, and that they would help away with his family—in case of need and help fit them out.” There was “need” enough, but he did not heed it. His wife received charitable aid, and two of his children were put out by the Selectmen to Joseph Walker and Edward Farmer. When the witchcraft trials came, in which his wife’s sister, Martha Carrier, suffered, he appears as a ready witness. Abatement of his tax as “deceased” was made 1694, July. TRULL. 1. John was granted a six-acre lot in 1638. It is reported that he had been previously a tenant of Captain Gookin’s farm on Shawshin river and Vine brook, and that he had lived in the Shawshin house. His home grant was “sixteen acres,” more or less, “lying on y^e North-East angle of y^e Township, part of which is his house-lot. Bounded by Golden More and John Poulter on y^e South, and y^e commons elsewhere surrounding.” This was in 1775 the Colonel Bridge place, at the end of a lane leading east from Long street, now owned by Mrs. Farmer. 2. Samuel, perhaps a brother of John, was granted 1661, Nov. 19, "liberty to fall timber on y^e commons, to build himself a house and to fence in his land, and to keep a cow or two and one or two swine upon the commons; and they do grant No further Town Priviledges at the present." In 1664, March 28, "They have granted more to him: one slip of land, lying on y^e South of his own land w^{ch} he purchased at the great common field, to rune from y^e highway (upon y^e great plaine, leading to y^e common field) Westward unto the brook, which is at y^e South-West corner of that great common field, which land is granted him to set his house upon." This brook is west of the Roman Catholic church, and Trull's house was near. In 1667 he received "priviledge upon our town commons for y^e futur, and in all lands which are not yet divided nor agreed upon for division before this day, to y^e proportion of one-quarter of a ten-acre lot." He m. 1668, June 15, Ann, the widow of William Hale, who lived just south of the Great Bridge near by, and had d. May 20. She d. without issue, 1692, April 21, and a second wife d. 1712, May 16. Mr. Trull did not prosper, and became a ward of the town. At a meeting, 1701, Aug. 19, the town instructed the Selectmen "to build a logg-house for Samuel Trull, sen., upon the land that the town hath granted unto him to improve for his life-time; the building to be eighteen foot long and fourteen foot wide from outside to outside, and the joice to ly upon the plate and to be boarded up and down, and a small cellar; the chimney to be within the eighteen foot, and to se unto the finishing thereof; and notice to be given unto persons to labour therein, and such who shall labour upon it to have credit, and the cost of it to be given in to be put into the town-rate, to be equally borne by the inhabitanee." When he d. 1714, May 17, the town distributed his effects and buried him, and, generously, as appears by this charge, "paid to John Blanchard, 13s for a barrel of cider for Sam^l Trull's funeral." They also paid 4s for two pairs of gloves, and 6s, 6d for his coffin.

WHITING. 1. Rev. Samuel, the first pastor of Billerica, was the oldest son of Rev. Samuel and Elizabeth (St. John) Whiting, and born 1633, March 25, in Skirbeck, very near Boston, in Lincolnshire, England. His father came to America in 1636, and became the pastor of Lynn, Nov. 8. He d. 1679, Dec. 11, aged 82. Our Samuel graduated at Harvard College in 1653. His class was the largest graduated before 1690, and included some of the names most eminent in the colony; and among them was Thomas Crosby, elder brother of Simon so long his parishioner in Billerica. The subject of Mr. Whiting's thesis at graduation was the question, "An detur Maximum et Minimum in Natura?" which he affirmed. He remained at college a year after graduating, and the fact is noted as peculiar that his quarter bills were almost always paid "by silver." He was admitted a freeman, 1656, May 11; and in 1658, as elsewhere related, he came to Billerica, to fill a large and honorable place in the history of the town. On his settlement, the town granted Mr. Whiting "one tenne-acre lott, or single share," with all town privileges. His house-lot was "twenty acres lying upon the Towneship, on the South side of it, upon part of which his house now standeth. It is bounded by George Willce on the North, the brook highway on the East, by Charnstaffe lane on the South, by John Sternes' feld on the West; also, a highway passing crosse it against the pound, being four pole wide." This highway was and is the Concord road, and Mr. Whiting's house stood north of Charnstaffe lane just where it descends to the brook, in the field now owned by Miss Susan Hill. He had another small grant near, "one acre, more or less, lying on the West side of John Sternes' feld, bounded by the feld on the East of it, by the River West, by George Willce North, by George Harley South, a highway on it," etc. This highway was Charnstaffe; and in 1685 we find this record: "Granted more to him, that part of y^e highway called Charnstaffe lane, which lyeth Westward of y^e country road to

Henry Whiting, published a volume, Revolutionary Orders of General Washington, consisting of selections from papers preserved by Gen. John Whiting, while acting as adjutant of the second regiment of the Massachusetts line. He had preserved most or all of the orders which it was his duty to record, and from these the volume is made up. He belonged to the company of minute-men in Billerica, 1775, and with his father and brother shared in the running fight, as the British retreated from Concord. He joined the army at Cambridge; was under Arnold on Lake Champlain in 1776; and with Gates through 1777, receiving a commission that year. Samuel Whiting

12. Samuel, son of Samuel, 10, b. 1758, Dec. 12. Of this good man we give a portrait believed by his grandson, Dr. John S. Whiting, who has kindly furnished it, to be a very good one. Dr. Whiting also contributes this sketch, which affords so pleasant a picture of Deacon Whiting and his times, that it must be given nearly in full. He says: "In 1840 I went to school in Billerica and lived with my grandfather. * He was then 82 years old, somewhat infirm, but able to attend to his usual round of duties. He went to church regularly twice a Sunday, locking up the house, and taking his whole family with him; he riding with one of his daughters in his 'one-hoss shay'; the others walking after with me and the foot-stoven.

It was in that winter, I think, that he resigned his deaconship. After communion, when this fact was announced, Mr. Preston moved that the church give him a vote of thanks for his 40 years of duty, during which time he had not been absent a single service; which motion, in a few appreciative remarks, my grandfather deprecated as unusual and improper, whereupon it was withdrawn. In 1776 he was drafted into the army and served about eight months as a private and sergeant, acting as clerk of his company. He was at the battle of Stillwater and at the taking of Burgoyne. I delight in recalling his narrative of incidents of the campaign as drawn from him by the questions of neighbors and friends, some of whom sat around his walnut fire nearly every winter evening. I well remember a boyish question of mine: 'Grandfather, did you ever shoot a red-coat?' and the very solemn answer, which I did not then understand: 'I hope not.' Also, I recall how with moistened eye he told of taking deliberate aim and firing at that famous scout, Harvey Birch, the hero of Cooper's 'Spy,' but happily without effect. How he managed to get an education, I never knew, but he was well versed in mathematical science,—I knew of his calculating eclipses,—and became Mr. Pemberton's assistant at his academy as instructor in the English branches. One of his pupils, Hon. Thomas G. Cary, spoke of him at the Bi-Centennial, in 1855, as 'that brave old soldier of the Revolution and servant of God, Deacon Whiting, who had practised the hand-writing which he taught us, in making out rolls and returns with benumbed fingers on the drum-head.' Like his ancestor, Jonathan Danforth, he became a surveyor, and many of his plans of Billerica farms are now preserved among the records at East Cambridge. I have in my possession a barometer, marked as 'made by W. & S. Jones, No. 35, Holbron, London,' which hung beside the tall clock in the family room for I don't know how many years before my time. I doubt if there are many older in the country still in 'going order.' There was also an improvised sun-dial upon the window-sill arranged scientifically so as to indicate 12 o'clock M. at any season of the year. For him I had and have the greatest veneration as a thoroughly good man, living a simple and blameless life, and doing kindness wherever it was in his power. Not less do I revere the sainted name of his eldest daughter, my aunt Harriet, then a maiden lady of fifty-one, and the good angel, it seemed to me, of the whole town. Were any seriously ill, she was always ready and first called to 'watch' with them and furnish those little comforts and delicacies which sick people are supposed to require; and if any died, it was she who was expected to prepare tenderly the remains for the last solemn rites.

The actual money paid for living by a family of such few wants and simple tastes as my grandfather's could have been little compared with what are now considered necessary expenses. Flour, coffee, tea, taxes, church-rates, and clothing, I believe, were the chief items which were paid for in money. I do not recall any visits to dress-makers or tailors, and much of the bedding was of home manufacture, made, perhaps, in the house a half century before. The table was largely supplied from the farm. A hog was killed in the fall and prepared for present and future use; a calf in the spring, and fowl and turkeys, as occasion required, which, with milk and eggs, furnished the animal food, while the common vegetables, with Indian and rye meal, cranberries, barberries, shagbarks, apples, and a few other fruits, supplied a sufficient variety to make the changes of one's daily food conducive to good health. In my time at Billerica there was no settled clergyman, the pulpit being supplied every Sunday by candidates, who always, as I recollect, dined at my grandfather's, invariably on baked beans, baked potatoes, brown bread, suet pudding, and apples, which I was led to believe, by the praises put upon it by the polite clergymen, was a repast worthy of a king. But I have rambled enough. Of my grandfather's personal appearance I cannot

FAMILY NAMES OCCURRING IN BILLERICA BEFORE 1700.

The following list gives the name of the first settler, bearing the name, and the date of his first known residence in town. In a few cases, notably those of Brown, Foster, and Parker, the line has not been continuous. Of the eighty-three families of the 17th century, the following are now represented in town by descendants who bear the name; Baldwin, Crosby, Farmer, Frost, Hill, Kittredge, Manning, Patten, Richardson, Rogers, Shed, Stearns, and Whiting. The families of Danforth and Pollard have also female representatives. And if the inquiry be extended, as is proper, to the bounds of ancient Billerica, we may add the names of Bacon, Brown, Fitch, French, Kidder, Lane, Levistone, Marshall, Page, and Trull. With these additions, it appears that twenty-five families, or almost one in three remain, after two hundred years, in the ancient bounds of the town.

CROSBY. 5. Josiah, was, I think, the lieutenant and captain of that name in the Louisburg expedition, 1745. It is clear from the records that this military officer could not have been the son (Josiah, 14) who died in town about 1743, but was not, as the text suggests, "killed by the Indians," and his son Josiah was only fourteen years old in 1745. But the first Josiah, 5, had been long known in the Records as "Sergeant," and thus, if he did go to the war, would be likely to have a commission; and, although he describes himself as feeble, in his will, in 1743, he may have recovered from an illness, and yielded, at sixty-seven, to the impulses of his military career and the call of Pyperrell, and gone to hardships and perils which proved fatal to the veteran.

IN MEMORIAM.

As these pages are passing the press, the death is reported, at his home in Zumbrota, Minnesota, 1882, Nov. 1, of the Rev. JESSE G. D. STEARNS, recently, for twenty-four years, the pastor, honored and beloved, of the Congregational Church in Billerica. It will be proper and grateful to the feelings of the people of the town, if I add here a word, now that his own eye will not rest upon it, in emphatic testimony to his scholarship and piety, to his fidelity as a pastor, and value as a citizen. His record may be found above. (Gen. Register, p. 141.) Billerica will hold his memory in honor. Not the members of his own spiritual flock only, but those of other folds, and all the citizens of the town, esteemed him. He commended himself to every man's conscience in the sight of God; and while he held firmly the doctrines he preached, he held them in so generous a charity, and so large a sympathy with all men, that no one could withhold respect. He was a scholar of exceptional quality and diligence, and his preaching was thoughtful and instructive; but a rare modesty and sensitiveness in the presence of others, impaired somewhat his effectiveness as a preacher. In 1864 he was a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, and for a number of years had charge of the schools of the town. After leaving Billerica, he served nine years in Clearwater, Minnesota. He then retired from active pastoral labor, and made for himself a pleasant home in Zumbrota. In 1877 he published a volume of 287 pps. on The Meaning and Power of Baptism, the outgrowth of a sermon and a review which had been previously issued.

On the last day of October, 1881, his excellent wife was taken from him by death. A year and a day the good man lingered in his loneliness, and then suddenly, and joyfully, we may be sure, rejoined her in the home not made with hands.

NOTE.—I add here the substance of a note, omitted by oversight in a more suitable place, referring to certain interesting early surveys of portions of Billerica.

The Massachusetts Historical Society has a survey of the town, which was placed in its archives by John Farmer. It was made by Jonathan Danforth, about 1660, contains no highways or houses, but gives streams, and a few of the larger farm lines. This is the ancient plan referred to in the record of Jonathan Danforth, (page 35.) I am happy to here to recall the remark there made as to its disappearance.

Peter E. Vose, Esq., of Dennyville, Me., has kindly furnished me with a survey of Mr. Daniel's farms, (the Church and Champney farms), which came into his hands from the Cooper estate, Thomas Cooper having been attorney of Mr. Daniel, in the management and sale of his farms, after his return to England in 1680. This survey is of much interest, and shows that land speculation is not modern. I propose to deposit it in the care of the Historical Society. A good copy will be placed in the Bennett Library.

Mr. Merton Simonds, of Bedford, has favored me with the use of papers from the estate of an uncle, who was a surveyor. They include a chart of Billerica, drawn, as internal evidence shows, about 1760, which gives the important minor farm lines in the Billerica portion of that town. This, with Mr. Simonds' approval, will also be placed in the care of the Historical Society. And in the office of the Secretary of State are preserved Danforth's survey of the Naticott grant of 8000 acres to Billerica, and the survey, accompanying the report of the General Court's Committee in 1701, by which the controversy with Concord and Chelmsford was adjusted.
